Let me make clear, that I do not imply that the truths he taught had never been adumbrated before. There were "enlightened" ones before Gautama. There was Akenhaton in Egypt, whose greatness as a religious reformer we are only discovering in our own age. There was Moses, the Prophet of Israel, with his descendants. There was Zoroaster in Persia. There were the moral teachers in early Greece. Laotze, in China, independently discovered much that Gautama revealed. But their inspiration was on the whole somewhat local. They did not penetrate permanently and vitally the masses of mankind. The truths they foreshadowed did not reach down to the common people—the slave, the outcaste, the savage, the aboriginal. They did not affect millions of the human race, far from the place of the Prophet's birth and from the seat of his influence while living in the world. They did not actually create a new and vital transformation in the mass of the human race, lifting it almost bodily from the dust and setting it once and for all on a higher spiritual plane. But Gautama, the Buddha, appears to me to have actually achieved this. The whole of human history took a new turn from the date of his enlightenment under the Bo tree.

The first of these three sovereign dynamic truths was the truth of non-retaliation—Ahimsa. He gave with living power the new word to mankind "Evil cannot be overcome by evil but only by good." Before this time, the law of righteousness in human society had been based on retaliation—"an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." But Gautama, the Buddha, was the first to declare, on an uncompromising and universal scale, which moved the masses of mankind, that this retributive justice is not the highest law of man's spirit, but that divine compassion carries with it a surer and a greater justice—the justice of love. "Overcome", he cried, "evil by goodness; conquer untruth by truth; overcome anger by love." Such words had never been said in human history before with such moving power and by such a dynamic spiritual personality.

Such words, let me repeat, had been said before. But they had not gripped the heart of mankind. Now—with the vast personality of the Buddha behind them—they reverberated to the farthest shores of the world. They reached to Alexandria in the West, and to the islands of the Pacific in the East. Their effect is to be traced in the Rock Edicts of Asoka; in the carved sculptures of Borobudur in Java; amid the ruins of Angkhor in Cambodia; in the temples of Kyoto and Nikko in Japan; and in the treasured paintings rescued from the desert sand in Chinese Turkestan. Nay further, I have been convinced myself (though the story is too long to tell) that the Sermon on the Mount, which Christ preached by the waters of the Sea of Galilee, contains echoes of the Buddhist teaching uttered in the plains of Northern India more than five hundred years before. The historic links of connection, historians may decide; but the sameness of the sovereign truth itself may be seen and judged by all.

The second of these three sovereign truths appears to me to be this. Compassion in sorrow and suffering and mortality makes the whole human race akin. Gautama, the Buddha, was the first spiritual genius

* Mr. Andrews' presidential address, delivered on the 27th instant, at the 2550th anniversary celebration of the Lord Buddha.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n690/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

to find a universal basis in religion, not in the intellect, but in the heart. The Upanishads had already revealed an intellectual unity. "Tat Tvam Asi" had been already declared as a final truth of man's soul; but its practical basis and application had not been clearly revealed till the Buddha came. The story of the Princess, who had lost her child and wished for comfort, is well-known. The answer of the Buddha to her grief strikes the universal note:

"Know", he said, "that the whole wide world weeps with thy woe."

Thus the compassion of the Buddha broke down all barriers of caste and race and creed and country. The new Faith made humanity one for the first time. The Buddhist monks went out to distant lands across the mountains and seas because there was no far or near, where universal love was concerned. It is impossible to enter into details and relate the wonder of what I saw at Borobudur, those noble figures from India, nobly sculptured in stone, upraising from the dust the aboriginals, who crouch before them, nay, preaching like St. Francis of Assissi to the birds and beasts of the forest the same message of universal love.

The third of these three sovereign truths which became through Gautama, the Buddha, for the first time living and dynamic among the multitudes, was the truth of Tolerance. Again we turn to the sculptured rocks for our testimony. The Rock Edicts of King Asoka are the very first edicts of religious tolerance known to the civilized world. The carvings at Borobudur are no less wonderful. The hatred of the foreigner; the suspicion of the stranger; the clash of warring creeds; the violence of opposing religious systems,—all these melt away, with their sharp icy barriers, before the sunshine of the Buddha's love. While it is true that the Buddhist teaching itself has spread from one shore to another and covered the lands of Asia it is also true that never once in Eastern history can its development be said to have taken place owing to military power or worldly conquest. It won its victories by love.

There is no time to-night to elucidate these three kindred points that I have made. You will see that I have dwelt upon the "moral" beauty of the teaching of Gautama, the Buddha, only. I have done so with a direct object in view. For, I have felt that in our present crisis of Indian history, the lesson of his universal moral ideal was needed most of all. Harsh voices are telling us, in strident tones, to be intolerant, to assert ourselves, to place our own nation first, to establish our own creed first, to disregard all others. India to-day is torn asunder because these three truths of Love, Compassion and Tolerance, which the Buddha taught two thousand five hundred years ago, have nearly been forgotten.

But, thank God! there is even now in this dark hour a stirring and a moving of men's hearts. The gracious personality of the Buddha is becoming every year in modern India venerated anew by countless human hearts. Each anniversary his figure comes back to us with fresh radiant moral beauty. Therefore, I would end as I began. It was a joy to me that I cannot express, when the request came to me from Bombay to join in this anniversary celebration. It has been one of the happiest things in my happy life in India, that I can, in this gathering as a true and sincere Christian, join in this act of heart-felt veneration of Gautama, the Lord Buddha.

GOTRA AND PRAVARA AND THEIR INCIDENCE ON MARRIAGE.

An interesting paper on the above subject was read by Mr. K. Rangachari, M.A., B.L., Vijayanagaram, before the Third Oriental Conference that was held in December last in Madras. The following is a summary of the same:—

A very interesting sociological fact connected with the Hindu society is the division of the dvija castes into groups called Gotras. Following the dvija castes, the other communities, notably the Sudras, have followed the same practice. These Gotras do not indicate the descent, as is alleged in the case of Brahmins, from a Rishi-ancestor, but they are simply the names of plants or objects like plough, scythe etc. The Gotras of the Sudras, according to some sociologists, indicate the existence once of totemistic divisions amongst them which have been readily converted into Gotras, based on Brahminical practices. The Gotra of the Hindus corresponds to the gens of the Romans, indicating similar practices amongst the races of the Aryan family.

The Institution of Gotra.

The tracing of descent through the male ancestor seems to be the foundation of the institution of the Gotra. Baudhayana defines Gotra thus: "The off-spring of the seven Rishis with Agastya as eighth is called Gotra." The Saptarishis referred to are Visvamitra, Jamadagni, Bharadvaja, Gautama, Atri, Vasishta, and Kasyapa. The commentators expalin the term thus: "The sons and grandsons and previous and succeeding generations of a Rishi form a Gotra. A Rishi (for this purpose) is one who is a "Mantradrasta". Thus the families of certain great Rishis came to be known by their names and these Rishis became Gotrakarins. Gotra according to this text thus means a family just like Kula. The Arya Brahmins, like the peers of England, were proud of their ancestors and perpetuated their names as of founders of families or Gotrakarins, and this was the outcome not only of their legitimate pride in their ancestors but also of certain practices connected with the Vedic ritual. It must be remembered that it was not exclusively confined to the Brahmins but included the Kshatriyas and Vaisyas. Gotra perhaps in very early times depended on community of blood but it is certain that later on this community of blood became fictitious. Apart from the eight Rishis above-mentioned, two others, namely, Bhrigu and Angirasa, have attained to the high eminence of Gotrakarins. Thus by fiction a man was permitted to acquire a Gotra. "When the relations are unknown (i.e., when the Gotra is unknown) a man may adopt that of the Acharya". And again, "if the Gotra is unknown, Kasyapa Gotra may be adopted". A famous case was that of Satyakama, the son of Jabala, mentioned in Chandogya Upanishad. Thus not only birth but dis-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n691/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

cipleship was then one mode by which a man acquired a Gotra.

PRAVARA.

Pravara is explained as follows. In Vedic sacrifices, Agni (Havyavahana) is the carrier of libations and therefore when the sacred fire is to be consecrated he must be invoked. After the consecration of the sacred fire the Hota and the Adhvaryu declare that the Yajamana or the sacrificer is as worthy as his famous Rishi ancestors to offer sacrifices to Gods and thus they invite Agni or Havyavahana to carry his libations just as he did those of his great Rishi ancestors and this invocation came to be called Pravara. The invocation is not to the ancestors but to Agni and it is certain that the ritual connected with Vedic sacrifice is the cause of Pravara. The names to be included in the invocation may be one, two, three or five but not four or greater than five. There seems to be no connection between the number of Rishis a man has in his Pravara and the number of sacred fires he has to maintain and sacrifice in, as the latter solely depend upon the sacrifices he has performed and the stage of life which he embraces, but according to Apastamba, there is some connection between the number of Rishis in a man's Pravara and the number of sikhas he wears upon his head.

CONNECTION BETWEEN GOTRA AND PRAVARA.

The inter-relationship between Gotra and Pravara is made clear by Baudhayana. With the exception of the groups of Bhrigu and Angirasa the commonness of even one Rishi between the Pravaras of two persons of different Gotras makes them Samanagotras. Amongst the Bhrigu and Angirasa groups, the commonness of one Rishi amongst the Pravaras of persons belonging to different Gotras, if such be Tryarseyas, does not make them Samanagotras. Also two common Rishis between the Pravaras of persons belonging to two different Gotras do not make them Samanagotras if they be Pancharseyas. Thus, the commonness of one Rishi between the Pravaras of persons belonging to the eight Gotras named after the eight Rishis mentioned before, brings in Samanagotratvam, but, as we have seen, it is different in the case of Bhrigu and Angirasa groups.

GOTRA AND PRAVARA AMONG KSHATRIYAS AND VAISYAS.

It is notorious that amongst the Kshatriyas and Vaisyas there is a confusion about the Gotras and Pravaras which time has only made them worse confounded. In very early times, Kshatriyas were also founders of Gotras, and it is clear from Puranic tradition that they have become the Gotras and Pravaras of Brahmins. The Pravara that is entirely composed of Kshatriyas is Manava, Ila and Pauruvavasa. With regard to the Pravara of Vaisyas many conflicting statements are made by the Gotrakaryas, but there is one view according to which all members of the three regenerate castes are of one Pravara, viz., Manava.

INCIDENCE OF GOTRA AND PRAVARA ON MARRIAGE.

As to the incidence of Gotra and Pravara on marriage, it will be clear from a host of authorities that marriage is prohibited between persons of the same Gotra and Pravara. Yajnavalkya says: "He who has not lost his Brahmacharya, let him marry a girl of good parents, who has not been accepted or enjoyed by another, who is attractive in his sight, who is not a Sapinda of him and is a junior; who is free from irremediable disease, who has brothers, who is descended from sons whose Gotra and Pravara are different from his; and who is removed five degrees on the mother's and seven on the father's side". Manu, Gautama, Apastamba, Vishnu, Vasishta, Sankha and Brihat Parasara are all of the same opinion. It is also declared by Baudhayana and other Rishis that having had sexual intercourse through error with a girl of the same Gotra and Pravara, one should perform Chandrayana and that, if there is any offspring in consequence of such intercourse, then it belongs to the Kasyapa or Bharadvaja Gotra.

THE ANTIQUITY OF MARRIAGE PROHIBITIONS.

According to the writers on Sacred Law, these prohibitions hold with regard to the members of all the three regenerate castes. But from the writings of Pravaracharyas it is clear that Kshatriyas had at one time only one Trayarseya Pravara of their own as recognised by the Sutrakaras and they were permitted to have the Pravara of their Purohits, the reason being given that otherwise marriages would have become impossible. The Vaisyas also had one Pravara of their own, as Apastamba says in no uncertain terms. Seeing the difficulties that would arise in connection with marriage, on account of Samanapravartatvam for all Vaisyas, later Pravaracharyas declared that the Vaisyas also should follow the Kshatriyas in having the Pravaras of their own Purohits. Thus there must have been a time during which these restrictions on marriage due to Pravara and Gotra considerations did not exist in respect of relatively large numbers of members of regenerate castes. Further before the classification of all Gotras and Pravaras as we find at the present day took place, there were according to the Puranic tradition only a few Gotrakaras, amongst whom there was Angirasa. Bharadvaja and Gautama were descendants of Angirasa, and marriages between persons of these Gotras have never been prohibited. There are also the statements of Baudhayana and Apastamba that all people are of the same Pravara, viz., Manava, which would simply declare all marriages invalid and impossible amongst persons belonging to the three regenerate castes.

CONCLUSION.

The author of Dasanirnayi quotes from Parasaramadhaviya the following significant passage: "The gift of a maiden into the same Gotra is also seen in other countries." It may be contended that the reference is to the practice of Mahomedans and Christians, but it has never been the practice of our Nibandhanakartas to refer to the customs of non-Hindu races. The prohibitions of marriage between persons of the same Gotra or Pravara do not seem to be Vedic but are relatively of more recent origin. Nor has the practice of marriages between members of the same Gotra amongst Brahmins disappeared. Dr. Fick mentions that Sagotra marriages do take place amongst the Sarasvat Brahmins of the Punjab and another Brahmin sect of the Central India, such marriages being perfectly valid amongst them. The subject is full of inexplicable difficulties. It has not been possible for even the learned author of Pravaramanjari to explain away the contradiction between the statement of Apastamba and others that all men have the same Pravara with their other statements which mention different Pravaras. The tradition concerning Gotra and

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n692/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Pravara as found in Matsyapurana differs from that of Mahabharata and these two differ from the very widely prevalent tradition and practice of the present day. Again, while Brahmin families count seven, eight and eleven Rishis amongst their Pravaras, the Pravarachar-yas definitely declare that under no circumstances there can be more than five Rishis in a Pravara. It is not surprising that Pravara which once found its use only in Vedic sacrifices should later on lose its significance when most of these practices were given up, thus giving rise to practices which are in diametrical opposi-tion to Sastraic injunctions. For these reasons a very systematic and close study of facts concerning Pravara is sure to give us a good deal of interesting information about the division of dvijas into these sub-groups with different Pravaras which have an important bearing on marriage regulations obtaining in society.

WOMEN'S MEETING AT DACCA.

Mrs. Sarojini Naidu was presented with a welcome address on the 17th inst., by the ladies of Dacca under the auspices of the Depali Association in the Jagannath Hall of the Dacca University. A large number of ladies were present.

Groaning Under Customs.

Miss Lila Nag, Secretary of the Depali Association, in presenting the address on a silver plate, among other things, said: "We recall with pride and pleasure that you, one of our own sex, by your strenuous and selfless services in the cause of the motherland, have shed lustre upon the entire womanhood of this country." Continuing, she said: "The fettered millions of your countrywomen, groaning under the chains of cruel customs, look up to you for light and guidance. May you by your inspiring personality bring the discordant and jarring elements of the country to peace and unity and lead us all towards the goal—the liberty of India!"

Daughter of Vikrampore.

In reply to the address, Mrs. Naidu said that though her ancestors were inhabitants of Vikrampur, yet she was born and brought up in South India and, therefore, did not learn Bengali. She understood Bengali, but lest she should commit any mistake, she did not venture to speak in Bengali.

Continuing, she said that though she had travelled over the world, yet this was the first time she had come to her own land. When she reached Vikrampur her heart leaped up with joy and she was very glad to meet that evening the ladies of her own country. Whenever she addressed a gathering, it consisted mostly of students. But she felt much pleased if she got an opportunity to speak to the ladies, for she was herself a lady and she believed that her duty was to say something about the duties of women. Lakhs of women, she said, lived in this country, but only a few of them spoke out their minds. Every woman, whether Hindu or Mahomedan, should remember that they were sisters to one another and by doing so they would be able to bring peace in the country. She asked every woman to think that the salvation of India was in their hands, but if the ladies fail to think so, the salvation of Mother India would be absolutely impossible.

Tales of Miseries.

Whenever she passed from one end of India to the other, she noticed that the people had nothing to eat or wear. When she went to Brindaban, she saw thousands of widows leading the lives of misery. In India, wherever she went, she found that women were in want, and owing to their ignorance, and due to want of education, they could not remove their misery. Unless women could themselves realise their own miseries and try to remove them, no one would be able to do so. If women take to spinning, they would be successful in meeting their wants to a great extent. Dacca muslin was once well-known in the world and it was so exquisite that the Kings used to take their seats on the thrones with muslin on. It was a pity that the weaving industry in Dacca was dying away. This was due to a lack of interest from the big men of the country. This King of England never uses any article which is not English-made. The Englishman, German or Japanese never buys any article which is not a production of his own country. But the Indian children are never taught by their mothers to use their country-made products.

Respect for Women.

Continuing, she said that, wherever she went, she found the people crying "Vande Mataram." But they were never taught to worship their mother country and as such the cries of "Vande Mataram" sounded discord-ant to her ear. She further said that unless the younger generations of India learnt to respect the womanhood of India, the salvation of the country would not be possible and if the people really meant to love the women of India, they must abolish the dowry system. If the women of the country were brave and cultured, then they would not have been afraid of being attacked by others. India produced brave ladies in the past and there was no reason why they would not be so now.

Customs : a Block.

In the matter of election, votes were taken from women in western countries, but when that question was raised in India it was stated that as the Indian ladies observed the Purdah, they would not be able to exercise their votes, although society was formed by women and the welfare of the society entirely depended on them. Old customs in India, she said, stood in the way of their advancement and as such they must be avoided and modern customs should be adopted. Lakshmi Puja, Durga Puja or Saraswati Puja need not be performed in a country where the people were poor, weak and illiterate. The worship of these god-desses could be done when India would be wealthy, brave and educated. The miseries of the poor could be mitigated to a great extent, if every woman would keep aside some food every day for them. It was to be found that the want of food or clothing sometimes compelled some women to sell their modesty and chastity in the bazaar.

Motherhood.

Every woman should think that she was a mother. Whenever anyone died in India, she must think that that mishap took place in her own house. Every woman should remember that her duty was to beget good children. Just as good crop was not possible if the seeds were not good, so also if the mother was not good, good children could not be expected of her.—The Forward, Calcutta.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n693/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PRIVY COUNCIL ALLOWS A CONCUBINE'S CLAIM.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, consist-g of Lord Blanesburgh, Lord Darling, Sir John Edge, ir. Ameer Ali and Lord Salvesen, allowed in mail week a appeal in the case of Bai Nagubai Manglorkar vs. Bai onghibai, since deceased, and others from a judgment the High Court of Bombay and restored a decision of ir. Justice Kanga in a suit which raised a question of Hindu law of general importance—namely, whether a oncubine was entitled after the death of her protector o maintenance from his estate.

Lord Darling, in delivering their Lordships' judgment, aid that the appellant, at the age of 12, was given into he keeping of a rich Hindu named Gopal Mulji. She ived with him for 12 years and bore him two children. During that time she made the acquaintance of Vasanji Madhavi Jhaker, now deceased, who was a friend of Gopal Mulji. The deceased was a very wealthy Hindu. He was married, but was on bad terms with his wife (with whom he did not cohabit) and her two sons, whom, by his will, he afterwards practically disinherited. The appellant, when of the age of about 26, had to leave Gopal Mulji because of ill-treatment by him.

The deceased then took her under his protection and she lived with him on terms of affection on either side for at least five years before his death, bore him a daughter, was faithful to him during his life, and had been faithful to his memory. Such was his esteem for the appellant that he would have married her had not their difference of caste made it impossible. After his death she applied to his executors for maintenance and to his widow and issue to admit her claim thereto, and on their failure to comply with her request she instituted the present suit, claiming maintenance as a Hindu concubine of the deceased in his sole keeping till his death.

The respondents alleged that the appellant was not faithful to the deceased during his life and had not led a chaste life since his death, but they did not deny that the facts alleged by her, if proved, would entitle her to maintenance.

Both Courts decided that she was in the sole keeping of the deceased before his death; that she had received payments from him; and that she had continued to be chaste after his death. Mr. Justice Kanga decided that she was entitled to maintenance, but the High Court rejected the claim.

The Proved Facts.

At the trial it was proved that the deceased for the last five or six years of his life had left his family house in the occupation of his wife and her children and was residing almost, if not entirely, with the appellant in a house rented in her name; that he had engaged a governess to teach her and her daughter; that he kept a motor-car for his and her use; that he took her up-country with him and told his friends to call on him at the house where she lived; that his sons visited him there; and that he was nursed there during his last illness and only removed shortly before his death.

The trial Judge defined the legal position to be that, where a Hindu woman had been kept by a Hindu till his death as his permanent concubine—as he found was the fact in regard to the apellant—his estate was liable for her maintenance, but that that right was conditional on her chastity. The High Court held that only a woman who openly lived as a wife, though not legally married, and as a member of the family in the house of the man, and was recognised as his permanent concubine, was entitled to maintenance. They decided on the evidence that the appellant was not entitled to maintenance, and dismissed her suit.

She now appealed. The High Court had decided, and their Lordships agreed with them, that the right to maintenance was limited to women who were continuously kept as concubines and living as members of the family. Both Judges in the High Court had laid much stress on the fact that the appellant was not kept in the house of the deceased's family, but in a separate house. The trial Judge, however, had explained that the deceased did not care for his family or they for him, and that the appellant, as a member of his family, nursed him in his last illness. Their Lordships agreed with the trial Judge in that v ew.

The Question at Issue.

The real question appeared to be whether the concubine, otherwise entitled to maintenance, must, to be of the family, reside in the same house with the deceased, together with his wife and family. Their Lordships were of opinion that such common residence was now unnecessary. Provided that the concubinage was permanent until the death of the paramour, and that sexual fidelity to him was preserved, the right to maintenance was established, although the concubine had not been kept in the family house of the deceased. The facts admitted or proved brought the present case within the rule entitling the appellant to maintenance out of the deceased's property.

Their Lordships would humbly advise his Majesty that the decree of the High Court should be set aside and that of the trial Judge restored with costs out of his estate.—The Times of India, Bombay.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETY IN DWARAHAT.

( Communicated )

A public meeting of the citizens of the Palli sub-division in the Almora District was held in the A. V. Mission Boys' School Hall on Saturday, the 15th May 1926, at 3. p. m. under the chairmanship of Pt. Har Govind Pant, B. A., LL.B., M.L.C. The programme of the evening began with an address by B. Jai Lal Sah, as Chairman of the Reception Committee, in which he dealt with the evils of strong drink and other intoxicants and showed the necessity of organising a Temperance Society in this sub-division.

Pt. Har Govind Pant in his presidential address also laid emphasis on the evils of intoxicants and showed why India should have prohibition as early as possible. He eulogised the Christians and the American Missions in taking the lead in this matter. And subsequently he said that these holy hills should be free from this evil as soon as possible. Hence a Society of this nature in these parts specially and in every part of the country in general is a great necessity.

Rev. H. R. Wilson, in his speech, laid emphasis on organising a Temperance Society in these parts and showed the work that lay before such a Society in these parts. He said that prohibition would be achieved in this country as in America by the education of the masses and getting them ready to raise a hue and cry to have

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n694/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

this evil removed from our Motherland. There were a few other eloquent and interesting addresses delivered by Mr. Yaqub Masih, Pt. Maha Nand Sharma, and B. Kebi Datt in addition to some interesting Hindustani music and recitations from the School boys.

A Temperance Society was then organised with the following office-bearers:—President, Pt. Maha Nand Sharma, Vice-Presidents, Miss C. Oram, B. Kishen Lal, Pt. Hira Ballabh Pande, General Secretary, Rev. H. R. Wilson, Joint Secretary, B. Jai Lal Sah and Treasurer, L. Naud Lal Sah, with a strong Executive Committee of eleven members. The constitution of the Society was then adopted. Among some of the important resolutions passed at this meeting were the following:—

(1) That this mass meeting of Palli sub-division in the Almora District rejoices over the formation of the Prohibition League of India and heartily congratulates the organizers of it and earnestly hopes that it will do all it can in bringing about early prohibition in India.

(2). That this mass meeting of Palli sub-division in the Almora District congratulates the Excise Officer and the Deputy Commissioner of Almora district on closing the liquor shop in Ganai in this sub-division. But it is with great regret one finds that bhang, charas and opium are still allowed to be sold there. This place bring on the pilgrim route to Badri Nath and Kedar Nath, it is earnestly hoped that the above officers will stop at an early date the licenses for the sale of these narcotics also.

(3) That this mass meeting of Palli sub-division is of opinion that a Licensing Board be established in this District to help in the regulation of the Excise Policy in the District. This meeting further recommends that all the Temperance Societies be fully represented on the District Excise Advisory Committees and the Licensing Board.

(4) That we look with pleasure and satisfaction upon the work done by the sister Society in Ranikhet during the past years and congratulate the office-bearers of that Society, and urge the people of Almora and other sub-divisions too to organize similiar Societies and get them affiliated to the Prohibition League of India.

(5) That we are of opinion that a District Temperance Society is also a dire necessity and steps be taken to organize one at an early date. And that we request the following gentlemen to take this matter in hand:—

Pt. Har Govind Pant, H. R. Wilson, Esq., N. Jordan, Esq., Pt. Badri Datt Pande, Editor, Shakti, Pt. Debi Datt Tewari, Editor, Kurmanchalmitra, Rev. U. S. Rawat, Rai Sahib Pt. Dharma Nand Joshi Bahadur, Pt. Laxmi Datt Joshi, Raish Shahib, Rai Shahib Pt. Laxmi Datt Pande Bahadur, and Pt. Krishna Nand Harbela Jagirdar.

It is hoped that this Society will work very forcefully and effectively in these parts and will help to bring prohibition to this country very soon.

KHILAFAT CONGRESS AT CAIRO.

The opening of the Khilafat session was mainly devoted to an inaugural address in which the Grand Sheikh Azhar pointed out that the Congress was the first in the history of Islam. It was convened in the hope that it would have a happy repercussion on the relations of Islamic peoples and the Khalifat, as the question of the disappearance of the Khalifat had alarmed Moslem peoples.

It is understood that the second session of the Khilafat Conference was characterised by sharp differences between the Palestinians' delegate, Camal Bey Husseini, and the Egyptian Sheikh Miniaour. The latter took strong objection to Husseini reading a telegram with regard to the recent French bombardment of Damascus on the ground that the Conference was not entitled to interfere with political questions. After a lively discussion, the matter was referred to a Committee. The proposal to admit the press, which was strongly opposed, was also referred to a Committee. The Conference appointed two Committees to study the questions laid down in the discussion, chiefly the disappearance of the Khalifate.

Rapt listeners to the closing session of the Khalifat Congress were so impressed by the reading of the second Committee's report that many shed tears. The Committee decided that the Khalifat as defined in the Koran which included the defence of Islam in Moslem lands and the execution of the Koranic law, was impossible to apply in the present state of Islam and the position of the Khalifat and recommended that the Islamic Congress should be held periodically until time permitted to institute the Khalifat in a form consistent with the interests of the Moslem world.

The Committee pointed out that the solution must be compatible with the interests of the whole body of Mahomedans who were divided under several dominions and different nationalities. It was difficult to convince one to incline to another while the policies of the respective governments were also at variance. Nevertheless, it was impossible to leave the state of Moslems neglected as at present and, in addition to a periodical Congress, they should permit exchange of views between Moslems.

A Permanent Committee.

A permanent Committee should be formed, which should meet yearly and receive communications from various Moslem countries where sub-committees should study the local situation of Mahomedans and carry out the decisions of the permanent Committee.

It expressed the opinion that the appointment of the Khalif under present circumstances would not solve the question but would render it more difficult. Moreover, there was no proper body at present vested with sufficient authority to undertake nomination, while many Islamic representatives had no time to attend the present Congress.

Therefore, it was suggested that the executive Committee of the Congress should remain in Egypt and create branches all over the Islamic world and arrange the future of the Congress.

The next Congress will be held at Cairo, but the date has not yet been fixed.

It is understood that the Congress has passed a resolution protesting against recent events in Syria which is being communicated to M. Doumergue and the League of Nations.—The Indian Daily Mail, Bombay.

MADRAS LABOUR UNION.

Under the auspices of the Madras Labour Union a special meeting was held recently in the Union premises on Perambore Barracks Road for the women workers in the mills in the city with Mr. B. Shiva Rao, President of the Union, in the chair. There was a large gathering of women present.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n695/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Mr. N. Sriram in introducing to the meeting Mrs. D. Jinarajadasa, the principal speaker of the evening, explained the aims of the Union and exhorted them to become members of the Union and take a lively interest in its affairs.

Mrs. Jinarajadasa said that women sometimes thought that they had nothing to do with Labour Union and that only the male workers should interest themselves in its affairs. But she would tell them that not only men but women also should become members of the Trade Union. Women workers' conditions were much worse than men's and they were in need of such things as maternity benefit and child welfare. Unless women united together and put forward their demand they would not get their grievances redressed.

After referring to some of the handicaps of the women workers, she expressed her regret at the dismissal of two women in the Choolai Mills who were on the eve of child-birth. She said that the employers of these mills ought to have taken a different attitude. They heard a good deal of sentimental talk in this country about the beauties of women. There was no use in these kinds of sentiments unless everything was done to make it possible for a mother to bring forth her child strong and healthy. In America, she said, a law was passed that a woman worker ought to be given leave with wages six weeks before and six weeks after child-birth. She wanted that such a law should be passed in this country as well. For that all the women should unite and put forward their demand. Last year Mr. N. M. Joshi brought up a resolution on similar lines in the Assembly but the opposition of the mill-owners was so great that the resolution was not passed. Let them not care about it. It will be brought forward again and again until it was passed. And if the women were all united and gave their support, it would be passed. So, she wanted every single woman worker to strengthen the Union.

Proceeding, she said that women had some special wants, and for meeting them it was proposed to open a a child welfare centre immediately. She wanted her sisters to make it a success.

Continuing she said that one of the sad things in this country was that women thought themselves to be inferior to men. She wanted them to put that idea out of their mind altogether. She said that they must realise that women were the equals and co-partners of men.

Mrs. M. S. Madhava Rao and Mr. B. Shiva Rao then spoke after which the meeting terminated.—The Hindu Madras.

THE 4TH TELUGU KALAVANTULA SOCIAL REFORM CONFERENCE, GUDIVADA.

Rao Saheb M. Lingaya Naidu of Belgaum writes: The fourth session of the Telugu Dancing Girls' Social Reform Conference was held at Gudivada (Madras Presidency) under the presidentship of Mr. Kalai Surya Prakasam, B.A., L.T., in April 1926. The following resolutions among others were discussed and unanimously adopted:— (1) This Conference expresses its thanks to the Zamindar of Pithapuram and Sir R. Venkat Ratnam Naidu Garu for their unstinted endeavours for the social uplift of the community after fully realizing its present degraded condition. (2) This Conference expresses its thanks to His Exalted Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad for having issued the prohibitory order against the employment of dancing girls during the celebration of the Temple Festival and other sacred ceremonies. (3) This Conference requests the Government of Madras to prohibit the employment of the dancing girls in the Temples as such employment is arresting social advance and is highly undesirable and to provide that the place of these dancing women be taken by Bhajan Parties by necessary legislation in this behalf. (4) This Conference requests the Government of India and the members of the Legislative Assembly that proposals of the Committee formed to amend the Indian Penal Code 1868 and the Criminal Law Amendment Act be brought into force immediately by the formulation of the necessary Act. (5) This Conference condemns the practice of the adoption of the girls of the other communities, and exhorts that the girls of the community be married. (6) This Conference feels the necessity of the dancing girls not getting themselves in future employed in marriages and other festivals for singing and dancing. (7) This Conference condemns the practice of giving or accepting dowries and brides' fees as they are arresting the peaceful contraction of marriages. (8) This Conference decides that Social Reform Propagandist Associations be started immediately. (9) This Conference condemns early marriages and lends its support to Widow Remarriages. (10) This Conference severely condemns the use by servants of the District and Taluka Offices of the dancing girls to lead them in procession through the street for the purpose of collecting funds to celebrate some festivals. (11) This Conference requests that support be given by all the members of the community for the Institute started at Guntur for affording educational facilities to the girls of the community and the home started for the Hindu Ladies at Madras by Shrimati Yamini Purna Tilkamma, the Editor of the Hindu Yuvati.

EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

Under the auspices of the Vasant Vyakhyan Mala, Poona, Mrs. S. Gadgil gave a lecture on the present system of Women's Education. She criticised the system which gave the same kind of education to grown-up boys and girls and said it was as foolish to expect mangoes from a guava tree as good mothers and house-wives from the present system of education which is imparted to women. No one will dispute for a moment that it is foolish to expect mangoes from a guava tree but at the same time none will be so silly as to say that guavas should not be expected from a guava tree, whose business it is to produce that fruit. And what are the mangoes according to Mrs. Gadgil? Good mothers and good house-wives. It is in our opinion only half true to say that the be-all and end-all of a woman's life is to be a good house-wife and a good mother. That is the old, traditional idea about woman's destiny. But even supposing that is the only object with which education should be imparted to women, which of the subjects taught to women at present time should be eliminated from the curriculum? Is History of no use that women could do without it? Is the knowledge of geography, languages, science and the other subjects taught of no avail to women? If it is useless for women to know

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n696/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

any or all of these subjects it is equally so in the case of men. Mrs. Gadgil has no constructive proposal to make on the question of education of women. She merely asserts that it is of the wrong kind but what the right kind is she does not say. Perhaps the three R's and the spinning wheel would make good house-wives and good mothers of our women. The charge levelled against the present system of education that it made women dislike household work is not wholly true. For every educated woman who does not like household work, there are at least a thousand uneducated ones who do not love it. There is nothing seriously wrong with the educational system of the present day. What is wrong is the idea conceived by some half-educated and norrow-minded women about the duties and ideals of their own sex—The Subodh Patrika, Bombay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Bhagwan Buddha's 2550th Jayanti: The 2550th Birthday of Bhagwan Buddha was celebrated on Wednesday night in the compound of Messrs. N. Powell and Company, at Lamington Road, when a large number of people were present. Mr. C. P. Andrews, who presided, delivered a lengthy and impressive address, and appropriately enough the celebrations took place under a Bo tree, in the shadow of which Gautama became the Buddha or the Enlightened. Mr. K. Natarajan in asking Mr. Andrews to take the chair said that Mr. Andrews had devoted his life to the study of the teachings and life of Buddha, and he was glad that even in these days Buddha's teachings had some influence on the world at large. Mr. Andrews read a letter from Mahatma Gandhi wishing the meeting success and hoping that the original intention of the founders would be realised.

Terrible Disaster in Japan: Japan has scarcely recovered from the earthquake of 1923 before she is faced with another disaster. A message from Hokkaido says that two thousand farmers are missing as a result of Mount Tokachi erupting suddenly with a tremendous roar which was heard twenty miles away. It is reported that sixty houses have been buried under the lava. One hundred and twenty persons, mostly miners, are missing inside a local sulphur mine. A subsequent message states that one hundred bodies have been recovered, twenty people have been seriously endangered and two hundred slightly injured.

Bengal Emergency Act: A Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary issued on the 25th inst., announces that the Governor-General has given his assent to the Presidency Area (Emergency) Security Act, 1926, which was passed by the Bengal Legislative Council on May 18. The Act which is a sequel to the recent riots in Calcutta is meant to arm the regular police force of the city with sufficient powers to protect the lives and properties of citizens.

Cowasji Jehangir Hall in Bombay: The rules governing the use of Sir Cowasji Jehangir Hall which at present do not provide use of the Hall for political meetings, at Sir Cowasji Jehangir's request, have been amended by the Government so as to permit "political meetings held to discuss questions of a constitutional nature."

Night Work in Japan: Information has been received in Bombay from an authoritative source in Japan that a petition has been presented to the Diet by female and juvenile workers in Japanese Mills asking for enforcement of the Act of 1923 prohibiting night work.

Minimum Age for Marriage in Turkey: One of the social reforms which have been recently effected in Turkey has been the fixing of the minimum age for marriage at sixteen for girls and eighteen for boys. This is a higher minimum for girls than is now enforced in some provinces of Canada.

Memorial Halls in Madras: The first anniversary of the death of Sir P. Thyagaraya Chetty, late leader of the non-Brahmin Party in Madras, was marked by the opening of memorial halls in the building of the South Indian Liberal Federation in Mount Road in the name of Dr. Nair, Sir P. Thyagaraya Chetty and the Maharaja of Kolhapur. The building is divided into three sections, each to be named after one leader.

Currency Reform in Afghanistan: Reforms in Afganistan go on apace. Recently the whole coinage and system of weights and measures has undergone a change. Metric system based on gramme and metre has been adopted. The present rupee is called the Afgani as opposed to the old Kabuli and is declared to be of slightly higher value, 10 Afganis being equal to 11 Kabulis. Afganis is divided into 100 pals of which only 2, 5 and 10 pal coins are issued. 20 Afganis go to make one Amani which is standard gold coin. Coinage is well minted.

Poona Seva Sadan Society Conference: The workers of the Poona Seva Sadan Society met in a Conference on the 21st instant in Poona. There were a large number of workers present from central places like Bombay, Sholapur and Nagar. Rani Saheb of Sangli came down from Mahableshwar to preside over the Conference. Mr. Devadhar in the course of his speech said that it was necessary that the workers of the Society should come in close touch and discuss freely the difficulties in their respective works. The presence of Rani Saheb, said Mr. Devadhar, was a source of encouragement to them. Mr. Devadhar dealt at length with the reed for establishment of such Seva Sadans all over India.

Mr. Devadhar's Lecture: Mr. G. K. Devadhar Vice-President of the Servants of India Society, paid a flying visit to Cuttack on the 12th instant and visited several public institutions. He addressed a public meeting in the evening at the Town Hall on "The Social Basis of Politics." The speaker explained lucidly how it was impossible for India to attain Swaraj unless her many social evils were eradicated. He laid emphasis on the many social evils of the day, viz., child mortality, untouchability and unapproachability, the illiteracy of Indian women and Hindu and Mussalman tension without removing which it was futile to expect Swaraj. The speech was very interesting and instructive.

Mr. Eardley Norton's Reply to an Address: An address was presented to Mr. Eardley Norton at Kodaikanal by his friends and admirers, chiefly of the legal profession. Since it was not possible for him to come up to Madras, a deputation was appointed to present the address. The deputation consisted of twenty representatives from the city and the mofussil. Mr. C. Vijayaraghavachariar read the address and Mr. Norton, in the course of his reply, stated that he claimed England's readiness to grant Swaraj to India, provided India would maintain and safeguard it. He deplored the want of unity owing chiefly to the strained Hindu-Muslim and Brahmin-non-Brahmin relations.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n697/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Female Labour Act, Canada: Under an amendment to the Act respecting the Employment of Female Labour, no woman or girl may be employed in any capacity requiring her to work in any public hotel, boading house, lodging or rooming house, cafe, restaurant or laundry, without first having obtained a special license from the municipality in which such place is situated. The municipal council may grant or refuse a license or revoke one in existence without giving reasons and its actions are barred from court review.

Political Conviction involves no Degradation in Social Status: Did conviction and imprisonment in the Flag Satyagraha at Nagpur entail degradation of social status, was the question which came up recently for decision before the District Judge of Bangalore. The Judge decided it was not. During the Satyagraha at Nagpur, a volunteer had gone thither from Bangalore. He got himself enrolled and was in due course sentenced to six months' imprisonment. After release, he returned home. When a proposal for his marriage came up, the brother of the prospective bride objected on the ground that the conviction and imprisonment carried with them a social stigma. The matter went to court where the counsel for the volunteer pointed out that it was a matter of which anybody should be proud. The Judge held that the conviction in this case did not entail degradation.

Social Reform in Gudivada: The Cocanada correspondent of the Swarajya writes: In accordance with the resolution of the Provincial Executive Committee the East Gadavari District Association formed to enlist members and carry on the work of the Gudivada Conference, Messrs. Panda Venkataratnam, President, and Mr. Muramalla Gopalaswami, Secretary, followed by Messrs. Kale Suryaprakasam, Kandula Subramanyam, Gudiseva Subbāh, Guntur Nagabhushnam Bhaskarli Iswarudu, etc, visited all houses of the Kalavantulu community requesting all members to marry their daughters and not to adopt girls of other communities. About fifty families accepted the conditions and became members. Many ladies when explained about the utter helplessness of their lives shed tears and as a mark of repentance immediately withdrew their children from dancing training homes. The above gentlemen are bent upon touring all places in Andhra. They find service Inams standing as great obstacles in the cause of reform. The work of Gudivada Conference has been so far an encouraging success.

Reform among Naiks: A correspondent writes to the Hindustan Times, Delhi: At the instance of Pt. Hirdaynath Kunzru, the Siwa Samiti, Allahabad, took up the Naik reform problem in Kumaun. He visited Kutarmai, Ramgarh and Palipachan villages last year with Pt. Govindballabh Pant, Pt. Hargovind Pant and Mr. Badridatt Pande. After that a scheme was prepared. Mr. Pande was appointed the chief organiser. He paid visits to Almora district and several villages in Garhwal to collect facts and figures relating to the Naiks. Local workers have been appointed at almost all the places. They are going about the villages like missionaries, taking census, opening schools, indūcing the Naiks to educate their children and to engage themselves in some useful work and give up the pernicious system of bringing up their girls to prostitution. Last year several prominent Naiks agreed to give up the system and this year two Naik marriages were settled and three other Naiks promised to marry their girls when suitable bridegrooms were available. This has created a great impression and is a victory for the cause of reform. Pt. Kunzru will visit Katarmal, Pithoragarh and Champawat in Almora district. The District Board of Almora is helping the reform movement in regard to education and has promised to give help wherever schools are started for the Naiks.

ADVERTISEMENTS

MATRIMONIAL.

WANTED:— An educated, well-cultured and beautiful girl of a noble family, for a young, handsome and healthy youth of a vegetarian Brahmin family aged 27 years. The boy is a great Poet, Writer and Scholar, and well-settled in life with an income of Rs. 1 000/- a month The girl should be able to help him in his literary work. Photos can be exchanged in confidence. Please correspond with: G. S. Bhargava, F.L.A A (London) F.C.I. (Birmingham) Certified Auditor and Accountant "Phul Niwas", AJMER.

WANTED a grown up girl or virgin widow of any Brahmin Caste to marry a Madhwa Brahmin aged 29 in Tanganyika Government Service on Sh. 500/- per mensem. The bride should be prepared to accompany. For further particulars apply to R R. C/o the Indian Social Reformer.

Wanted 10 candidates. Wonderful preparation for Government, Secretarial, Railway and Telegraph Service. Boarding and Lodging Free. Instruction, Books and Stationery Gratis. Railfare Paid. Session on 1st June 1926. Admission Rules on 4 annas stamp.—Director, India Service Board, Delhi.

FOR CHILDREN.

| | | Original Price Rs. a. | Special Offer Rs. a. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | Pictures of Buddhist Ceylon. By F. L. Woodward, M.A. "This booklet is one of exceeding interest:—religious as well as literary." Vedic Magazine. | 2 0 | 1 0 |
| 2. | The Peony of Pao-Yu. By F. Hadland Davis. A charming collection of short Japanese stories, romantic and humorous ... ... ... ... | 2 8 | 1 0 |
| 3. | Legends and Tales. By Dr. Annie Basant. "This is a collection of tales of Greece and India which Annie Besant has brought out. They each contain a moral and will make good impressions on the minds of the young."—Indian Mirror ... ... | 1 0 | 0 8 |
| 4. | Talks With Golden Chain Links. By Ethel M. Whyte ... ... ... | 0 12 | 0 6 |
| 5. | Stories for Indian Children: By Dr. Besant. | | |
| | 1. The Value of Friendship (From the Hitopadesha) ... ... | 0 2 | |
| | 2. Disunion of Friends Do. .. | 0 2 | |
| | 3. Sri Rama and Sita Devi ... | 0 2 | |
| | "These are pleasant and attractive stories delightfully told in simple prose." | | |
| | The three together ... ... | | 0 4 |
| 6. | The Story of the Great War. By Dr. Besant. An able summary of the Mahabharata, the great Indian Epic. | 1 0 | 0 8 |
| 7. | Shri Rama Chandra: The Ideal King. By Dr. Besant. Some lessons from the Ramayana for the use of Hindu students ... ... ... ... | 1 0 | 0 8 |
| | Total ... | 8 10 | 4 2 |

All the 7 Books for Rs. 3-8

The Story of Chatta. By C. Jinarajadasa. An incident in the Life of Lord Buddha, (Translated from Pali) ... ... ... 0 1 and Free

to purchasers of the above lot.

THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n698/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE
Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed .. ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,003
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Rese ve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2½ % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5½ % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

SUMMER HEAT SUMMER HEAT

The heat of the day during the next three months will make your head feel dull and heavy.

Why having this feeling. Keep nice and cool by creating this daily habit. Take one drop of

KAMINIA OIL "REDG."

ON EACH FINGER TIP.

Rub them well into the scalp. It will cool the head, cause the hair to be refreshed, and grow to that beautiful, lustrous appearance, so well—known to Kaminia Oil.

THE ANGLO-INDIAN DRUG & CHEMICAL CO.
P. O. 2082. C K 14 BOMBAY 2.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.
Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00.00.000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed or daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moder ate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.
BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( „ „ „ ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily, balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n699/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)

Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)

Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)

Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)

Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)

Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)

Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

---

KARNATAKA

AND

INDIAN REVIEW OF REVIEWS

Published Monthly

An Independent Organ for the People of Indian States and A Register of the Progress of Indian Nationalism.

Annual Subscription Rs. 4 Post free.

BASAVANGUDI P. O.

Bangalore City (S. India)

---

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic rt Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

---

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

---

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

---

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED | ... ... | ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP | ... ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS | ... ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide Insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n700/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a.

Tonic?

IF SO
use only the world renowned

"Atank Nigrah Pills."

Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness, digestive troubles and similar complaints.

Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)
Bombay Branch:
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.
Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,
10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
[BEGUN IN 1890.]
A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.
Published every Saturday.
THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.
OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ¼ Column. | | ½ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| 13 | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 26 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 52 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN
CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.
Price 10 Annas a Pot.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
AMRUTANJAN DEPOT
MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n701/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to :—
THE MANAGER
The "Indian Social Reformer."
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yesnwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n702/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1926. No. 40

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Social Conquest of India.
Bombay Reddi Conference.
Bombay Children's Act of 1924.
The Upanishads.
Medical Inspection of Pupils.
Communalism in Sports.
Significant Silence.
Madras Government and Anti-Drink Propaganda.
Communalism and Nationalism.
Indian Students' Union and Hostel.
The Punjab Jail Committee's Report.
Kindness to Animals.
Press Regulation in Travancore.
Sri Ramakrishna Students' Home, Bombay.
The Prostitutes' Life.
The Madras Adi-Dravida Conference.
On Brahmacharya.
Mussolini's Conversion.
Sterilisation as Punishment.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Social Conquest of India: To enlighten the people of the West on Indian affairs, Mr. K. M. Panikkar is contributing a series of articles translated into French to the monthly Europe published in Paris. The first of the series mainly deals with the evolution of social movements in India. At the very outset Mr. Panikkar points out that though it is the nationalist movement in India that has attracted the attention of the West, the silent but none-the-less potent change which almost amounts to a renaissance that has been taking place in the organisation of Indian society has a greater and deeper significance. No conception of India would be adequate if it did not emphasise the cultural and social unity underlying its diversity, and this is brought out in the article in a convincing manner. He attributes the social awakening of India to the British rule and its concomitants and to the policy of education inaugurated by Macaulay. The aim of this policy has been variously interpreted and according to Mr. Panikkar the object was to strike at the root of pagan ideas by introducing institutions on Western lines. Thus India with its time-worn customs and caste system was faced with the alternative of mending her society to suit the modern conditions or being left behind in the march of progress. He claims for the nationalist movement what great reformers like Raja Ram Mohan Roy and Swami Dayanand Saraswati failed to achieve, namely, the leavening influence on the masses. After a short resume of the Non-Brahmin movement and what Mahatma Gandhi has done for untouchability, Mr. Panikkar concludes the article by recognising the well-known principle that in order to fight your enemy successfully you must make use of the methods and weapons employed by him and that in spite of her tradition of conservatism India will rise to the occasion. The moral conquest of Europe over India will remain even when all traces of its political domination disappeared.

Bombay Reddi Conference: The Reddis of the Bombay Presidency held their Conference this year at Yeragatti village, Belgaum district, under the presidency of Rao Sahib H. Chennayya, Mysore. The President, in his forcible address, surveyed the problems confronting the community. He traced the present backwardness of the community largely to the lack of liberal education both among men and women and the lack of unity among the various sections of the community. He also called prominent attention to many other evils from which the community is suffering such as factions in villages, fondness for litigation, intemperance and extravagance, rigid and time-worn social customs and extreme conservatism to take in and adopt new and useful methods of cultivation. His views on the caste system are sane and practical. He said: "We cannot for a long time to come think of the abolition of the caste system altogether among the Hindus as a matter of practical politics, unless some sudden and unexpected revolution sweeps over this land. Can we not at least attempt to bring about the union of the various sub-sects of the main castes?" According to Mr. Chennayya, factious spirit and litigation are sucking the life-blood of the community, and his remedy for them is the establishment of caste or village panchayats to which the people may refer their disputes. The problems of female education and untouchability also received due attention at his hands. We are glad to see that along with the Conference a Reddi Ladies' Conference was also held under the presidentship of Miss Lakshmi H. Chennayya. Miss Chennayya, in the course of her address, dealt among other things with the necessity of imparting to women such education as would be useful to them in their homes and of abolishing such evil customs as child and early marriages which sap the vitality of the society. She rightly pointed out that the institution of early marriages is a later growth owing to the inordinate desire displayed by parents to see their children married early, regardless of the consequences, whole in ancient times women married only when they had reached the full age of understanding. Miss Chennayya emphasised only an obvious truth when she said that women-folk are more responsible for the practice than men.

Bombay Children's Act of 1924: Writing in the Times of India, Miss Katherine Davis points out the necessity for immediately putting into operation the Bombay Children's Act of 1924, which she rightly calls "the Magna Carta of the Rights of Childhood" and the difficulties which social workers have to encounter consequent on the holding up of this important peace of legislation. Under this Act, Magistrates and social workers are empowered to remove children from bad surroundings and to commit young offenders to industrial schools. But, in the absence of its operation, "welfare workers at present have no power to remove children from bad homes without running the risk of being sued for kidnapping." And, again, "school authorities are powerless to prevent children being removed by bad parents." The main reason for the hold up of the Children's Act seems to be the shortage of accommodation to which unprotected and delinquent children can be removed. Two kinds of institutions we need for the purpose, places of safety for temporary shelter and industrial schools aided or maintained by Government for juveniles. Miss Davis is of opinion that we have already

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n703/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

in Bombay a sufficient number of institutions to make a beginning with and that more will be forthcoming as time goes on. Calcutta and Madras have advanced much in this respect. Calcutta has both a Children's Court and a Remand Home run by the police. In Madras, the Act is being applied to local areas also and last year an organisation known as the Children's Aid Society was started to provide shelter and a remand home. Miss Davis suggests the formation of a similar society in Bombay representative of all communities and social agencies. We hope the public will not fail to supplement the efforts of the Vigilance Committee in bringing pressure upon Government to put the Act into operation. As Miss Davis emphasises, the closing of such a large field of preventive work in crime will only result in the increase of crime, disease and immorality.

The Upanishads: We have received a copy of this book which forms the first volume of the "Collective Series" of Upanishadic works now being issued by Messrs. Ashtekar & Co., Poona City. The volume contains the original Sanskrit texts in Dev Nagari characters of Isa, Kena, Katha, Prasna, Mundaka, Taithiya and Aitareya Upanishads, and their English translations, with a few notes on difficult passages diversely commented by different scholars, added by Mr. H. R. Bhagavat after consulting the commentaries of Shri Shankaracharya and recent Vedic scholars like Prof. Hume, Pandit Sitanath Tatvabhushan, Babu Aurobindo Ghose etc. The volume, as the Editor says in his Preface, will no doubt be found useful for persons who are not advanced scholars in philosophical study and do not care to study the elaborate commentaries both old and new. Although the translation is rendered in easily understandable English, we wish the Editor had in his notes explained the central idea conveyed by such verses as the 3rd stanza of the second chapter of the Kena Upanishad. The book is priced Rs. 2-8-0 and can be had from the publishers or from the Editor. Those of our readers who take advantage of the opportunity can get it free under conditions stated in the advertisement printed elsewhere.

Medical Inspection of Pupils: The Government of Madras has taken a right step in directing that from June 1926, medical inspection should be introduced compulsorily in all Government Secondary Schools and School Departments of Government Colleges. Hitherto, there has been in existence a voluntary scheme under which arrangements were made for the conduct of medical inspection in Schools and for the award of grants to local bodies and private managements towards the cost of inspection, but it has not been availed of and hence the present compulsory scheme. In the case of local bodies, however, Government simply contents itself with requesting them to make medical inspection compulsory in the Secondary Schools under their management, while as regards Schools under private management, Government proposes to make the introduction of compulsory medical inspection a condition of the recognition of all Secondary Schools from May 1927. The benefits of compulsory medical inspection in Schools cannot be gainsaid, for it would be the means of discovering and nipping in the bud many diseases which, otherwise, would play havoc with the bodies of young pupils. Government, however, should not rest content with merely pointing out the diseases, and it is necessary that it should follow it up by making provision for free medical aid, wherever necessary.

Communalism in Sports: In commenting on the quadrangular cricket matches in Bombay we deplored the communal feeling that was too much in evidence owing to the practice of selecting teams on a communal basis, and suggested that inter-provincial matches can do much towards eliminating this communal feeling. The Indian Daily Mail has been recently publishing some opinions on the inter-provincial scheme. Sir C. V. Mehta, Member, Executive Council, is heartily in favour of the scheme and he advocates the substitution for the present quadrangular matches, matches where two communities combined can play against the other two communities combined, which, he hopes, would take away the communal edge and serve also as test matches for the selection of an all-Bombay team. He considers that the question of expense is not very difficult of solution, for he is confident that it can be made up from gate money. Mr. L. R. Tairsee, President of the Hindu Gymkhana, is, however, pessimistic about the scheme. While recognising its soundness, he thinks it difficult of realisation in practice and he fears that matches, unless organised on communal lines, will not create the zest and enthusiasm which they do now. However, he is prepared to support it if a serious attempt is made to put it in practice, and we hope that the scheme will be pushed through.

Significant Silence: While returning to India the three Indian members of the Paddison Delegation, Sir Deviprasad Sarvadhikari, the Hon'ble Syed Raza Ali and Mr. G. S Bajpai were met at Mombasa by the leading Indians of that place, to whom they expressed the hope that satisfactory solution may be found when the proposed Round Table Conference eventuated. In an interview granted to a representative of the Democrat they expressed regret at their inability to visit Nairobi and to study the conditions prevailing there and said :—"We can more or less visualize the difficulties under which you are labouring in common with your compatriots down South. Only the other day we attended a dinner at the Government House at Salisbury (Rhodesia) where your Lord Delamere was also present, and when we asked him in the course of conversation what prospects an educated Indian had in Kenya in regard to employment in the Civil Service and what capital one should have to settle down as a farmer, he just remained silent. He would discuss any other matter on earth but that!" Let us hope that Lord Delamere's silence will be the precursor of a change in his views on the Indian question.

Madras Government and Anti-Drink Propaganda: Evidently, the Raja of Panagal, Chief Minister of Madras, is not feeling happy over his G. O. forbidding health officers from carrying on anti-drink propaganda, which has been the subject of much adverse criticism. According to Justice, Madras, the Hon. Minister, in one of his visits to the mofussil, is reported to have said: "It had come to the knowledge of the Ministry that certain Health Officers in the guise of preaching temperance partook in political conferences, and worked against the Government. There is nothing in the G. O. to suggest that the Health Officers should not preach temperance. It discountenances the idea of these officers partaking in political meetings against the Government." As it is, nothing is mentioned in the order about political meetings or anti-Government propaganda. It says in clear and unambiguous terms that "the Government consider that the Public Health Staff should not carry on anti-drink propaganda." If the Raja really meant what he now alleges, surely, it is not too late for him to issue a correction and permit health officers to conduct anti-drink propaganda.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n704/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JUNE 5, 1926.

COMMUNALISM AND NATIONALISM.

In our leading article last week, we suggested that communalism need not necessarily be inferior to nationalism as a stage in the evolution towards the brotherhood of man. At their lowest, both may be equally antagonistic to the solidarity of man. "My country right or wrong" is not a less ignoble watch-word for civilized man than "my community right or wrong". Much of what is called nationalism in Europe and America is summed up in the first formula, as most of what is called communalism in India is summed up in the second. The conflicts between nations are called wars, while those between the communities in India are called riots. But whether called wars or riots, their incidents are bloodshed, violation of life's sanctities and looting. In their lowest manifestations, therefore, there is nothing to choose between nationalism and communalism. In their higher manifestations communalism (using the term according to its Indian usage) can be quite as good a step towards human solidarity as nationalism; while in their highest manifestations communalism, it may at least be argued, can be a nearer approach to human brotherhood than nationalism. The great point to bear in mind is that neither communalism nor nationalism is an end in itself; that when they are conceived as ends in themselves as they are nowadays, they are both equally evil; and that if conceived as means towards a greater end, communalism is, perhaps, less intractable than nationalism, as the basis of the community is an idea while that of nationalism is an area. A Buddhist, a Christian or a Mahomedan as such embraces in his sympathy a much larger number and variety of races, nations and individuals than a Japanese, an Englishman or a Turk. The Jews, the Hindus and the Parsees stand in a different category. With them race and religion are co-extensive. Nevertheless, for them, too, communalism transcends geographical boundaries because a Jew or a Hindu or a Parsee is a Jew or a Hindu or a Parsee not only in Palestine, India and Persia but wherever he may happen to be.

European writers distinguish between religious and political communities. In Europe the political community has come to the front, while the religious community is in evidence only in dealings with non-European peoples. The Turks though they have a strong European element are treated as non-Europeans because of their religion. To be a good European is the declared aspiration of most European statesmen, and not to be good Christians; and they are prepared to sacrifice any Christian principles that may come in the way of that aspiration. India, we think, has nothing to gain and much to lose by acquiring or trying to acquire a nationalism similar to that which has reduced Europe to its present deplorable state. Our communal conflicts are bad enough but they are not half so bad as the national jealousies, rivalries and machinations which form the pabulum of European statecraft. When we are told, therefore, that Indians are not one nation, in the same sense as the parties to the Locarno Pact and its sequel at Geneva, we may take it as a compliment than to resent it as a taunt. It means that we have not tried to "assimilate" the different creeds and sects among us by means of the thumbscrew and the faggot by fire and sword, that we have followed the principle of toleration and respect for all religions and races, and that we have not believed in ensuring peace on earth and goodwill among nations by machine guns, air bombs and poison gas. We are not a nation and we do not want to be one in the European sense. We are proud to be a people (or peoples, as British statesmen insist on describing us.) Indian politics will be put on its natural basis when the idle controversy as to whether or not Indians are one nation is out of the way, and its goal is recognised frankly to be a commonwealth of communities. The experience of the last fifty years clearly shows that except as a political pose nationalism has not entered into Indian life.

The root cause of the increasing frequency of Hindu-Mahomedan conflicts is the anxiety of each of the communities to peg out for itself a position of advantage in the new nationalism. All political parties in India have acquiesced in communal electorates and some have gone further and formulated communal pacts and alliances. It is time now that we frankly accepted our communities as hard facts with which it is useless to quarrel. A federation of communities may not be more difficult to work than a federation of States. In such a federation, all communities, irrespective of their numerical strength, will have an equal status, as all nations, great and small, are equal in international law. One important motive for increasing their number by absorption from other communities, will be thus eliminated. Innumerable details will have to be worked out carefully in order to give effect to this new orientation of our politics, but once the basic principle is accepted, the rest will be easy. Each community may do its best to strengthen itself without rousing the apprehension or jealousy of other communities.

Indian Students' Union and Hostel: We are glad to see that the Indian Students' Union and Hostel, London, has completed six years of its existence. The sixth annual report for 1925-26 a copy of which we have received, records its various activities during the period. The Union forms a rallying centre, social, recreational and cultural, for the Indian students. The current membership of the Union is 585 and the total number of members enrolled since the beginning reached 2,382. Various Provinces and faculties are represented in the Union. The social and recreational activities of the Union comprise such things as "At-Homes', Concert Parties and the staging of English and Indian plays. Much progress is also recorded in its educational activities which embrace Lectures, Debates, Group Conferences, Study Circles Visits, etc., and the Union has kept itself in close touch with the best minds of England by inviting eminent speakers to address them on various occasions.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n705/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE PUNJAB JAIL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Whatever the Non-Co-operation movement has not done, it has certainly given an impetus to jail reform. The public owe a deep debt of gratitude to the Bande Mataram, Lala Lajpat Rai's vernacular weekly, for bringing into light the scandalous state of affairs existing in the Punjab jails which resulted in the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry by the Punjab Government. The Committee, which has just issued its Report, was asked to inquire into the serious allegations regarding unauthorised punishments and indulgences and examine the question of prisoners' diet. In spite of its unsatisfactory personnel and restricted terms of reference, it has made disclosures which certainly do not redound to the credit of a civilized administration, and for the most part confirms the prevalence of extraordinary corruption among the jail staff and the inhuman treatment accorded to prisoners to which witness after witness bore testimony before the Committee. The revelations of the Punjab Jail Committee should serve as an eye-opener to other provinces also and it behoves the respective Governments to overhaul their jail administration more in accordance with modern notions of criminology and penology.

The Committee finds that in spite of the pressure of public opinion, such unauthorised punishments as shoe-beating are still rampant. The Committee says that convict officials and warders beat the prisoners with shoes on the slightest provocation. An aggravated form of punishment is that known as giddurkut in the common parlance of jails in which several convict officials act in concert to attack a prisoner and beat and kick him mercilessly. This method, according to the Committee, is resorted to in order to extort money from the new-comers and sometimes for the purpose of bringing recalcitrant convicts to their senses. A still worse form of punishment to which prisoners are subjected, is what is known as the kan parade often made use of by unscrupulous subordinates in which a man is made to bend double to pass his hands under his legs and touch or hold his ears, sometimes enhanced by the administration of blows and kicks. As for the unauthorised indulgences, the position is much worse. The Committee says that there is a system of money-lending well-established in prisons. Often the Assistant Jailors and Warders receive money on deposits from the prisoners and make payments therefrom as need arises on a handsome scale of commission, but it is not clear whether any money sticks into the pockets of the Jailors. And lastly, "gambling is conducted under the patronage of minor jail officials who, no doubt, are not forgotten by the winners." No wonder that in the face of all this, the Committee declares that discipline is "merely superficial" and quotes in support the statement of a reliable witness "that soveriegns were plentiful inside the Lahore Central Jail, though unprocurable outside." It need hardly be said that the state of things revealed in the Committee's report is not conducive to the reformation of the criminal which is accepted on all hands as the goal of all prison reform, but is only calculated to harden him. One is at a loss to know how the Government was kept wholly in the dark all the while.

Among the recommendations made by the Committee for reform are the reorganisation of supervising and executive agencies, the provision of further jail accommodation, the appointment of a Deputy Inspector-General of Prisons and the total suppression of the system of appointing convict officials which the Committee holds "has become a great source of corruption." In regard to diet and cooking the Committee points out the desirability of providing separate kitchens for Mahomedans and Hindus. The Committee has also not neglected the moral and material improvement of prisoners and it recommends the provision of adult education and religious instruction in jails and the adoption of a system of rewards for good work and exemplary conduct.

In the Resolution accompanying the Committee's Report the Punjab Government has taken the right step in accepting many of its recommendations and, wherever possible, immediately putting them into effect. Such, for instance, are the proposed abolition of the posts of the Jailors, the Deputy Jailors and Assistant Jailors and their replacement by Deputy Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of better status and higher pay than at present, the gradual reduction of convict officials, the appointment of a Deputy Inspector-General of Prisons, the substitution of animal or mechanical traction for manual labour on wells, the provision of libraries for every jail of five hundred prisoners, the appointment of a reclamation officer, the introduction of a Bill for conditional release of adolescent offenders and the establishment of farms where such prisoners can spend their probation in agricultural work. It is regrettable that the Government has not thought fit to accept the wholesome recommendation of the Committee for the confinement of non-habitual offenders in the district jails with a maximum accommodation of 500, as experience has proved that the unwieldy size of the jails often retards supervision and reformative influence. The gross insult which was offered to a non-official M. L. C. visitor in one of the jails proves the lack of efficient supervision. Government, we see, has given orders for the selection of proper non-official visitors and courteous treatment to them, and it would be well-advised in this connection to adopt Lalaji's suggestions for recruiting them from members of Legislative Council, senior medical men and men of independent position and for surprise visits to jails. The public also have a duty by the prisoners. The Committee bewails the lack of Discharged Prisoners' Aid Societies which can do a great deal towards removing the stigma attaching to a criminal. We hope the public of the Punjab will not be slow to appreciate the benefits of such Societies.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n706/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

(By Mr. S. K. Jain).

Several books have been written, speeches have been made and many humanitarian leagues have been started to impress upon man the necessity of being kind to animals. This is a cry as old as humanitarianism itself. Not only that, but it is the mute appeal of the whole animal kingdom since the selfish man began to lay his merciless knife on its neck for the first time. This attitude of man towards animals is based on the erroneous belief 'might is right.' His selfish nature has brought him down to such a degraded level that he cannot realise the simple truth that every living being on earth has as much right to live as man claims for himself. Every animate and inanimate being of which this Universe of God is composed, is intended by Him for some purpose or other and certainly not for man to abuse it. If he abuses it, he violates the Divine Law. But if he realises the simple truth that this Universe is incomplete without any single being, animate or inanimate, and, as such, he should be scrupulously careful not to disturb the Universe, he is the true and God-fearing man.

Man by nature is good—a perfect gold. All the lower nature in him is only foreign material or alloy. It is not inalienable. Even as steel kept clean does not get rusty, so also mind if kept clean does not fall a prey to lower nature. That state of mind takes man in the practical path. But man is not so. He is fond of deceiving himself. Hence the supremacy of selfish nature over man. It is no wonder man does things that are revolting even in spite of the dictates of his conscience. Conscience resides and manifests only in him who respects and develops it. A habitual brutal butcher has no conscience. It is already dead in him. But I can say with all the boldness I can command that there is no man who has not had a hint of warning by conscience when killing an animal, much less when eating flesh, unless he belongs to the race of habitual butchers.

Killing animals has become the fashion of the day, nay, pleasure and sport. What is considered as virtue at one place and at one time, the same is vice at another place and at another time. Drinking and dancing are considered vices in India, but in England they are not. We read in history that our kings of yore went on hunting expeditions very rarely and that too when the wild animals happened to be a menace to the people. But now our Rajas and Maharajas do not find pleasure in any other sport than hunting. What is considered as the most barbarous and inhuman thing is to them a jubilant act and a chivalrous deed. What a happiness, what a thrill, what a joy to them, when they shoot down a timid harmless deer with her young ones crying. This is the first principle of Dharma, it seems, that our princes have learnt from westerners, specially from the Viceroys and Governors of India. One who has closely observed the Times of India Illustrated Weekly would be familiar with photos showing the outstanding skill and the remarkable development of our princes in the art of killing animals which live in the forests and do no harm to man unless molested.

While Viceroys and Governors, Rajas and Maharajas are displaying their remarkable skill in hunting animals, while innumerable goats, cows, buffaloes, etc., are being slaughtered daily to prostitute man's tongue, while phookr, the most revolting method that the human brain has ever conceived, is being practised on cows and buffaloes to extract milk, while Hindus and Mahomedans are cutting each other's throat, while Whitemen in Africa are out to segregate the whole Indian community, will it not seem most ridiculous to preach Ahimsa to humanity? It seems to me as ridiculous and foolish as preaching non-violence to the G. I. P. locomotive engine. But man is not a locomotive, nor is he as emotionless as a chameleon. Our appeal to him would not be a cry in the wilderness so long as there is the benign side in his nature. We must not be frightened by the difficulties and become pessimistic. That is not what God expects of man. Pessimism is the precursor to cowardice. It is no use despising our situation, in it we must act, suffer and conquer.

In my opinion the most barbarous and disgusting method practised on cows and buffaloes to extract milk, and the nefarious propaganda carried on in some part of America by Whites to extinguish the Blacks are acts of the most revolting character. Cruelty to animals and to brother man cannot go any further. It has reached its climax and must come to an end to the joy of the weak and the well-built. And the day is not far off. Man has already begun to think and the signs of his realising this sin are perceivable to an optimistic eye.

PRESS REGULATION IN TRAVANCORE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Government of Her Highness the Maharani Regent have just now passed a law to control the Press in the State. The law as passed requires that no newspaper shall be printed or published without a license obtained from Government, the license fee not exceeding Rupees five hundred. Whenever it appears to the Government that any newspaper (i) contains any words, signs or visible representations which are likely or may have a tendency, directly or indirectly, whether by inference, suggestion, allusion, metaphor, implication or otherwise (a) to excite disaffection against or bring into hatred or contempt the Ruler or the Travancore Government or His Majesty the King Emperor of India or the Government established by law in British India; or (b) to bring into hatred or contempt any member of the Ruling Family of Travancore or (c) to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between the several classes of people of the State; or (ii) habitually publishes matter punishable under Section 503 of the Travancore Penal Code, or (iii) habitually disseminates false information, the Government may, with or without warning, cancel the license and the fee shall be forfeited to Government. The Government also may grant a fresh license unconditionally or otherwise upon payment of a fee not exceeding Rs. 2,500. If, after a fresh license has been granted, any issue contains any words, signs, visible representa-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n707/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

tions or matter the Government may by indicating or describing such words, signs, visible representations or matter, cancel the license and declare the license fee forfeited to Government. Any Police officer may seize any copy of such paper wherever found and forfeit it to Government. Any person aggrieved by an order under Section 5 or Section 7 may within two months from the date of the order apply to Government for a reconsideration of the order and the Government shall thereupon either revoke such order or shall refer such application to the High Court. A Full Bench of the High Court shall hear and determine whether the words, signs, visible representations or matter were or were not in fact of the nature described in Section 5 and a copy of its decision shall be sent to Government with the connected papers. If, in the opinion of the Full Bench, or when there is a difference of opinion in the opinion of the majority of the Judges composing the Full Bench, the words, signs etc. etc. were not in fact of the nature described in Section 5, the Government shall revoke the order. A time limit of 30 days is prescribed for the existing newspapers to conform themselves to the provision in the new Regulation as regards the obtaining of a license. It is also provided that no order passed or action taken under this Regulation shall be called in question in any court otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Regulation. Necessary forms and Rules have also been prescribed and appended along with the Regulation which takes effect at once.

SRI RAMAKRISHNA STUDENTS' HOME, BOMBAY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

With a view to help to realise the ancient Indian ideal of the Gurukula in modern environments, it is proposed to establish immediately a Students' Home under the auspices of the Sri Ramakrishna Ashram, Khar (Santa Cruz). In this Home, School and College students, above the age of 10, will be provided with boarding and lodging and their physical, intellectual, moral and spiritual welfare will be properly looked after, so as to mould their character and instil in them high ideals of Truth, Service and Self-Sacrifice, which are so essential for the proper building up of the nation. The Home will be under the direct supervision of a Sannyasin member of the Ramakrishna Mission, who is a Master of Arts of the Calcutta University, and will be located in a fine airy bungalow in the immediate proximity of the Ashram. The salubrious climate of the model suburb of Khar, the proximity of the sea and the peaceful surroundings of the Ashram will, it is hoped, contribute to make the situation of the Students' Home an ideal one.

To start with, 15 students will be admitted in the Home, while it is the intention ultimately to convert the Home into a free institution like the Sri Ramakrishna Mission Students' Home, Madras, where nearly a hundred High School and College students are boarded, lodged and educated free of all charges. It is proposed for the present and till an adequate public endowment for the support of the Home is made available to charge R. 35 for each student to defray the expenses of his boarding and lodging. All fees received will be devoted solely to the upkeep and improvement of the Home.

The desirability of a Students' Home in Bombay like the one which the Ramakrishna Mission has established in Madras is undoubted and we sincerely trust that the student world of Bombay will avail itself of this unique opportunity provided for their benefit. In this connection we make an earnest appeal to all parents and the philanthropic citizens of Bombay to help the Ashram to materialise as early as possible its hope of establishing in our midst a free Students' Home or Gurukul, where, in the words of Swami Vivekananda, a "life-building, man-making and character-making" education will be imparted.

If a sufficient number of students are available the Home will be opened about the middle of June 1926. Applications for admission should be sent immediately to the President of the Sri Ramakrishna Mission Ashram, Khar, (Santa Cruz P. O.), stating the age and caste of the applicant, the name of the institution and class in which he is studying, the period for which he wishes to stay in the Home and the name and address of his parent or guardian. Only bachelors will be admitted in the Home.

Yours etc.,
(Sd.) M. R. JAYAKAR,
J. K. MEHTA &
P. J. GINWALA.

Bombay,
31st May 1926.

THE PROSTITUTES' LIFE.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The life of the higher class prostitutes is better-off, but that of the lower class of prostitutes is wretched and horrible. With a view whether it is possible to send the latter to work-houses, I visited one day a den of lower prostitutes. The scene was very terrible to look at. Some women were drinking, some were singing objectionable songs, some were dancing with merriment and some were chewing pan, smoking bidies and abusing each other. The life they lead for 24 hours is the worst kind of life. They get up from their ragged beds late at 10 a. m., then prepare tea or go to hotel for it. Afterwards they purchase a small amount of rice or corn and prepare some food. Some live only on loaves of bread and tea purchased from a hotel. They do not take bath daily. After satisfying their hunger on this poor and paltry food, they generally take sleep at noon. At 3 to 4 p. m. they begin to dress themselves with a good sari, oil their hair and part them according to the modern fashion. From this time i. e., from 5 p.m. to 5 a. m. at night, they conduct their evil profession. They sell their persons for even 2 annas, or at times for a cup of tea only. From the enquiries made it was ascertained that a woman in this den earns at least Rs. 2 a day. But much of it is spent on drinking, in giving some bakshis to policemen for allowing them to keep their windows open at late hours at night, and in giving small amounts to pathans and marwaris who are their constant money-lenders taking 200 per cent or more interest on the sums advanced. The pathan keeps an eagle watch on his client every night to see how much is earned by his client in order to extract the same at once. The marwari generally takes in pawn their saris and utensils. The articles are never reclaimed. The visitors to the den of these prostitutes are generally low class people, Indian soldiers, loafers, ruffians, and all the other lower strata of mankind. These visitors of questionable character pay the prostitutes if they like or threaten them to submit their persons gratis. Quarrels generally take place and the police are called upon to stop for which they are rewarded by both the parties to keep "hushhush." These poor women do not know God. They know Him only as much as He is sung and shown by a worst class of enuchs surrounding them often for getting money. Their honesty and idea of life is based upon those of their visitors and friends. If you go to them and tell them the idea of a better life, they will simply laugh. It is impossible, they said to me, that such a life I had painted to them ever existed in this world.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n708/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

525, Budhwar Peth, Poona, Yours etc.,
26th May 1926. K. T. DANGE.

THE MADRAS ADI-DRAVIDA CONFERENCE.

A CORRECTION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In your article entitled "The Madras Adi-Dravida Conference," published in the "Reformer" of May 22, whilst referring to Government orders for reservation and assignment of lands to Adi-Dravidas, which have not been given effect to by subordinate officers, you write as under:

"We may here draw attention to a letter from some Adi-Dravidas in South Arcot which we published in a recent issue. They had petitioned the Government three years back for darkhast lands, but they received no reply whatever."

I beg to state that there is a correction to be made in the foregoing excerpt. From your remarks that the letter was published in a recent issue, and that the Adi-Dravidas had petitioned in vain the Government three years back for darkhast lands, I conclude that, when you wrote so, you had in mind the letter headed, "The Madras Government and the Panchamas" published in the "Reformer" of May 1st, which dealt with the grievances of Adi-Dravidas in No. 13, North or Vada Eluppai, Cheyyar Taluk, North Arcot District, S. India, which Government, in fairness, ought to have redressed long, long ago. Whilst, therefore, thanking you very much, on their behalf, for this generous reference in your article, I beg to state that "Adi-Dravidas in South Arcot" should read as "Adi-Dravidas in North Arcot."

I beg Government would favourably consider their petition and do them justice, which is long overdue.

I again most humbly request Mr. R. Veerian, M.L.C., Madras, through the courtesy of your columns, to do the needful in the matter.

North Eluppai, Natteray, P.O. Yours etc.,
Via Arcot, May 27, 1926. B. GOVINDAN.

ON BRAHMACHARYA.

(By M. K. GANDHI.)

I am being inundated with letters on Brahmacharya and means to its attainment. Let me repeat in different language what I have already said or written on previous occasions. Brahmacharya is not mere mechanical celebacy, it means complete control over all the senses and freedom from lust in thought, word and deed. As such it is the royal road to self-realisation or attainment of Brahman.

The ideal Brahmachari has not to struggle with sensual desire or desire for procreation; it never troubles him at all. The whole world will be to him one vast family, he will centre all his ambition in relieving the misery of mankind and the desire for procreation will be to him as gall and wormwood. He who has realised the misery of mankind in all its magnitude will never be stirred by passion. He will instinctively know the fountain of strength in him and he will persevere to keep it undefiled. His humble strength will command respect of the world, and he will wield an influence greater than that of the sceptred monarch.

But I am told that this is an impossible ideal, that I do not take count of the natural attraction between man and woman. I refuse to believe that the sensual affinity referred to here can be at all regarded as natural; in that case the deluge would soon be over us. The natural affinity between man and woman is the attraction between brother and sister, mother and son, or father and daughter. It is that natural attraction that sustains the world. I should find it impossible to live, much less carry on my work, if I did not regard the whole of womankind as sisters, daughters or mothers. If I looked at them with lustful eyes, it would be the surest way to perdition.

Procreation is a natural phenomenon indeed, but within specific limits. A transgression of those limits imperils womankind, emasculates the race, induces disease, puts a premium on vice and makes the world ungodly. A man in the grip of the sensual desire is a man without moorings. If such a one were to guide society, to flood it with his writings and men were to be swayed by them, where would society be? And yet we have the very thing happening to-day. Supposing a moth whirling round a light were to record the moment of its fleeting joy and we were to imitate it regarding it as an exemplar, where would we be? I must declare with all the power I can command that sensual attraction even between husband and wife is unnatural. Marriage is meant to cleanse the hearts of the couple of sordid passions and take them nearer to God. Lustless love between husband and wife is not impossible. Man is not a brute. He has risen to a higher state after countless births in brute creation. He is born to stand, not to walk on all fours or crawl. Bestiality is as matter from spirit.

In conclusion I shall summarise the means to its attainment.

The first step is the realisation of its necessity.

The next is gradual control of the senses. A Brahmachari must needs control his palate. He must eat to live, and not for enjoyment. He must see only clean things and close his eyes before anything unclean. It is thus a sign of polite breeding to walk with one's eyes towards the ground and not wandering about from object to object. A Brahmachari will likewise hear nothing obscene or unclean, smell no strong, stimulating things. The smell of clean earth is far sweeter than the fragrance of artificial scents and essences. Let the aspirant to Brahmacharya also clean his hands and feet engaged in all the waking hours in healthful activity. Let him also fast occasionally.

The third step is to have clean companions—clean friends and clean books.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n709/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

The last and not the least is prayer. Let him repeat "Ramanama" with all his heart regularly every day and ask for divine grace.

None of these things are difficult for an average man or woman. They are simplicity itself. But their very simplicity is embarrassing. Where there is a will the way is simple enough. Men have not the will for it and hence vainly grope. The fact that the world rests on the observance, more or less of Brahmacharya or restraint, means that it is necessary and practicable—(From Navajivan by M. D.)

MUSSOLINI'S CONVERSION.

When Mussolini's former career is called to mind, especially of the period of his rabid socialism and hatred of the Church, as exhibited in his newspaper and public life, one is tempted to ask how the change from a good hater into a lover and faithful son of the Church came about. All know that the first explanation of the transformation must be traced to God's grace. "The Holy spirit breatheth whithersoever He willeth" and brings about marvellous changes of heart in his creatures; witness Papini's truly wonderful conversion. Many others could be quoted. But what changed Mussolini from a fervent socialist into an ardent Catholic? Next to God the cause was the Holy Father himself, the Saintly Benedict XV. The following came to RENARD on exceedingly good authority a couple of weeks ago. Mussolini, like a good patriot, went to the front and fought his best, leaving wife and children behind, as so many thousands of his countrymen did. There was nothing extraordinary in that of course. The wonderful thing is that no single communication from him reached his home during the whole time he was away at the front. Consequently what had been a most comfortable house fell bit by bit into dire straits of poverty. The house was stripped of its furniture till there was nothing more to sell, when the despairing wife settled down to bear her miserable lot as best she might. Quite suddenly the good soul thought of the Holy Father and his well-known practical love for the suffering. Her husband had made his name notorious for malignant activity against the Church and so he and his were scarcely objects of pity for the Pope's benefactions, it might be thought. Not so Mrs. Mussolini. With the great courage and trust of a devout Catholic in the Vicar of Christ's all-embracing charity for his suffering chidren, she set forth in a pitiful letter to the Holy Father how she and her children were on the verge of starvation, owing to having received no help from her husband who was fighting for Italy at the front. The good woman's trust was not misplaced, for she received a speedy answer to her appeal in the shape of a large sum of money that enabled her to replace the lost furniture of her house and help her and the children to live in comfost till the return of her husband. When Mussolini did at length return to his home it was to see his wife living in apparent luxury and with all the evidences of having a good time. The appurtenances of his home astonished him not a little. The prosperous appearance of his wife and children, the abundance and quality of the food she supplied, the money she had at her disposal, all aroused within him the worst suspicions and most violent anger at what he thought her treachery to him during his enforced absence from home. His wife thought she would teach her husband a lesson for his heartless neglect of her and children. So she let Mussolini think the worst of her, without offering any explanation of her sudden access to wealth.

"Oh, most treacherous and unfaithful of wives!" he burst out. "How little you were to be trusted, though so pious, is easily seen! Whilst I at the front was risking my life for my country every moment of the day and night, you were living in extreme luxury and sin forgetful of my existence!"

"Luxury and sin?" she rejoined. "How much money did you send me during your absence to keep the house going? How considerate of your wife and children you were is quite evident if you'll rack your memory for an account of the regular sums you sent us from the battlefield. Oh, we have lived most sumptuously on your pay and even increased our stock of wealth and belongings. Look around and judge for yourself," she cried out and pointing to the well-furnished houses. "All this from the money you did not send," she asseverated.

When Mrs. Mussolini saw her husband was beside himself with passionate anger and mortification she changed her tone and manner and smiled most sweetly upon him. Goging to her desk she took out a copy of her letter to the Holy Father and his reply to it. The explanation was more than sufficient to calm and shame the now mortified and repentant husband.

"The Pope has done all this for us! For me, Mussolini, his great enemy and most bitter opponent? How is it possible?" From that moment Mussolini was a changed man. From being a malignant enemy of the Holy Father and bitter renegade Catholic, he became what we know him now—the fervent Catholic saviour of his country. RENARD has been assured Mussolini is a monthly communicant, and would be a daily one, except for the exigencies of the State and the necessity of an always vigilant and armed guard to protect his person in his goings and comings.—The Catholic Leader, Madras.

STERILISATION AS PUNISHMENT.

If the State has the right to inflict death as a punishment, has it not a fortiori the right to inflict sterilisation, a lesser punishment? In U. S. A., where eleven States have laws providing for enforced sterilization, this is a very practical question, and it has recently been dealt with by a theologian in America.

It must be remembered that the right of capital punishment is not to be used arbitrarily. It is only justified when and because it measures up to certain requirements. Were sterilization, like capital punishment, known to fulfil the ends of legal penalties, it would probably be equally justified. But just here is the crux. For whether it be advocated to meet the expiatory, deterrent or curative purposes of punishment, in every instance it falls short. Certainly it has no expiatory value however compensatory at first blush it may appear for the crimes for which it is usually inflicted. Nor is it, as some say, a punishment in kind. A man steals a sum of money. Punishment in kind would deprive him of an equal sum, not of all ability to earn an honest livelihood. The punishment with which we are dealing is no counterbalance to any criminal act.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n710/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

It looks rather to the future than the past, permanently taking away from its victim the capacity for placing virtuous acts and enjoying important and fundamental rights, should he so desire. Again there is the feature of its perpetuity. While life imprisonment is a valid sanction for some offences, it is quite a different thing to punish men permanently for crimes whose normal penalties up to the present have been a few years in a penitentiary. In fact for this very reason one or two jurisdictions have held this form of punishment not merely unethical but unconstitutional because cruel and inhuman.

As a deterrent it is equally useless. Physically its infliction imports no great suffering, and apart from a prospect of physical suffering no punishment is an efficacious deterrent. Besides the law usually assumes that the criminals for whom it is prescribed are beyond the pale of being deterred. They are the so-called naturally vicious, degenerates, recidivists. It might be added that experience proves that such people, with their moral sense blunted, rather than grieve over this punishment, rejoice in it and interpret it as an added license. For it must be remembered that, as provided in the law, it does not materially affect the criminal's power to repeat his crimes. It neither destroys sexual desires nor the capacity for sexual relations. It merely impedes some of the effects, while the power, the passion, the pleasure remains. There is not a crime for which it is inflicted that may not be committed again, the only difference being that the forbidden pleasure will be accompanied by the added assurance that there will be no responsibility for offspring.

Curatively the object of punishment is the criminal himself, not his possible progeny. In the present instance, even when resorted to as a penalty, the latter are looked to. Besides, assuming that the criminal could reform, would not the absence of any hope of a future family remove one of the strongest natural motives and helps to this end? As has been well said, the penalty leaves its victim with less virtue and more vice. After all, punishment when inflicted by the State is meant to serve the moral law. The end of justice is to assist in protecting and advancing the morality of the community. Now this punishment does just the contrary. It perverts the ends of justice. It creates a class in the community full of concupiscence and assured of immunity from parenthood, and who shall say that it does not pave the way for an orgy of unbridled lust? —The Examiner, Bombay.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Retrenchment Officer to Bombay Government: Mr J. A Shillidy, I C. S., has been appointed Retrenchment Officer to the Bombay Government for a period of six months to consider and make proposals regarding retrenchment in expenditure, charged to Revenue, especially establishments.

League of Nations Opium Mission: The League of Nations Opium Mission after an audience with the Shah on the 31st May has departed for Europe.

A Convert to Hinduism: Miss Kusum Kumari Sarkar, Christian mistress of the Chittagong Girls' School, has been converted to Hinduism and married to Mr. Gangacharan Kusari according to Arya Samaj rites.

Travancore's New Dewan: We are glad to see that Mr. R. Krishna Pillai has been appointed to act as Dewan in place of Mr. Watts. He is a well-known official in Travancore State. He was Chief Secretary to the Government and he has also acted for sometime as Dewan.

War Against Girl Guides: The Primate of Hungary has issued an Ordinance prohibiting the establishment of girl guides' organisations in any institutions under his control. He declares that such organisations "have masculine character and pursue masculine aims," and that they "are opposed to the very soul of a girl."

The Vaniya Vaisya Conference: At the above Conference which was held recently at Madura resolutions were passed calling upon the Vaisyas to obliterate narrow social distinctions and curtail their expenditure during marriage and other occasions. In conclusion, the President, Mr. R. K. Shunmukham Chettiar, dwelt upon the necessity of cultivating a wide national outlook.

Mahomedans embrace Hinduism: A correspondent writes to the Bengalee from Jamdighi, District Gauhati, that a number of Mahomedan agriculturists of village Jamdighi, have voluntarily embraced Hinduism. Suddhi ceremony was performed with recitations of Gita. The new converts were taken to a local temple to offer worship. Three of the converts belong to the educated community and are Government employees.

Indian Sandhurst Deputation: The deputation of the Indian Sandhurst Committee sailed from Liverpool on board 'Montclare" on May 28th on a visit to Canada and the United States. It will see the Military Colleges at Kingston and Westpoint. The deputation has visited Sandhurst, Woolwich, the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, the Artillery School, Larkhill, the Cambridge University, St. Cyr, Ecole Polytechnique, and Lycee St. Louis.

The World Students' Conference: It is understood that Mahatma Gandhi, accompanied by Mahadeo Desai and Devadass Gandhi, will proceed in the course of the month to the World Students' Conference that is shortly to be held in Finland. Mahatmaji will also visit Germany, Italy and other places. Mr. Beharilal Ralliaram of the Y. M. C. A., Lahore, will represent India at the World Students' Conference and the International Y. M. C. A. Conference. He was the recipient of a farewell address from the League of Youth, Lahore, on the eve of his departure to Europe.

National Medical College in Bombay: Mr. C.F Andrews laid on the 26th May the foundation stone of the National Medical College Building, Bombay. The College is being conducted in the city since 1921. The College succeeded last October in securing the recognition of the College of Physicians and Surgeons for L. C. P. S. and M. C. P. S. examinations. Dr A.L. Nair, the well-known Bombay philanthropist, has built the building in the vicinity of Bai Yamunabai Nair Charitable Hospital, Byculla, which has provided clinical teaching facilities to the students of the institution. The College is at present in urgent need of rupees six lakhs to fully equip the building and make permanent arrangements for providing laboratory facilities to its 300 students of whom 20 are ladies.

India and the Opium Policy: A Reuter's message says: The Opium Commission of the League of Nations unanimously applauded the statement of Sir John Campbell on the new opium policy of the Government of India forbidding any

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n711/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

xport of opium unless for strictly medical or cientific purposes. Sir John Campbell emphasised hat even if certificates of important Governments sserted such restricted use, the Indian Government ould not allow export unless convinced that the opium ould not be put to other uses. The new policy would volve to India a loss of net revenue of approximately 1,300,000 sterling a year.

A Widow Re-marriage: A Free Press message ys that a widow re-marriage was performed on the 23rd lay at Naraingunj in the house of Babu Jnan Chandra as Muktear. The girl is now aged 13 who became widow the age of 11, and is the daughter of Babu Rajani anta Pal of Ekduaria. The bridegroom, Babu Pabitra umar Ghose, is a young man of 26 and is an electrical ngineer at Assansol. The bridegroom hails from Hashara Vikrampur) and is related to Babu Mahendra Chandra hose, Pleader, Dacca. Babus Kailash Chandra Chaavarti, Lalit Mohan Roy and Monindra Kumar Ghose, eaders, Dacca, and many local pleaders, muktears ctors and other gentlemen were present.

Cochin Depressed Classes' Memorial: According to the Trichur correspondent of the Hindu, the zhavas, Pulayas and other depressed classes in Cochin ave submitted to His Highness the Maharaja of Cochin memorial. The memorial states that of the 10 lakhs population in the State over 5 lakhs form the depressed classes, that they have no lands neither to cultivate nor to live in, that even if they are allowed the want of some Puduval lands, the caste-Hindu officers charge do not comply with the orders satisfactorily, nd that they could not send their boys to the schools, s at present they are often ill-treated by the caste-Hindus there. The memorial also makes mention of conomic distress and the antipathy of the caste-Hindus. he memorialists sorrowfully bring to the notice of the Maharaja their desire that a European should be appointed as the protector of the depressed classes as has een done by the Governments of Madras and Pudukottah.

Civic Mothers: Under this heading, the Praja Bandhu, Ahmedabad, writes: The election of a woman s a member of the Viramgam Municipality opens a new hapter in the civic life of Gujarat. This is, as far as e know, the first instance of a lady being elected as a ember of a Municipality in Gujarat, and we hope that any more ladies will come forward to serve as civic others. Civics like politics require the co-operation of en and women. If our women take part in civics and olitics like men our condition will improve far more rapidly. Women are meant to be the comrades of men nd not their servants. We have dethroned womanood from the high position it should occupy. Is it ny wonder if it acts as an impediment to our progress?

Chamars and Dhors Conference: The 1st session f the All-Maharashtra Chamars and Dhors Conference as opend on the 29th May in the hall of the New Poona ollege, Poona. Mr. L. B. Bhopatkar, M.L.C., presided. here was a fairly large gathering of the delegates from mportant places in Maharashtra. After Mr. P.N. Rajbhoj, he Secretary of the Conference, made a few introductory emarks, Mr. M.B. Kamble, formerly editor of the Marathi magazine "Asprishya Uddhar" as the Chairman of the eception Committee, delivered a speech of welcome. In the course of the speech Mr. Kamble laid special stress on the necessity of removing untouchability and spread of education amongst the Chamars and Dhors and the re-organisation of their industries of tanning, shoemaking, etc. He also recommended that the Conference should pass resolutions requesting the Government to reserve more seats for untouchable classes in the municipalities, the local boards and the Legislative Councils. He concluded after thanking the leaders of other castes who had helped the convening of that session. Mr. Bhopatkar then delivered his speech in the course of which he exhorted them to be more self-reliant in getting untouchability removed and in educating their castemen. The difficulties in their way of getting access to the public water places and entry into the public temples could be more easily removed by themselves by asserting their rights. He advised them to get rid of their notion that they were untouchables. Lastly he warned them that their goal should not be only to get Government services but that they should preserve and bring to prosperity the industries that were handed down to them by their ancestors.

Inquiry into the Bombay Textile Industry: It is stated that the Bombay Millowners' Association has agreed to a comprehensive inquiry into the causes of the present depression in the Bombay textile industry. The whole subject was fully discussed at two conferences the Committee of the Association had with Sir Charles Innes on April 1 and 3, when after a full discussion it was agreed, subject to confirmation by the general body of members, that there should be a comprehensive inquiry into the causes of the textile depression in Bombay. Subsequently the Committee of the Association carefully considered the whole position in the light of the views expressed by Sir Charles Innes and a resolution was passed agreeing to a comprehensive inquiry by the Tariff Board or any other Board appointed by the Government of India, subject to the draft terms of reference being mutually agreed upon. Before communicating this decision to the Government the Committee deemed it advisable to take the sanction of the general body of members and accordingly at a general meeting held on April 22 a resolution on the above terms was adopted nem con. This resolution was duly communicated to the Government who in their reply regretted inability to agree that the terms of reference to the Tariff Board in an inquiry should be mutually agreed upon between the Government and the industry which applied for inquiry. They, however, had no objection to sending the proposed terms of reference in draft to the Association and they agreed to consider carefully any observations the Committee might make before coming to a decision. The terms of reference provisionally drawn up by the Government of India are at present being considered by a special sub-Committee of the Association and the Committee's considered views will be communicated to the Government in due course.

A Magistrate's Clemency: An Anglo-Indian lad, E. Duroiselle, was sentenced recently by the Western Sub-divisional Magistrate, Rangoon, to be imprisoned till the rising of the court and also to pay a fine of Rs. 100 or in default to suffer three months' rigorous imprisonment on a charge of stealing some jewellery and a pair of binoculars from

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n712/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

the house of Mr. F. S. Cornelius of 48, Mandalay Road, on the 20th January 1926. His Worship in sentencing the accused said that although the accused had a previous conviction on his record, he hesitated to send him to prison even now for an offence committed under what he considered to be extenuating circumstances. He thought that the accused was a youth lacking in moral fibre, rather than possessed of criminal instincts, and that once having been convicted he had not received a proper chance at the hands of the public. It was a most unfortunate thing that when an offender had once paid the penalty prescribed by law the memory of his offence was not allowed to die a natural death, with the result that more often than not he continued to pay the penalty for the rest of his life. This, however, would only be remedied by the gradual education of public opinion to a higher sense of justice. In spite of his record and the fact that he had chosen to steal from the very people who were giving him shelter, His Worship declined to sentence the accused to imprisonment without giving him another chance.

Education Compulsory in Bharatpur: An Associated Press message says that at a recent prize-giving ceremony attended by the Maharaja Rana of Dholpur, the Maharaja of Bharatpur made an announcement to the effect that henceforward primary education, which has been free, shall also be compulsory within his State. He could have fulfilled his desire earlier, said the Maharaja, had not the floods and their after-effects disturbed him. Experience has shown, said the Maharaja, that something more is required than the building and maintaining of schools. The State must resolutely and boldly enforce the principles that every child shall be protected against the irreparable wrong which is inflicted on him if he is permitted to grow up in ignorance. Millions in this country are unable to read and write, not because there are no schools within their reach when they are young, but because their parents, either through ignorance, poverty or selfishness, keep them away from the school. The Indian agriculturists stand utmost in need of primary education. The industry can grow only when the peasant brings in advanced machinery to his use. These he can do only when he has learnt a little. The community suffers a severe economic loss if the industrial efficiency of those by whom wealth is primarily produced is impaired. As the nation advances many agencies for improving the condition of the people will be spontaneously brought into operation. Many schemes of philanthropy now prove abortive, because the people are not in a position to utilize the advantages brought within their reach.

The first Naidu Ladies' Conference: Rao Saheb M. Lingaya Naidu of Belgaum sends us the following:—The first session of the Naidu Ladies' Conference met simultaneously with the 2nd Naidu Conference at Madras under the presidency of Mrs. J. Venkatanarayana Naidu, the wife of the Commissioner of the Madras Corporation, in the 1st week of April 1926 and the following resolutions among others were discussed and unanimously adopted:—This Conference requests that measures for compulsory primary education be brought into force at the earliest possible moment for girls and boys. This Conference exhorts all the Naidu Ladies to take to domestic arts and home industries. This Conference requests all the Naidu ladies to devote themselves to the learning of the Telugu, the (Matri Bhasha) mother-tongue, immediately. This Conference requests the leaders of the Naidu community to provide facilities for the higher education of the Naidu ladies. This Conference requests that for the education of the orphans and poor boys and girls suitable scholarships be provided for and a Hostel be established and in that behalf requests that funds be collected forthwith. This Conference requests the social workers to try to eradicate the evil system of giving and receiving dowries that has rooted itself in the community. This Conference requests that the unnecessary protraction of the number of days in celebration of marriages and the unnecessary expenses be put an end to. This Conference proposes that a Committee be appointed to safeguard the interests of the poor and the neglected boys and girls of the community. This Conference requests that on the occasion of marriages and such other ceremonial occasions donations be contributed to the social uplift.

ADVERTISEMENTS

MATRIMONIAL.

WANTED a grown up girl or virgin widow of any Brahmin Caste to marry a Madhwa Brahmin aged 29 in Tanganyika Government Service on Sh. 500/- per mensem. The bride should be prepared to accompany. For further particulars apply to R. R. C/o the Indian Social Reformer.

SERVICE GUARANTEED. Wanted 5 candidates for July Session. Service or FULL MONEY BACK. Apply with 8 annas stamps for copy of Rules. Civil Service College, Delhi.

PROF. ERNEST WOOD'S FAMOUS BOOKS.

CONCENTRATION—A PRACTICAL COURSE.

This extremely popular book, which has already undergone six editions, has now been thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged. Mostly Re-written.

Contents: Success in Life—The Magic Box—Aids to Concentration—Chains of Gold—Concentration in Daily Life—Control of the Body and the Senses—The Removal of Intruding Thoughts—Gymnastics of Concentration—What Meditation is—Methods of Meditation—Mantric and Symbolic Meditation—Obstacles to Meditation—Contemplation—Conclusion.

Price. Wrappers, Re. 1 Boards, Re. 1-4 Cloth, Re. 1-8.

CHARACTER-BUILDING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

Contents: Why you must Develop Character—What Character is—Preparing the Ground—The Foundations—The Walls—The Roof—The Verandah—The Gardens—The Orchard—The Three Fundamental Virtues—Testing the Character—The Man of Will—The Man of Love—The Philanthropist—The Man of Understanding—The Philosophy—The Way of Imagination—The Magician—The Man of Investigation—The Scientist—The Man of Reverence—The Devotee—The Man of Beauty—The Artist—The Science of the Emotions—The Three Fundamental Vices—Ultimate Aims—The Great Law.

MEMORY—TRAINING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

"A capital essay on the training of memory, with practical exercises of self-tuition."—Review of Reviews.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n713/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Social Reform Directory.

Under this heading we propose to publish from time to time a list and short accounts of Institutions of Social Reform, as we are receiving enquiries regarding them. Secretaries or other officials connected with such institutions are requested to send us, free of charge, in brief, accounts of their institutions on the model of those given below. We particularly request information regarding institutions for girls and young women such as Orphanages, Widows' Homes, Hostels for women-students and Rescue Homes.

The Seva Sadan Society, Poona.

The activities of this Society may be classed under three heads: social, educational and medical. The social work consists in visiting and feeding the poor, doing rescue work among women, visiting jails and maintaining a home for destitute women and children. In the educational line, the Seva Sadan conducts home classes for grown-up women, primary and secondary schools and normal classes to turn out trained teachers. Very good results have been obtained by the training of nurses by the Society. To enable women to be self-supporting and socially useful, the Society provides training in cookery, music, hygiene and a host of other things. The Ranisahib of Sangli is the President, and Mr. Devadhar, the organising Secretary of the Society.

The Bombay Seva Sadan Society.

The object of this Society is the general uplift of women. Classes in English, cookery, needlework etc., are conducted and a boarding house is maintained where women students who come from the mofussil reside. Miss B. Engineer is the Secretary and the institution has a building of its own situated in Gamdevi, Bombay.

The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.

Much of the spade work done towards the amelioration of the condition of the women of Bombay is due to this organisation. It conducts a Hostel for women students and a Widows' Home. Elocution and essay competitions exclusively for girls are held annually under its auspices. Scholarships to women and girl students studying in Schools and Colleges are provided by this Association. Mr. D. G. Dalvi and Mrs. Kashalkar are the Joint Secretaries.

Sir Ganga Ram's Widow Re-marriage Society.

The Society has hitherto mostly confined its activities to Upper India. It publishes a monthly journal in English and numerous free pamphlets in different languages. The Society started an Ashram in 1923 under the charge of a Hindu lady. It had prior to this a Widows' Home and a High School for Girls. A paid worker of the Society visits 271 stations, mostly in the Punjab, several times in the year. The Society has its headquarters at Lahore and has made several efforts to enlist the co-operation of similar institutions in other parts of India. The Honorary Secretary of the Society is Lala Lajpat Rai Sahani.

Kanya Mahavidyalya, Jullunder City.

The avowed object of this institution is to give useful and practical training to women so as to fit them for domestic life. The courses of studies prescribed have this object in view and students are not prepared for University Examinations. The Vidyalya maintains also a Widows' Home and an Ashram or Orphanage. Kumari Pandita Lajjavati is the Hon. Principal of the Vidyalya which has done much to improve the position of women in Northern India.

Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

This excellent institution is still in its infancy and owes its existence to the indefatigable efforts of Yamini Purna Tilakamma. It is a Rescue Home for the uplift of the Devadasi community. Propaganda work on behalf of this institution is carried on both in Madras and the mofussil by the Kalavantula Sabha.

The League of Mercy, Bombay.

It is a Society for aiding, retrieving and succouring fallen European and Eurasian women and girls in the Bombay Presidency. It is one of the few institutions in the city which undertake Rescue work and assist young women found in morally undesirable surroundings by providing shelter and help.

A Widows' Home At Puri.

At the instance of the Hindu Mahasabha, Babu Gopa Bandhu Das has opened a Widows' Home at Puri, which is one of the important places of pilgrimage for Hindus in Northern India, to give shelter to widows and other women who get stranded there.

A Widow Marriage Home at Vayalpad.

A Widow Marriage Home has been recently started at Vayalpad, Chittoor Dist., Madras Presidency, to promote widow marriages. Widows from all castes who desire to marry and men who desire to marry widows are requested to correspond with the President of the Home.

Vidhwa Ashram at Aligarh.

A Vidhwa Samrakshini Sabha is established at Aligarh for the protection and education of Hindu widows, with Rai Sahib Lala Brij Lal, retired Deputy Collector, as President and Dr. Chandra Mohan Mathur as Secretary. Facilities are also afforded to the widows for remarriage.

The Pandharpur Orphanage and Foundling Asylum.

This institution is maintained at Pandharpur by the Bombay Prarthana Samaj. The Foundling Home is the only institution of the kind founded and maintained under non-Christian auspices. During the half a century the institution has been in existence, it has been the means of saving hundreds of Hindu widows from sin and crime. All communications should be directed to the Secretary.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n714/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE
Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed ... ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,003
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Rese ve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, asur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2½% from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5½% per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co, Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)

Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed or daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moder ate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( „ „ ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily, balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n715/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Katol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Balubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Jaganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant-Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

FREE FOR THE ASKING.

SEVEN UPANISHADS.

( Isha, Kena, Katha, Prasna, Mundaka, Taitiriya and Aitareya.)

Text in Deva Nagari with English translation and notes by H. R. Bhagavat, 2nd edition, Price Rs. 2-8-0.

FEE IN JUNE 1926.

(1) Any Hindu B.A. B. L., (2) any Hindu Professors (3) any Hindu Head Master of a High School, (4) any Hindu graduate whose age exceeds 30, (5) any Hindu pleader whose age exceeds 30, or (6) any Hindu Government or State servant getting Rs. 100 or more per mensem, can get the above book free of cost on sending three annas for postage. If he so chooses, he should send two annas more for postal registration.

All letters bearing any date of June 1926 will be attended to.

H. R. BHAGAVAT, SADASHIV PETH, POONA CITY.

A. M. JOSHI & CO

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road, Fort, BOMBAY.
10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. | 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED | ... ... | ,, | 5,93 42,125 |
| PAID UP | ... ... | ,, | 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS | ... ... | ,, | 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n716/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a

Tonic?

IF SO
use only the world renowned

"Atank Nigrah Pills."

Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness, digestive troubles and similar complaints.

Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)
Bombay Branch:
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

卐

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,
10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ¼ Column. | | ½ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| 13 | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 26 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 52 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS,

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

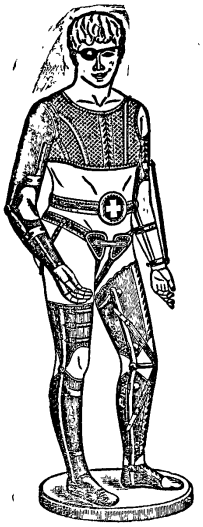
https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n717/mode/1up

realpatidar.com



RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY: No. 4.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2 0-0. Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION ?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to :—

THE MANAGER

The " Indian Social Reformer."

Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n718/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY JUNE 12, 1926 No. 41

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Music before Mosques.
The International Labour Conference.
Situation in Egypt.
The Moscl Convention.
Bombay Jails.
Remedy Worse than the Disease.
Awakening among Gurkhas
Politics and their Social Basis.
The Cattle Problem.
The Condition of Hindu Women.
An Uncanny Peep into the Future?
Immigration Law of U. S. A.
Punjab Female Education Conference.
Abolish Marriage!
What Prohibition has done in America.
Invalidation of Ceremonial Emoluments Bill.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Music Before Mosques: The Government of Bengal has issued orders relating to this vexed question, as the leaders of the Hindu and Mahomedan communities in Calcutta were unable to come to an agreement. In Calcutta City, it is laid down, music should cease when a procession passes a mosque during the five periods of prayer prescribed by the Koran. In the case of one mosque, namely, the Nakhooda mosque, music should cease at all hours when a procession passes it. This seems to us to be a fair and reasonable arrangement, and we are surprised to learn that there are people of both communities who raise objections to it. So far, however, only the Bengal Khilafat Committee has publicly expressed its disapproval of the orders. We trust that Government will be firm. Every religion has its extremists, and we are inclined to regard the fact that the extremists of both religions are dissatisfied with the orders of the Bengal Government as the best proof of their impartiality. Hindus and Mahomedans must recognise that India is not exclusively Hindu or Mahomedan country and without the spirit of mutual accommodation they must be perpetually at strife with each other. The attitude of the two religions towards music is one of their many fundamental differences. Hinduism exalts music in worship as the supremest kind of worship, and the Gita extols the Sama Veda, the Veda which is sung as the chief of the four Vedas. Islam, on the contrary, seems to regard it as a form of sensuous enjoyment incompatible with the austerity proper in times of prayer. The fact that notwithstanding such fundamental differences, amounting almost to antagonisms, mosques and temples exist in many places in close proximity, shows that Hindus and Mahomedans have in the past accommodated themselves to each other's ideas. Why they find it difficult to do so now, is a question which baffles understanding. In the circumstances, Government must enforce their orders irrespective of extreme views on both sides, and they may rely upon the support of the very large section of Hindus and Mahomedans who regret the growing intolerance on both sides.

The International Labour Conference: The Conference of the International Labour Organization which was formed as an adjunct to the League of Nations by the Versailles Treaty, has been since holding its sessions every year. This year, however, two sessions were thought necessary. The eighth session which recently concluded its sitting at Geneva was the ordinary session at which general questions were raised and discussed. A special session to be held shortly will discuss two specific issues bearing on the shipping trade. Among important subjects dealt with by the eighth session were the choice of the employer's delegate from India, the comparative conditions of labour in India and Japan, the appointment of a committee to enquire into the question of native labour and the appointment of an Indian correspondent to the International Labour Organization. The validation of the nomination of Sir Arthur Froom as the employers' delegate from India by the Conference as against Mr. Narottam Morarjee who has been unanimously nominated by all the Indian chambers and industrial organisations in this country, brings into strong relief the impossibility of India getting adequate justice from even such an impartial body as the International Labour Conference. It remains to be seen whether the ninth session will also do the same In this connection, we wish to draw attention to the emphatic and strong protest which the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay, has sent to the ninth session against the nomination of Sir Arthur Froom as the employers delegate. It points out that according to the clause of the Versailles Treaty only the indigenous industrial organisations ought to be consulted and not the foreign European organisations, who have no locus standi in the country. The conditions of labour obtaining in Japan came in for vigorous criticism at the hands of Sir Arthur Froom at the Conference, but beyond consenting to prohibit night work for women and children from July next, Japan showed no inclination to regulate her hours of work according to the Washington Convention. The two resolutions on native labour and the appointment of an Indian correspondent at Geneva which the Conference accepted on the suggestion of Lala Lajpat Rai, are calculated to make a searching inquiry into the conditions of sweated labour in Asia and Africa and acquaint the outside world with the real conditions of labour obtaining in India.

Situation in Egypt: The return of the Nationalists by an overwhelming majority of three to one in the recent parliamentary elections held in Egypt and the alleged desire of Zaghlul Pasha, the famous Nationalist leader, to take up office himself in spite of old age and ill-health, naturally caused much consternation in British circles both in Egyt and Great Britain. It may be remembered that the declaration of Egyptian Independence in 1922 was conditional on four reservations to be settled later on by negotiation. The said reservations relate to the control of the Sudan, British and foreign interests in Egypt, control of the Suez Canal and British military occupation of parts of Egypt. Lord Lloyd, our late Governor and now High Commissioner of Egypt, tried to dissuade Zaghlul from taking up office himself, but only in vain, and, seeing

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n719/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

his intransigeant attitude with regard to the four reservations, he cabled for instructions from home. The ordering of a British warship to the Egyptian ports just at the moment was apparently meant to show that Britain was prepared to take strong measures if things came to a head. Fortunately, Zaghlul has at length been prevailed upon to entrust the formation of the Cabinet to Adly Pasha, the leader of the Liberals, with whom he has entered into a semi-coalition. The fact that Zaghlul has accepted the responsible position of President of the Assembly and that the Cabinet contains several of his friends is a guarantee of his intention to help the new Ministry.

The Mosul Convention: With the signing of the Mosul Convention between Turkey and Britain last Saturday, the long-drawn-out hostility between the two countries and the dispute over the Mosul frontier comes to an end. The frontier laid down in the Agreement is virtually the Brussels line with slight modifications, involving five square miles favourable to Turkey. Seventy-five kilometres on either side are to be demilitarised and this is to be done by a Turco-Irakian military commission presided over by a Swiss, that will meet six months hence. The inhabitants of the ceded territory are also given the option of adopting Turkish nationality. The most important clause of the Agreement is that Turkey recognises Iraq and in return for the abandonment of her economic claims upon that country receives a 10 per cent share in the Mosul oil. Thus both parties benefit by the bargain. Britain retains Mosul, while Turkey is bought off with a share in the Mosul oil. The Agreement thus gives the lie direct to the contention oft-repeated by British statesmen that it is not oil that makes them stay in Mosul but the safety and integrity of Iraq. The settlement was made possible owing as much to the reluctance of Turkey to go to war as to the growing apprehensions of Britain about the Turko-Soviet Treaty and the Turko-Persian Pact, which were more or less intended as a counterblast to the Locarno Treaty. As the Observer's diplomatic correspondent wrote, the settlement "will open the way to diplomatic and economic collaboration between Great Britain, Turkey and Iraq and will remove one of the unsettling factors which has had its effect not only on the Egyptian and Indian affairs but on many important aspects of Western European diplomacy."

Bombay Jails: The Indian Daily Mail recently published an article on the condition of jails in the Bombay Presidency from "one with practical experience." It is all the same story of tyranny of convict officers over prisoners, the unwholesome nature of the food offered to prisoners and the unsatisfactory system of non-official visitors which the public have by now become so well acquainted with as a result of the revelations of the Punjab Jails Enquiry Committee. The writer says that luxuries are obtainable in jails at prices 100 to 500 per cent higher than that of the outside shops, a state of things worse than that obtaining in the Punjab jails. He regards the food supplied in the Bombay jails as extremely poor and far below that of the rest of India which "hungry roadside beggars would refuse." Many prisoners, he says, go nightly to bed hungry. The personnel of jail visitors is the most unsatisfactory, for they are selected from a certain type of individuals by Government, and the worst of it is that in any case the prisoner makes real complaints to the visitors, not only does he get no redress, but the chances are that he will be rewarded with some punishment. These things do certainly no credit to the Bombay Government and it behoves them to look into the matter immediately. The writer rightly says that it is after release that the main problem of jail reform arises. When a prisoner is turned out of a jail penniless, friendless and homeless, he only returns to it. The public should give a chance to a fallen man and, apparently, the Bombay Prisoners' Aid Society has not been able to do much in this direction. The suggestion of the writer for the payment of the prisoner for work in jails so that it may help him on release as in England, is well worth consideration.

Remedy Worse than the Disease: All sorts of fantastic solutions have been suggested for communal riots. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru was the first in the field. He suggested that because political ambition is often the real cause of communal riots, the area where such riots take place should be disfranchised. Pandit Motilal Nehru, the Swaraj Party leader, went one step further and declared that the area should not only be disfranchised but that no titles should be recommended to any one in the affected portion and that Government officials there should be deprived of their promotion. And lastly comes Babu Shivaprasad Gupta with his novel cure for the communal malady. He admits that communal representation is the root cause of the communal strifes, but his remedy for them is curious. He suggests that the Governor of the Province in which the communal strife occurs should be forthwith dismissed and impeached before the Parliament and that the Collector, the Commissioner and the Police officers of the division should all be punished severely. One wonders how such high-placed men could lend their hands to such remedies which are as fantastic as they are worse than useless. These solutions, besides their inherent objection in that they involve the principle of vicarious punishment, fail to take account of one important fact, namely, that communal riots are often fomented by culprits who are beyond the reach of law.

Awakening among Gurkhas: The Gurkhas are the sturdy Nepalese people who supply the British Indian Army with some of its toughest fighters. Beyond their military reputation, they have remained a backward class. But we are glad that there are sure signs of awakening among them. A Gurkha League has been formed and at its second session held at Dehra Dun resolutions were passed advocating social reforms. We particularly note that in one of these it was resolved that the custom of drinking alcoholic and other intoxicating drinks should be strictly prohibited on occasions of marriage, investiture of sacred thread, and other ceremonies and that any Gurkha breaking the resolution should be socially ostracised forthwith. The resolution was carried unanimously.

MANAGER'S NOTICE.

Reminders are being sent to those subscribers whose subscriptions have fallen in arrears and to those whose subscriptions are due for the current year. Those who are in arrears are specially requested to remit the amounts due without delay.

SOCIAL REFORM DIRECTORY.

Notice.

All communications intended for the Social Reform Directory columns should reach the office by Wednesday and should be directed to the Editor, Social Reform Directory.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n720/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JUNE 12, 1926.

POLITICS AND THEIR SOCIAL BASIS.

When Mahatma Gandhi was prosecuted, the Non-Co-operation movement had gone out of operation. It had been formally suspended three months previously, and a constructive programme of a predominantly social character had been adopted as the programme of the National Congress. It is our firm conviction that if Mahatma Gandhi had been left free to carry on the programme, a good deal of social consolidation would have been effected during the two years which he spent in jail. His imprisonment was a colossal blunder from every point of view, including that of "peace and order" which British rule in India professes to be its principal mission to maintain. When the Swaraj Party was formed during his absence, it was our earnest wish that it would use the Legislatures, which were boycotted during the Non-Co-operation days, to advance the constructive Bardoli programme. Had it done so, we are perfectly convinced in the light of subsequent events that it could have done much solid work, and that it would not be going through the process of disintegration which it is visibly doing to-day. A good deal can be done through the Legislatures and the Executive administration to place the depressed classes in an economic and educational position in which they could not have continued to be untouchable even if they themselves had wished to do so. Prohibition could have been adopted in the provinces where the Swarajists, either by themselves or in combination with others, commanded a majority. Such combination would have been possible in more provinces, on the basis of a social programme. The differences between Hindus and Mahomedans which have now hardened, would have been counteracted by the growth of a habit of legislative co-operation in projects which would have been equally in consonance with the interests and sentiments of the two communities, and this habit would have gradually affected far wider regions of life and conduct. Joint action and everyday co-operation in public service is the surest antidote to narrow caste and communal prejudices. The leaders of the Swaraj Party, however, did not see their way to take this course. They set out on a mission of obstruction and wrecking, of political incendiarism in fact. John Brown in one of his delightfully suggestive musings ascribes the attraction to the average man of a dog-fight in the streets to the pleasure instinctive in human nature at the sight of "energy in action." For a short while, the glamour of a destructive movement caught the masses and sent the Swarajists in large numbers to the Legislatures. Once there, however, the inherent weakness of a wrecking policy asserted itself. The futility of it became so intolerable that the Swarajists could only seek relief in walking out of the Councils which they had taken so much trouble to enter.

If the schism of the Responsive Co-operationists had for its principal object to correct this initial mistake of the Swaraj Party, it would have created more enthusiasm among those who believe that social reconstruction is the greatest need of the country. But while it left this where it was, it concentrated on the acceptance of office as Ministers as a logical and necessary concomitant of entering the Councils. A battle between the two branches of the Swarajists was fought on this issue and the Responsive Co-operationists have lost it. This was to be expected as there is in the popular mind at the present time an inveterate prejudice against the acceptance of office by political leaders comparable to the Hindu sentiment against the remarriage of widows. As much can be done without taking office, the Responsive Co-operationists' plea for acceptance of office has not appealed to the people as much as the Swarajists' plea for not accepting office. If the struggle at the forthcoming elections is solely between those who want to hold office and those who are pledged not to take office, the former will not be at much advantage in relation to the latter. If, on the other hand, the Responsive Co-operationists emphasise work in the Legislatures on the lines of a well-thought-out constructive programme in preference to the Swarajist tactics of obstruction and wrecking and base their plea for acceptance of office upon that, they will make a greater appeal at least to a considerable section of thinking men and women. In fact, even without taking office, an effective group pledged to the constructive programme, which need not necessarily be in a majority in the Councils, can impose its policy on the Ministers and on the bureaucracy. A strong opposition can sometimes direct policy more effectively than the same party in office. The newly formed Indian National Party labours under more or less the same defect, but it is unembarrassed by the inheritance of a tradition of Non-Co-operation and obstruction. The method of the new Party will be in consonance with the method which has produced the best result in the social field. The Indian National Party, however, cannot make much headway unless it develops a constructive, social side, and base its political aspirations upon a social programme. The failure of Mahatma Gandhi's promise to bring Swaraj within a year was mainly due to the fact that the social readjustments, which alone can make Swaraj possible, can not be compassed within such a short period. We have before this advocated the formation of a party which will have a well-considered social programme in the prosecution of which it will work with all parties and with Government. The time is not apparently ripe for one yet, but if our political parties persist in ignoring the social foundations of self-government, we have no doubt that the country will come to realise the need of a new social reform party at no distant date. For our own part, we can feel no enthusiasm for a political party without a social programme. It is like salt which has lost savour,— good for nothing.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n721/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE CATTLE PROBLEM.

Of all the agricultural problems that await solution the cattle problem is the most urgent. The part which cattle play in a predominantly agricultural country like India is not inconsiderable. Not only do they constitute the mainstay of agricultural operations, but the quality of the milch cattle has a direct bearing on the health and well-being of the people, especially of women and children. The two striking facts about Indian cattle at present are their utter insufficiency in numbers and their poor quality. Some statistics may be interesting in this connection. The number of cattle per 100 of population in India is only 59, while it is 74 in Denmark, 79 in the United States, 80 in Canada, 120 in Cape Colony, 150 in New Zealand, 259 in Austria, 323 in the Argentine Republic and 500 in Uruguay. Again, there are only about 24 millions of cattle available in India for cultivating about 228 million acres, that is to say, one pair of cattle has to till about 19 acres, whereas this would require in the ordinary course four pairs of cattle. No wonder the outturn of crops in India is considerably low as compared with other countries. The position is in no way better with the milch cattle and it is estimated that their number is scarcely enough to supply one-eighth of the population with a fair quantity of milk. There has been a progressive deterioration in the quality of the cattle also. Indian milch cattle in Akbar's time, according to the Aini-i-Akbari, used to give 20 quarts of milk a day and draught cattle could walk faster than horses. But now our country cows give only one seer of milk per head per day on an average where they were giving five seers even 25 years ago, and the bullocks too are capable of doing only half as much work as they did before. The result of this deficiency of cattle in quality as well as in quantity has been an abnormal rise in the price of cattle, crops, milk and milk products on the one hand and a progressive deterioration in the physique of the people and the prevalence of disease and an abnormal death-rate among women and children on the other. The notoriously high rate of infant mortality in India is no doubt due to the fact that during the last sixty years or so the price of milk has risen more than 40 times. The Sanitary Commissioner, U. P., once pointed out that, by cheapening the price of milk so as to bring it within the reach of the poorer classes, more would be effected towards reducing infant mortality than the presence of any number of trained dhais would accomplish. The average shortness of life in India which is only 24 years, while it is 45 years in the United Kingdom, and the large increase of tuberculosis cases, are also attributed to the same cause.

How to preserve and improve our cattle is therefore the most pressing problem of the moment. The Agricultural Department, we are glad to note, is devoting much attention to cattle-breeding. But it is upon the satisfactory provision of cattle crop that the real solution of the cattle problem depends. Lack of fodder is one of the greatest handicaps of the Indian agriculturist. The Indian farmer, unlike his European compeer, does not make any provision for the cattle during the hot weather with the result that they have often to starve for want of fodder. The Government's policy of gradually encroaching upon the forests and common pastures where cattle could graze freely, is also not a little responsible for this state of things. In reviewing the Agricultural Operations for 1924-25, we noticed how the Agricultural Department is trying to supply fodder by the introduction of the Egyptian clover, but much still remains to be done in this direction. We would draw attention in this connection to the suggestions which Mr. A. Galletti, the Collector of Ganjam, makes in a communication to Young India. According to him, Indian cattle can be improved only by India growing cattle crop instead of merely depending on common pastures and that by the system of rotation cattle crop can be grown side by side with food grains without diminishing the returns of the latter. Small holdings and poverty, he says, do not stand in the way of the Indian agriculturist adopting these methods. His point is that if he keeps cattle at all, he must keep them as he does his own children and see that they have their food daily which he cannot do unless he keeps half his land at least, but better three-fifths, to grow fodder, so that when he next plants a cereal where the fodder grew, he will find it yields three times as much. Rotated crops, it is also urged, require no more expenditure of money than stable crops. As Mahatma Gandhi remarks, the application of Mr. Galletti's remedy depends upon the agricultural education of the large mass of Indian humanity, but every agriculturist can make an honest attempt to try it and publish results.

Enough has been said already to show how hopelessly inadequate Indian cattle are to meet the agricultural requirements of the country. Those who have been perusing the series of articles headed "Why there is slaughter and how to prevent it," contributed by Mr. V. G. Desai to the columns of Young India, will be struck with the appalling depletion of what little cattle we possess by means of slaughter, export etc. Cattle are slaughtered first and foremost for their hides. India is supposed to supply nearly a third of the world's requirements in hides, and the heavy slaughter of Indian cattle is in no small measure due to this world's leather hunger. It is stated that slaughter increases in sympathy with the rise in prices of hide. The prices of dried meat, fat, bones, etc., constitute the second cause affecting slaughter. Thirdly, the fat of cattle is used in the manufacture of soaps, candles and glycerin, and unscrupulous merchants use the superior sorts for adulterating ghi. Tons and tons of the inferior sorts are also consumed by our weaving mills in the process of sizing. Mr. Hamilton, Director of Agriculture, Punjab, once remarked that the rising prices of hides, meat, bones, blood and fat are daily bringing the value of a dead buffaloe near to its live value. A second cause of the depletion of cattle is their export to foreign countries. Economists may glibly talk of the stimulus offered as a result of the export trade to cattle-owners to feed their stock well and to breed the best quality and the consequent raising in the

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n722/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

quality of the stock in the country, but this is true only of a country which has enough and to spare. As it is, in India, it will only have the effect of enhancing prices so as to place the animals beyond the purchasing power of an average man and thus bringing about a deficiency of plough and milch cattle. And lastly export of cattle to towns only prepares them for the slaughter houses. The cattle there are kept in wretched, unnatural and unhealthy conditions and all manner of torture is inflicted upon them by the owners in order to extract the last drop of milk from them, so much so that in an overwhelming majority of cases they become sterile and fit for nothing but slaughter. Often, the he-calves are simply starved off by withdrawing milk from them or driven away to forests to become the prey of wild beasts. These are the various methods by which the cattle resources of India are being exhausted and in these directions there is a vast field for the activities of our Cow Protection Leagues and Societies. Legislation should also be undertaken to prevent the slaughter and export of cattle, and we whole-heartedly support the bill which Pandit Shamlal Nehru has introduced in the Central Legislature to prevent the export of cattle to foreign countries and which is to come off for discussion in August next.

THE CONDITION OF HINDU WOMEN.

(By Mr. Nandgopal Varma, B. Sc.)

Woman, the better part of human creation, was made to bestow comfort, pleasure and bliss on man, her hard-fated companion. Woman is the soul of domestic joy, the torch that spreads about it the charming light of peace, love, and kindness. Woman all the world over has been known to embody the finer sympathies and subtler delicacies of human evolution, but in India she has been from time immemorial the emblem of purity, piety and sanctity; the synonym for virtue, faith, and devotion. India stands out unique in the history of the world with her long imperishable list of women having played at the fiddle of Death in the most graceful and dignified manner in the cause of spotless conjugal love and unstinted virtue. Indian History through and through teams with examples of voluntary death, in most cases, of ladies of royal birth and princely status, in the name of honour. It is indeed hard to imagine a princess like Padmani or Sardar Bai born and bred on the lap of luxury, furiously fighting the enemy who dared to challenge the sanctity of her conjugal ties.

A Joan of Arc may be loved in France and a Nightingale adored in England, but when we in India, nay, our girls even recall to memory the dreary scenes of battles fought single-handed amidst nauseating heaps of slaughtered soldiers by Ahilya and many others of her sex, a thrill of joy and pride lifts us for a while from the low and sneaking frailties of this earth.

How precious must have been honour to these benign and celestial souls that cast off their earthly bodies like garments outworn, into the all-consuming bonfire on the skirts of Udaipur! How dear must have been the cause of virtue to those pretty hearts that perished themselves to unregistered death in the streets of Bundi and Jaisalmir!

But those good old days are now gone. Though undoubtedly Hindu woman of the twentieth century maintains full well the dignity of her sister of the sixteenth, society has wonderfully changed and certain grave social problems have arisen that urgently call for a change in our mood and attitude as to the strings of relation between husband and wife in the Hindu fold. The number of Hindu widows is alarmingly large and it is growing from year to year. Sati was good enough, a romantic practice indeed, so long as it was not forced. But nowadays neither law nor good sense allows this practice. It is thus out of the question. Then, shall we leave the widow to her own fate under the iron eye of her mother-in-law and the scorn of the world at large?

This is neither just nor right. It is true that the dying husband will expire an hour earlier if he were to know that his spouse shall be committed to the care of another man, when he will be no more. It is equally true that the unhappy widow will be abashed and agonised a thousand times before she consents to give her hand to a second man. But the question is how to deal with the problem of the daily increasing moral laxity and domestic bitterness that owe their origin in a large measure to the existence of virgin widows who live without hope and exposed to the storms of vicious prodigality and sensuous pleasures on all sides.

You cannot set at naught human instinct. You cannot easily baffle what is inborn in human nature. How long can you, O, hard-hearted men, wait single after the separation of your so-called better-halves. And then, have women less of earth and more of heaven in them that your codes of law and scriptures of morality fall dumb over their destinies? Humbug and cruel is the logic that we often advance to nip their youthful aspirations in the bud; and pernicious and inhuman are our own actions and examples that we 'involuntarily and helplessly' put forth to its proof. Only put yourselves in their position and the problem will be amicably solved.

You cite exceptions, but do not exceptions only prove the rule? Why, for what frenzied reward in heaven should those poor creatures rot in a life of heart-rending torment, forced penance, and obsequious servitude? It should be well borne in mind that even good actions wrought under decree of force lose their essence and go with little reward. Forced virtue is like jewels thrown into the sea. The misgivings of some that widow remarriage will only make rapid to loosen the sacred chains of wedded life, that wives will become lax in their allegiance to their husbands, and chastity of love will be a thing of the bye-gone days, are simply visionary phantoms of their own brains' creation. They are entirely groundless and merely a perspective of the popular horror which is but usual on the eve of any great movement.

Of course, the apostles of widow remarriage must, as a rule, bear in mind that they injure the cause if they go about pleading for whole-sale widow remarriage. Those of our widows, young though

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n723/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

they may be, who can manage to rise above carnal desires and earthly requirements, have always been and would always be the sacred pillars of Hindu Society, its very life and soul. They are a credit to our nation; they make our race glorious. Their protection must be an avowed duty and their pollution, a sacrilege and infamy that will drown us in sin and blasphemy from top to toe.

But again, may it be said that it would be a misled philosophy and bastard theology that exhorts people to do what, in the face of their short-comings, they cannot do? Those who can, let them do because in that way they bring us honour. But what about those who cannot do; isn't it foolish to be cruel to them? After all how will you stem the overflowing tide of prostitution that may one day sweep over the very existence of our race. More and more menacing are growing, from day to day, its power and sway.

Therefore while widow remarriage is no duty it also should cease to be a curse any longer. It ought to be left to the clear option of the party most concerned. Fundamental social rules are, of course, in no case to be defied.

There is no gain-saying the fact that it is honourable for a widow to live a life of piety, purity and poverty.

But we have no right to thrust it on those who, like most of us their wrong-headed masters and presumptuous liege lords, are either entirely unable to practise it or woefully break in the way when under the false shame of the neighbours and relatives and the bondage of society, or in some cases, though very rare cases now, from the instincts of their own womanly modesty, they take to such a hard course of life. What after all is marriage for, and what at all was it meant to mean to human society? It is nothing if it is not a systematic regulation and a scientific manipulation of the wild and turbulent parts, (the lower self as it is known in the moral code) of the intricate mechanism of impulses, emotions and sentiments of both sexes. Why then, if it be so, should we shrink from remarriage or marriage a second time of our widows.

AN UNCANNY PEEP INTO THE FUTURE?

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I confess I have no faith in astrology and other occult means of prophecy. But I should like the case presented by the following testimonial in an advertisement to be investigated rationally by any competent reader who might like myself feel genuinely interested on reading it. The advertisement in question has been appearing in the Bombay papers for some months now. The points to be decided are: first, was the alleged prophecy strictly fulfilled?—and next, did the alleged publication of the prophecy really take place on the alleged date? (My ignorance of Telugu handicaps me here, for the Andhra Patrika is a paper published only in Telugu, I believe.) If the answers to both the questions are in the affirmative, what is the rational, scientific explanation of this, apparently a very remarkable feat of foretelling?

Karwar, Yours etc.,
June 1, 1926. S. D. N.

THE TESTIMONIAL.

The Andhra Patrika writes: We received on 7-11-1923 from V. K. Satagopachariar, Tiruttani, a letter (published in our issue of 12-11-23) predicting that Mahatmaji will be released on 5-2-1924 at 7 a.m. It so happened. We heartily commend the marvellous capabilities of this astrologer to the public.

IMMIGRATION LAW OF U. S. A.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

As a regular reader of the Indian Social Reformer I take the liberty of addressing you this note. On page 510 in the issue of April 17, 1926, of your paper there is an editorial note on "Immigration Law of U.S.A." In the course of this note you say the following:—"The case in which some Indians were recently deprived of their citizenship rights which they enjoyed for many years simply because they do not belong to any particular race, is too recent to need mention here." Ordinarily I would have overlooked such a statement in an Indian paper, because most of them are ill-informed and it is injustice to hold them responsible for errors, even where they should be scrupulously avoided. But, knowing a veteran like yourself to be almost incapable of making a statement for which you did not have a solid and certainly a substantial defence, I wonder whether the above-mentioned lines did not slip into print without your noticing them. It is absurd to say, in the light of the judgment of the Supreme Court of the U. S. delivered in February 1923, that Indians were deprived of their citizenship rights "simply because they do not belong to any particular race." The opinion of Justice Sutherland concurred in by four other judges, explicitly states the grounds on which Bhagat Singh Thind was denied the right of citizenship. It was that he did not belong to the "White Race." Isn't there a fallacy in confusing the absence of White Race characteristics, on which alone the American Judges have based their decision, with the fact of not belonging to any particular race? I submit the thought for your consideration.

Yours etc.,
1400, Broadway, T. H. K. REZHIS,
New York, Secretary,
May 11, 1926. Young India Association

[It is obvious from the context that by "any particular race" the White race is meant—Ed. I. S. R.]

PUNJAB FEMALE EDUCATION CONFERENCE.

Under the auspices of the Punjab Social Reform Association, the adjourned session of the Conference on women's education was held on the 1st inst. at the S. P. S. K. Hall. It was in continuation of the session held about a month ago at the same Hall, when a number of resolutions, emphasising the importance of female education, were adopted. Mr. Manohar Lal, M. A., Bar-at-Law, presided over the meeting.

Mr. Manohar Lal, presiding, read the electoral rules, containing qualifications for voters to the Council, and asked the women upon whom the right had been

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n724/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

conferred to exercise it in a proper manner. He then called upon Mrs. S. R. Kohli to move the first resolution, which ran as follows :—

TECHNICAL EDUCATION FOR GIRLS.

" That this conference urges the managing bodies of Girls' Schools as well as the Government to take steps for introducing in the Girls' Schools such technical instruction and training in handicrafts for girls who are not going to receive higher education, as may help them to make earnings at homes after their School courses are finished and enable them to depend upon themselves in times of emergency for respectable livelihood; that Institutions like the Lady Maynard School at Lahore, and Home classes for Women for teaching handicrafts and other useful subjects during the hours when women are generally free from household duties, should be started in suitable localities."

Mrs. Kohli, while moving the above resolution, said they could not neglect the problem of bread ; they would have to face the stern realities of life. Industrial and technical education was more urgently required in the case of girls than that of boys; for men could shift on somehow, while women could not. Women should be taught such vocations as did not require much capital to be invested, but were at the same time lucrative.

Prof. B. L. Bhatia regarded the criticism, made in the previous meeting in respect of the system of education for girls, as ill-informed. He could say from his personal experience that, in good schools, girls were taught arts and other such subjects as would make them good house-wives. For a good proportion of girls who got higher education, he said, there need be no change in the present system. For other girls—and they in fact formed the majority—some special courses might he introduced. He suggested that subjects like domestic hygiene, domestic economy etc., should be taught to girls. He advocated home-classes for the benefit of women.

Lala Lajpat Rai Sahni said he had been interested in that question on account of his being connected with Sir Ganga Ram. The idea of industrial education was first conceived from the Widow's Home. He then mentioned how the Lady Maynard School was started and how women were taking more interest in the vocational training than they did before. But there was one difficulty which they must consider, viz., there were no purchasers of articles made by widows. They would have to find outlets for the articles made by them. For that purpose an industrial shop had been started at Lahore by Sir Ganga Ram. He, therefore, asked the audience to look at the resolution from that practical point of view.

Lala Kanshi Ram Vaid said, women wasted much of their time and money in their dress and toilet. Time had, however, come when all the family members should have to earn to lead an honourable life. If women knew how to earn, they would then only know how to spend. In view of poverty, there was no harm if women should be taught handicrafts etc., by means of which they might supplement the income of their family and also utilize leisure hours which they at present wasted in doing nothing, in doing something useful.

Mrs. Zutshi strongly objected to the remarks of the previous speaker that women wasted their time and money in toilet. Where was the harm, she said, if they devoted a few minutes to dressing themselves after performing the sundry household duties for full twenty-four hours? Such remarks, she said, should not be made in a public meeting. She also asked women to utilize the right of vote given to them properly.

The resolution was then put to the House by the President and was carried unanimously.

IMPROVING PHYSIQUE OF GIRLS.

Miss E. M. Edwards, Principal of the Kanniard College, Lahore, moved the next resolution which ran as follows :—

" That the authorities of every Girls' School should be required to make arrangements for improving the physique of the girls by making it compulsory for every girl attending school to take part in some of the games and exercises provided for, and to be examined by lady doctors from time to time; that the attention of both school authorities and parents be called to the fact that much of the physical weakness which is characteristic of the school children of to-day is not due to over-studying but to the fact that the children—specially day scholars—go without proper food for long hours and that many children do not have enough sleep."

Miss Edwards said, in some girls' schools, facilities for games were provided; but others were handicapped for want of funds. Without money, they could not have their own play-grounds. She also asked the parents not to allow their children to go without food for long school-hours. Girls should also be asked to have enough sleep in order to keep good health.

Pandit Nanak Chand, while supporting the resolution, demanded the same freedom in the educational field for girls as for boys. He advocated the abolition of Purdah which impaired the health of their females. He also referred to the 'play-for-all' and 'refreshments-for-all' movements which had been started in some schools. He said, such movements would greatly help in improving the physique of girls as well as boys.

After the resolution had been further supported by Professor Divan Chand and Syed Habib, it was put to the House and declared carried.

The third and the last resolution passed by the meeting was:—" That a circulating library containing selected books suitable for Indian ladies be opened at Lahore and arrangements made for supplying the books at their homes." A committee, consisting of eleven ladies and gentlemen with powers to co-opt, was also appointed to carry out the proposal.

With a vote of thanks to the conveners of the meeting and to the chair, the meeting came to a successful close.—The Tribune, Lahore.

ABOLISH MARRIAGE !

( BY M. K. GANDHI.)

A correspondent, whom I know well, raises an issue, I take it, for purely academic interest, because I know the views he has set out are not his. ' Is not our present-day morality unnatural ?' he asks. If it was natural it should have been the same everywhere in all ages, but every race and community seems to have its own peculiar marriage laws and in enforcing them men have made themselves worse than beasts. For diseases which are unknown amongst animals are quite common

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n725/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

amongst men; infanticide, abortions, child-marriages, which are impossible in the brute creation, are the curse of the society that holds up marriage as a sacrament, and no end of evil results have sprung from what we uphold as laws of morality. And the miserable condition of Hindu widows—what is it due to, but to the existing marriage laws? Why not go back to nature, and take a leaf out of the book of the brute creation?

I do not know whether the advocates of free love in the West resort to the argument summarised above or have any stronger reasons to put forth, but I am sure that the tendency to regard the marriage-bond as barbarous is distinctly Western. If the argument is also borrowed from the West, there is no difficulty about meeting it.

It is a mistake to institute a comparison between man and the brute and it is this comparison that vitiates the whole argument. For man is higher than the brute in his moral instincts and moral institutions. The law of nature as applied to the one is different from the law of nature as applied to the other. Man has reason, discrimination, and free will such as it is. The brute has no such thing. It is not a free agent, and knows no distinction between virtue and vice, good and evil. Man, being a free agent, knows these distinctions, and when he follows his higher nature shows himself far superior to the brute, but when he follows his baser nature can show himself lower than the brute. Even the races regarded as the most uncivilised on earth accept some restriction on sexual relations. If it be said that the restriction is itself barbarous, then freedom from all restraints should be the law of man. If all men were to act according to this lawless law, there would be perfect chaos within twentyfour hours. Man being by nature more passionate than the brute, the moment all restraint is withdrawn, the lava of unbridled passion would overspread the whole earth and destroy mankind. Man is superior to the brute in as much as he is capable of self-restraint and sacrifice, of which the brute is incapable.

Some of the diseases that are so common at the present day are the result of infringement of marriage laws. I should like to know a single instance of a man strictly observing the restraint of the marriage bond having suffered from the diseases the correspondent has in mind. Infanticide, child-marriages and the like, are also the result of the breach of marriage laws. For the law lays down that a man or woman shall choose a mate only when he or she has come of age, is healthy, and capable of restraint, and desires to have progeny. Those who strictly obey this law, and regard the marriage bond as a sacrament, have never an occasion to be unhappy or miserable. Where marriage is a sacrament, the union is not the union of bodies but the union of souls indissoluble even by the death of either party. Where there is a true union of souls, there, marriage of a widow or widower is unthinkable, improper and wrong. Marriages, where the true law of marriage is ignored, do not deserve the name. If we have very few true marriages now-a-days, it is not the institution of marriage that is to blame, but the prevailing form of it, which should be reformed.

The correspondent contends that marriage is no moral or religious bond but a custom, and a custom which is opposed to religion and morality and hence deserves to be abolished. I submit that marriage is a fence that protects religion. If the fence were to be destroyed religion would go to pieces. The foundation of religion is restraint and marriage is nothing but restraint. The man who knows no restraint has no hope of self-realisation. I confess it may be difficult to prove the necessity of restraint to an atheist or a materialist. But he who knows the perishable nature of flesh from the imperishable nature of the spirit, instinctively knows that self-realisation is impossible without self-discipline and self-restraint. The body may either be a play-ground of passion, or a temple of self-realisation. If it is the latter, there is no room there for libertinism. The spirit needs must curb the flesh every moment.

Woman will be the apple of discord where the marriage bond is loose, where there is no observance of the law of restraint. If men were as unrestrained as the brutes they would straightway take the road to destruction. I an firmly of opinion that all the evils that the correspondent complains of can be eradicated not by abolishing marriage but by a systematic understanding and observance of the law of marriage.

I agree that whereas amongst some communities marriage is permitted amongst very near relations, it is prohibited among other communities, that whereas some communities forbid polygamy some permit it. Whilst one would wish that there was a uniform moral law accepted by all communities, the diversity does not point to the necessity of abolishing all restraint. As we grow wise in experience our morality will gain in uniformity. Even to-day the moral sense of the world holds up monogamy as the highest ideal and no religion makes polygamy obligatory. The ideal remains unaffected by the relaxation of practice according to time and place.

I need not reiterate my views regarding re-marriage of widows, as I consider re-marriage of virgin widows not only desirable but the bounden duty of all parents who happen to have such widowed daughters.

( Condensed Translation from 'Navajivan' by M. D.)*

WHAT PROHIBITION HAS DONE IN AMERICA.

Park benches are emptied of their drunken derelicts, and the men who used to make their wives and children the victims of their thirst and besotted rage have sobered up and returned to work to feed their families, says Commander Evangeline C. Booth in the Literary Digest. And that one fact, believes Evangeline Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, is the most convincing argument in favour of Prohibition and against the return of the saloon. She is sure, however, that the Eighteenth Amendment is so firmly entrenched in public favour that it will never be repealed, and equally sure that it can be enforced. Such drinking as is indulged in now, she asserts, is a fad of the idle rich which will die out, or else society—society, that is, with the big "S"—will be turned upside down and furnish rum wastrels for the Salvation Army to salvage. Miss Booth's utterance is no careless statement of fact and possibility, for there is no more seasoned worker among the submerged tenth than she, none among the world's greatest moral clean-up organisations more familiar with the sodden aspects of drunken-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n726/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ness and debauchery and their devastating influence on the home. It was while convalescing from an attack of appendicitis that she issued her statement on Prohibition, which is quoted in part by the New York "Times" as follows:

"After all these years of hard fighting to protect the home, emancipate neglected children and wipe from our national escutcheon the disgrace of the evils arising from drink, it is good to find that the people of America have come to a correct judgment concerning the drink evil. It is unthinkable that the country will ever return to the deadly saloon system and a resumption of liquor vending.

"Surely it will be conceded that the Salvation Army knows something about the evils of strong drink. From the day my father founded the organization in England to combat the degradation and vice that are inevitable consequences of liquor drinking, the Salvation Army has held rigidly to its purpose, and feels that it had a great deal to do with the enactment of Prohibition in America.

"It is an illogical thing to say that because a new law has not worked like magic it is best to cast it aside and return to the original state of vice which, because of its awfulness, prompted the enactment of that law. Such a thing would make civilization march backward. It is rather the duty of the citizen, the State and the Government to find ways and means to make the law work out its unquestioned benefits to humanity. It can be done. It is being done.

"Enemies of the Volstead Law waste their time when they try to tell organizations like the Salvation Army that national Prohibition will not work. Vast changes have come about, and to undo them would be to strike a blow at every fireside and every industry in this country.

"Why try to tell the Salvation Army that the park benches are crowded with drunken men as they were before Prohibition when we used to gather them in on Thanksgiving Day, for example, and fight to salvage them? They are gone. The benches still remain, but the occupants are not drunk any more; they are climbing upward to better things while the public rushes by all unheeding. Why try to tell us that working men spend their wages before their families can get the money for food, and that men beat their wives and children as in the old days? It simply is not the case.

"If the idle rich persist in making a sport of the Prohibition law, the day may come when the boulevardiers, vastly in the minority, will have to be salvaged out of their attractive places for secret drinking and rescued, if possible, by the Salvation Army just as the poor saloon victim used to be. In that event the sober and progressive working classes will automatically become the aristocrats, and society, so-called, will be turned upside down in its system of organization.

"In other words, drinking and flouting the Prohibition law are a fad and will die out."

In testimony of Miss Booth's experience and of her fitness to pass judgment on Prohibition, Arthur J. Davis, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, says, as he is quoted in the same paper:

"She led her band of Salvationists against the drink evil in the United States and consistently opposed the saloon while she salvaged its wrecks and bound up the wounds of its victims. Evangeline Booth has been knocked down by drunkards and so badly injured that she spent months in hospitals. In the early days of her work in the New York slums Salvationists were murdered by drunkards. She, therefore, knows what she is talking about when she attacks the illegal liquor traffic and upholds Prohibition. For seventy years her organization has fought the saloon and knows the advantages of its banishment."

INVALIDATION OF CEREMONIAL EMOLUMENTS BILL.

The Secretary, Joshi Watandar Hit Samrakshak Mandal writes: At a public meeting held on the 15th May, 1926, at the Ram-mandir, Kasba Peth, Poona, with Mr. H. S. Dhere, Hon. Magistrate presiding, the following resolution was unanimously passed: "This meeting of the citizens of Poona and the Vatandar Hindu Joshis expresses its strong disapproval of the Bill that seeks to destroy the Vatandari rights of the Hindu priests, that is proposed by Mr. Bole in the Bombay Legislative Council." It was further decided to send a general request to all the M. L. Cs. The following is a short summary of the said request, for those who are unfamiliar with Marathi:—"We the Citizens of Poona request the M. L. Cs. to reject the Bill No. 31 of 1925 proposed by Mr. Bole for reasons given below: 1. Joshi Watan is an ancient institution the oldest documentary evidence of which dates as far back as 1200 A. D. The Watandar Joshis possess original Sanads to attest to this fact. 2. Joshi Watan is a religious institution. The Hindu Members of the Council should try as far as possible to keep religious questions above any discussions in the Council; for an M. L. C. belonging to whatever religion is entitled to vote on the question as a member of the Council. We regret to find the names of a few non-Hindu members on the Select Committee appointed for the consideration of this Bill. If a matter belonging to Muslim religion would have been so treated they would have, and we say rightly, made a grievance against it. 3. The Bill is an outcome of the present Brahmin and Non-Brahmin controversy. Those who are against any Watandari rights whatsoever and oppose the Bill on that ground should see if the Non-Brahmin and Mahomedan members are ready to sacrifice their Patil and Kazi Watans, by bringing a bill that aims at the extinction of all the Watandari rights in general. 4. Joshi Watandari rights have been converted into a kind of immoveable property which has either been sold or transferred on lease to others by the original proprietors. Thus it has resulted in the creation of vested interests. The Bill as it stands does not in any way ssfeguard the right of such vested interests. 5. The members should be kind enough to note that just as the emoluments given to the Watandars are compulsory so are their services too. The Watandar Joshis are the keepers of old religious traditions and Hindu customs. A non-Watandar Joshi may refuse to serve, but a Watandar Joshi must perform the religious function when called upon to do so. 6. If a few of the Satyasamajists do not desire to call the Brahmins for the performance of their religious functions, the latter as a class are unwilling to go to them to exercise their right

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n727/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

in a graceless manner. But the passing of a bill to abolish compulsory 'emoluments, for the sake of a few Satyasamajists, is a tyranny of the microscopic minority over the majority who have a high regard for the keepers of traditions and wish to preserve their watans for the purpose of maintaining them as the strongholds of Hindu Society. 7. The Queen's Proclamation of 1858 promised the Inamdars and Watandars a peaceful enjoyment of their ancient Inams and Watans and promised not to interfere with religious matters. It would go against the Proclamation of the Queen to pass such a Bill. 8. The late Justice Ranade believed that Watan was originally an inducement to the people to colonise a new area and consequently he always used to uphold the Watandari rights, especially in the case of Hindu priests. For these reasons we beg that the members should drop the consideration of this bill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Sir Leslie Wilson Assumes Charge of Governorship: Sir Leslie Wilson, the Governor of Bombay, who had gone home on leave owing to Lady Wilson's illness, returned to Bombay by yesterday's mail and assumed charge of the Governorship from Sir Henry Lawrence, the Acting Governor.

Mahatmaji not to go to Finland: It is understood that Mahatma Gandhi has given up the idea of going to Finland.

Death of Sir Syed Hussain Bilgrami: Sir Syed Hussain Bilgrami, formerly Member of the India Council, died at his residence in Hyderabad on the 1st instant. Sir Syed was 84 years old at his death.

Lord Willingdon Appointed Governor-General of Canada: Lord Willingdon, sometime Governor of Bombay and Madras, has been appointed Governor-General of Canada.

A Widow Marriage: The first widow marriage among the Kalavantulu community was celebrated at Bezwada on 2-6-26. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Patri Venkatakrishnamurthy Naidu and the bridegroom is Mr A. Venkatrayudu, Photographer, Bezwada. Members from different places attended the marriage and blessed the happy couple.

An Inter-Caste Wedding: According to the Mangalore correspondent of the Hindu, an interesting inter-caste reform wedding took place very shortly, the contracting parties being Mr. T. Raghavan Nair, B A., L T, and Miss T. Sundari, B.A., L. T. The bridegroom is a Nair from Calicut side while the bride belongs to a respectable Tiyya family of Cannanore.

Echo of Mahatma Gandhi's Trial: The London correspondent of the Indian Daily Mail states that at the opening of the French Supreme Court this year, when amongst others, Lord Chief Justice of England will be present, Dr. Mademoiselle Juliette Veillier, a distinguished lady graduate of French legal faculty and bachelor of laws in American University, will deliver a lecture in Paris on the trial of Mahatma Gandhi at Ahmedabad in order to discuss the limits of domain of law in relation to moral issues.

Sympathy Towards Depressed Classes: Some 200 Pandits and Shastris of great learning and influence met at a meeting specially convened on the occasion of the marriage of the sons of Lala Kamlapat, the merchant prince of Cawnpore. After a lengthy and sympathetic discussion they gave an unanimous Shastric verdict that Hindus belonging to the depressed classes should be treated most sympathetically and that facilities for their education and moral and material uplift should be accorded to them most liberally.

Kalavantulu Educational Council: Mr. Gudisiva Subbaiah, President, Kalavantulu Educational Council, Gudivada, writes to the Swarajya, Madras: Scholarships for poor and deserving boys among the Kalavantulu community will be awarded from the 1st July 1926. Applications are invited so as to reach the President before the 20th instant with testimonials attached from heads of their schools and community as evidence of their poverty and character. It has been decided to give a few scholarships also to College students who also may send in their applications.

Mr Lalubhai Samaldas To Visit England: The Indian Daily Mail understands that Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., is leaving on a short visit to England on the 19th instant, on behalf of the Scindia Steam Navigation Company which has in contemplation to increase its fleet of ships, owing to expanding business. Mr. Lalubhai's visit has also a social significance in that he is a leading member of the Nagar Brahmin caste which has the reputation of being intensely conservative and exclusive. It is a welcome sign of the extent to which social reform has progressed in the Hindu community.

Land on the Amazon: The recent offer to Japan by the Brazilian Government of a tract of land in the upper reaches of the Amazon, comprising 12,500,000 acres, is arousing the greatest interest in Japan. Already there are in Brazil several strong and prosperous colonies of Japanese. The Japanese Government has left it to private enterprise to investigate the possibilities of the Brazilian offer. It is not likely to be the very best ground in Brazil, but it is far from worst. It is said to be covered with forests of hardwood trees.

Anglo-Indian Schools and Swaraj: Thus the Leader, Allahabad: The Hon. Mr. M. Ratnaswamy, President of the Madras Legistative Council, speaking at St. Mary's European High School, Madras, said that he had heard more than one leader of the Anglo-Indian community remarking that under a Swaraj Government the future of such schools would not be so bright as in the past. They would never have any reason to be anxious about the future of their institutions. But, he said, there was one condition on which these and other communal institutions would be tolerated by a national Government. The conditon was that those institutions must have a national purpose and render a national service. And he advised every Anglo-Indian youth to bear in mind the fact that they were members of the common people and that their future was bound up with India. This is frank but friendly advice. No community segregated from others can go very far.

Lotteries and Fairs in Virpur State: The Rajasthan, Delhi, writes: It is reported by the Kathiawar Opinion that the Virpur State (Kathiawar) has become notorious for Fairs and Lotteries which are being held within the limits of the State with the sanction of its authorities. At the Fairs cards are played and gambling is freely indulged in, and this brings in a pretty amount of revenue to the State which levies a fee of Rs. 10 for a tent, Rs. 10 for a pack of cards used for gambling and fee of Rs. 5 for each player. Three or four such fairs are held every year and to make them interesting dancing girls are invited from far-off places to give their concerts which are also taxed by the State. So it comes to this that Virpur utilises gamblers and prostitutes as a source of revenue. It may be profitable to the State but it is ruinous to its people, for we

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n728/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

are informed that some losers at the gamblings have committed suicide. Will the State prohibit the Fairs and the Lotteries in due deference to the welfare of its subjects?

The Mahar Conference: At the 5th session of the Satara District Mahar Conference which was held recently at Rahimatpur 800 members of the Mahar (depressed classes) community, a record gathering, were present. As many as 13 resolutions were discussed and passed, one of them asking the Bombay Government to appoint at least one Honorary Magistrate in every Taluk in the Presidency. Mr. Ambadkar, Bar-at-Law of Bombay, presiding exhorted his brethren to discard hereditary village service Watans which he said were responsible for their abject poverty, slavish mentality and extreme backwardness in educational, social and political spheres. He further advised them to make frantic effort to educate their children, bringing them to the level of the most advanced communities in the country without cursing the more fortunate classes in the land.

Lady Reading Health School: A correspondent sends us the following for publication:—The New Lady Reading Health School is nearing completion and classes will be started about October 15th. The School is the most up-to-date building of its kind in India and the training for women as Health Visitors given there compares favourably with that given in England. The courses include instruction in Hygiene, Domestic Science, Maternity and Child Welfare work, Elementary Economics etc., as well as practical instruction in the training of dais and the conduct of child welfare work. The Committee of the School has been fortunate in securing the services of Miss Graham and Miss Griffin, who are well-known in Delhi as Superintendents. The need for the work of Health Visitors is every day more apparent. Interest is being roused all over the country in the work for the care of mothers and babies which is carried on by the Health Visitors, and the demand for their services exceeds the supply. Candidates for training are urgently required. There are excellent openings for the right type of worker and the salaries given compare very favourably with those given in other professions. Those applying should be in possession of a midwifery certificate, and should preferably have some experience in maternity work. They should have a good general education and be able to follow lectures in English. Scholarships are granted to suitable candidates. All enquiries should be addressed to the Secretary, Lady Chelmsford League, Viceregal Estates, Simla.

Untouchables Granted Use of Wells: The Secretary, Arya Swarajya Sabha, Lahore, writes to the Tribune; On the evening of the 15th of May 1926 two Sikh Chamars (shoe-makers) came to the office of the Arya Swarajya Sabha at 8 p. m. On enquiry it was found that they were thirsty and hungry for the last twenty-four hours. They told us further that they belonged to the Ramdasia community and were residing at Jia Bagga—a village 15 miles distant from Lahore—for the last twenty years. The number of Chamars staying there was about twenty-five. They were doing their business, being quite satisfied with their lot. They knew nothing of reform movement for their uplift. Mohammadan Bahishti supplied water at their homes. As the Hindus did not identify themselves with the poor people, they mixed with non-Hindus, had no conscientious objections against taking eatable things from them. But for the last six months, the message of reform had reached the caste Hindus as well as the Chamars. One day, at the instance of a young enthusiast, the poor people who, since the advent of the summer season, were suffering from paucity of water and were reluctant to drink any longer from non-Hindu hands, got on the well and began to draw water therefrom. Hardly two days had passed when some orthodox Hindus were alleged to have rebuked the Chamars for their sacreligious act and the use of the well was prohibited to them. Now they had to bring water from a canal minor two miles distant which was not fit for human consumption. The two above-mentioned persons were sent by the Chamars of that place to request the Sabha for help. Thereupon a deputation consisting of Mr. A. S. Satyarthi, Pandit Jaigopal, Lala Jekhraj of Arorbana Sabha, and L. Bishambar Das, leader of the shoe-makers of Lahore, was forthwith sent to Jia Bagga. There they met the higher caste Hindus, argued with them and brought home to them the danger of disowning the Chamars, but nothing definite came out of it. The matter was postponed till next Saturday on which day again Mr. Satyarthi accompanied by one other man went to the village, but on finding that his entreaties had no effect, he took a vow not to take food till the right of the Chamars was secured to them. This resolve had the desired effect within only two hours and the Chamars were allowed to draw water from the well. The Sabha, therefore, thanks the Hindus of the locality for this act of theirs.

ADVERTISEMENTS

MATRIMONIAL.

WANTED a grown up girl or virgin widow of any Brahmin Caste to marry a Madhwa Brahmin aged 29 in Tanganyika Government Service on Sh. 500/- per mensem. The bride should be prepared to accompany. For further particulars apply to R. R. C/o the Indian Social Reformer.

PROF. ERNEST WOOD'S FAMOUS BOOKS.

CONCENTRATION—A PRACTICAL COURSE.

This extremely popular book, which has already undergone six editions, has now been thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged. Mostly Re-written.

Contents: Success in Life—The Magic Box—Aids to Concentration—Chains of Gold—Concentration in Daily Life—Control of the Body and the Senses—The Removal of Intruding Thoughts—Gymnastics of Concentration—What Meditation is—Methods of Meditation—Mantric and Symbolic Meditation—Obstacles to Meditation—Contemplation—Conclusion.

Price. Wrappers; Re. 1 Boards; Re. 1-4 Cloth, Re. 1-8.

CHARACTER-BUILDING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

Contents: Why you must Develop Character—What Character is—Preparing the Ground—The Foundations—The Walls—The Roof—The Verandah—The Gardens—The Orchard—The Three Fundamental Virtues—Testing the Character—The Man of Will—The Man of Love—The Philanthropist—The Man of Understanding—The Philosophy—The Way of Imagination—The Magician—The Man of Investigation—The Scientist—The Man of Reverence—The Devotee—The Man of Beauty—The Artist—The Science of the Emotions—The Three Fundamental Vices—Ultimate Aims—The Great Law.

MEMORY—TRAINING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

"A capital essay on the training of memory, with practical exercises of self-tuition."—Review of Reviews.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n729/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Social Reform Directory.

Under this heading we propose to publish from time to time a list and short accounts of Institutions of Social Reform, as we are receiving enquiries regarding them. Secretaries or other officials connected with such institutions are requested to send us, free of charge, in brief, accounts of their institutions on the model of those given below. We particularly request information regarding institutions for girls and young women such as Orphanages, Widows' Homes, Hostels for women-students and Rescue Homes.

The Seva Sadan Society, Poona.

The activities of this Society may be classed under three heads: social, educational and medical. The social work consists in visiting and feeding the poor, doing rescue work among women, visiting jails and maintaining a home for destitute women and children. In the educational line, the Seva Sadan conducts home classes for grown-up women, primary and secondary schools and normal classes to turn out trained teachers. Very good results have been obtained by the training of nurses by the Society. To enable women to be self-supporting and socially useful, the Society provides training in cookery, music, hygiene and a host of other things. The Ranisahib of Sangli is the President, and Mr. Devadhar, the organising Secretary of the Society.

The Bombay Seva Sadan Society.

The object of this Society is the general uplift of women either by education or industry. For the former Marathi Training classes and Home education classes are maintained. Among the industries taught are hosiery, laundry, cookery, fancy embroidery, cutting and sewing etc. Miss B. A. Engineer is the Secretary and the institution has a building of its own situated at Gamdevi, Harvey Road, Bombay 7.

The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.

Much of the spade work done towards the amelioration of the condition of the women of Bombay is due to this organisation. It conducts a Hostel for women students and a Widows' Home. Elocution and essay competitions exclusively for girls are held annually under its auspices. Scholarships to women and girl students studying in Schools and Colleges are provided by this Association. Mr. D. G. Dalvi and Mrs. Kashalkar are the Joint Secretaries.

Sir Ganga Ram's Widow Re-marriage Society.

The Society has hitherto mostly confined its activities to Upper India. It publishes a monthly journal in English and numerous free pamphlets in different languages. The Society started an Ashram in 1923 under the charge of a Hindu lady. It had prior to this a Widows' Home and a High School for Girls. A paid worker of the Society visits 271 stations, mostly in the Punjab, several times in the year. The Society has its headquarters at Lahore and has made several efforts to enlist the co-operation of similar institutions in other parts of India. The Honorary Secretary of the Society is Lala Lajpat Rai Sahani.

Kanya Mahavidyalya, Jullunder City.

The avowed object of this institution is to give useful and practical training to women so as to fit them for domestic life. The courses of studies prescribed have this object in view and students are not prepared for University Examinations. The Vidyalya maintains also a Widows' Home and an Ashram or Orphanage. Kumari Pandita Lajjavati is the Hon. Principal of the Vidyalya which has done much to improve the position of women in Northern India.

Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

This excellent institution is still in its infancy and owes its existence to the indefatigable efforts of Yamini Purna Tilakamma. It is a Rescue Home for the uplift of the Devadasi community. Propaganda work on behalf of this institution is carried on both in Madras and the mofussil by the Kalavantula Sabha.

The League of Mercy, Bombay.

It is a Society for aiding, retrieving and succouring fallen European and Eurasian women and girls in the Bombay Presidency. Besides doing preventive and rescue work and assisting young women found in morally undesirable surroundings by providing shelter and help, it conducts a small creche for babies up to 4 years of age and a Children's Home at Lonavla. The Society has a branch at Poona. Its Bombay address is Karanjia House, Lamington Road, Bombay 11.

A Widows' Home At Puri.

At the instance of the Hindu Mahasabha, Babu Gopa Bandhu Das has opened a Widows' Home at Puri, which is one of the important places of pilgrimage for Hindus in Northern India, to give shelter to widows and other women who get stranded there.

A Widow Marriage Home at Vayalpad.

A Widow Marriage Home has been recently started at Vayalpad, Chittoor Dist., Madras Presidency, to promote widow marriages. Widows from all castes who desire to marry and men who desire to marry widows are requested to correspond with the President of the Home.

Vidhwa Ashram at Aligarh.

A Vidhwa Samrakshini Sabha is established at Aligarh for the protection and education of Hindu widows, with Rai Sahib Lala Brij Lal, retired Deputy Collector, as President and Dr. Chandra Mohan Mathur as Secretary. Facilities are also afforded to the widows for remarriage.

The Pandharpur Orphanage and Foundling Asylum.

This institution is maintained at Pandharpur by the Bombay Prarthana Samaj. The Foundling Home is the only institution of the kind founded and maintained under non-Christian auspices. During the half a century the institution has been in existence, it has been the means of saving hundreds of Hindu widows from sin and crime. All communications should be directed to the Secretary.

Training for Social Work.

A course of training for Social Work is given for women students at the University Settlement, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay. The aim of the course is to provide opportunities by which women of all communities, who have finished their general education, may prepare for a life of usefulness and service. The course, which extends over a period of one year, includes both theoretical and practical training. During the monsoon, students may prepare for the Social Diploma given by the Social Service League in October. Special training is given to any students who look forward to making Social Service one of their definite interests and activities in later life. The course of training begins in June. Further information may be had from Mrs. Maclean, Wilson College, Bombay 7.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n730/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed ... ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,003
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Nasik, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2% from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5% per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co, Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.
Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00 00 000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed or daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( „ „ „ ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily, balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n731/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gackwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs 1 00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

FREE FOR THE ASKING.

SEVEN UPANISHADS.

( Isha, Kena, Katha, Prasna, Mundaka, Taittiriya and Aitareya.)

Text in Deva Nagari with English translation and notes by H. R. Bhagavat, 2nd edition, Price Rs. 2-8-0.

FREE IN JUNE 1926.

(1) Any Hindu B.A. B. L., (2) any Hindu Professor, (3) any Hindu Head Master of a High School, (4) any Hindu graduate whose age exceeds 30, (5) any Hindu pleader whose age exceeds 30, or (6) any Hindu Government or State servant getting Rs. 100 or more per mensem, can get the above book free of cost on sending three annas for postage. If he so chooses, he should send two annas more for postal registration.

All letters bearing any date of June 1926 will be attended to.

H. R. BHAGAVAT, SADASHIV PETH, POONA CITY.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN",
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, ... | ... | ,, 5,93 42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc, as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U S. A. :—Summer Ballard.

Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n732/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a

Tonic?

IF SO
use only the world renowned

"Atank Nigrah Pills."

Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness digestive troubles and similar complaints.

Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)
Bombay Branch:
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,
10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ¼ Column. | | ½ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| 13 | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 26 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 52 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n733/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to :—
THE MANAGER
The "Indian Social Reformer."
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n734/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

With Overseas Supplement. THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1926. No. 42

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Social Legislation in Kolhapur.
Colonising the Amazonas.
A Commendable Example.
Government of India's Opium Policy.
Temperance in Assam.
"Bread and Freedom."
Social Evil in Madras.
Kaniyar Satyagraha.
Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas.
The Indian States' Problem.
Attempts at Communal Concord.
Wanted—More Hindu Rescue Homes.
Jail Reform.
Dr. Cadman on Prohibition in America.
A Few Opinions about Women.
Nobel Prize System Alters.
Child Labour.
Babar's Secret Will.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Social Legislation in Kolhapur: To put an end to the pernicious practice of child marriages prevalent in the State, the Maharaja of Kolhapur, according to an Associated Press message, has enacted a law prohibiting child marriages in his State. All the information available about the law is that it provides that whoever gets a girl under his guardianship, who has not completed ten years, or a boy under fourteen years of age, married shall be deemed guilty of a crime punishable with the maximum fine of Rs. 2,000, and that whoever abets such marriages shall be punishable with a fine of Rs. 200. In the absence of the full text of the Act it is impossible to form an adequate idea of the good that will accrue from it. But it is certain that the Act does not go very far. It would be more correct to say that the Act intends abolishing infant marriages than child marriages, for children can hardly be said to emerge from their childhood at ten and fourteen when marriages are allowed. The ages fixed for marriage under the Act cannot but be considered too low in these days of enlightened ideas. It has been found by experience that a law of this nature is honoured more in its breach than observance. Something more directly touching the evil to be remedied, is needed to bring home to the party, instrumental in promoting such marriages, their evil effects. The most effective way to prevent child marriages is perhaps to make a law to take effect, say after five years, fixing a minimum age for marriage and declaring all marriages contracted below that age as invalid. This should be preceded and accompanied by an intense educative propaganda. The raising of the marriage age for girls brings other problems in its train. The Hindu family is at present so constituted that there is no provision in it for grown-up girls. Then there is the question of their education. The mind behind the Act, we presume, is that of the present Dewan, Rao Bahadur Lathe. Himself a staunch believer in the efficacy of social reform, he cannot have failed to take cognisance of all these considerations. On the whole, we are glad Kolhapur is forging ahead.

Colonising the Amazonas: In our last issue there was a news item that an offer of the land on the upper reaches of the Amazon had been made by the Brazilian Government to Japan. The Times of India of 17th June contains further particulars on the subject. Brazil intends to introduce Japanese and East Indian colonists for rubber-growing and other agricultural occupations. They will, however, also be taken as artisans and unskilled labourers. The Amazonas cannot be colonised by Whites as they find it difficult to do manual labour in the fields. There is no anxiety on the score of colour, as, besides the Indian being less dark and more Aryan than the average Brazilian, the country is peopled by the Latin races, which are scarcely ever obsessed by such prejudices. The labourers at present in Brazil show no signs of opposition to the arrival of Japanese and Indians. Nor is the climate there worse than it is in India. Twenty thousand men are needed for work in the rubber plantations. We suppose that another Commission will be appointed to investigate the conditions that obtain in Brazil. There is no harm in that provided the Commission is made up solely of Indians. The Amazonian Government has not enough money and it is not prepared to spend it on the transport of the colonists. We await further particulars on this.

A Commendable Example: The East Coast, Berhampore, has given publicity to an important letter addressed by Mr. A. Galletti, Collector of Ganjam, to a certain local Christian Missionary. It would appear that the people of Atmakoor (Ganjam) and its neighbourhood applied to the Collector of the District for grant of a site for erecting a Vishnu temple on the summit of a hill. The missionary gentleman of the local Christian colony at the foot of the hill, however, objected to the same on the ground that it would be a source of intolerable nuisance to him, particularly in the night. Thereupon Mr. Galletti, Collector of the place, is reported to have addressed the following letter to the Christian gentleman:

I have perused with some regret your communication of the 22nd objecting to the erecting of a Vishnu Temple on the hill overlooking Atmakoor. It is not, in my opinion, a reasonable objection to the constructing of a temple on the top of the hill that there is a mission compound at the bottom of the hill. You say it will be a nuisance to you especially at night. All noises are nuisance and under strict letter of the law every section of the public might demand that the religious and festive noise of other sections should be suppressed. The Hindus might complain of your Church bell and of your service on Sundays and holidays. They tolerate you who are aliens and sojourners in the land and I suggest that you should not allow yourself to be outdone in the pre-eminently Christian virtues of toleration and charity. I would advise you to drop the matter. In most towns in this district we have Hindu-Mohammadan feuds on our hands. I hope I shall not have to add a Hindu-Christian feud at Atmakoor. You will certainly make yourself much disliked in Atmakoor if you oppose the building of a temple of which Rs. 6,000 or more have been subscribed. I would therefore ask you Rev. and Dear Sir, to think twice before pressing

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n735/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

your objection, if any. By way of reinforcing my argument, I would ask you to read again and act upon the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, Chapter III and specially verse. 7.

We congratulate the Collector on the bold action he has taken and we trust the Christian gentleman has profited by the advice offered to him by the Collector.

Government of India's Opium Policy: The Government of India has announced that after 1935 no opium will be exported to the Far East except for strictly medicinal or scientific purposes. Considering the adjustments that are to be made consequent upon the loss of revenue that will be involved as a result of this policy, the period of ten years is not much, and the Government of India is to be congratulated on its statesmanlike decision. But it should never be forgotten that it constitutes more a triumph to America, for the Government of India has been led to adopt this policy not on account of any humanitarian considerations of its own, but because of the pressure brought upon it by American opinion in the League Opium Committee. The stopping of the export of opium to foreign countries will not alone do and it is worth while to ask what steps the Government of India has been taking to check the internal consumption of opium, which does not seem to show any substantial diminution. The report of the Assam Opium Enquiry Committee provides sad reading and the evil is still to some extent prevalent in Bombay where women workers use to dope their children with opium in order to silence them during their hours of work. We hope Government would now turn its attention to check the consumption of opium in India except for strictly scientific or medicinal purposes.

Temperance in Assam: The Assam Temperance Bill which has been referred to a Select Committee, has emerged from it practically shorn of its original structure, as the mover of the Bill rightly complains. As originally introduced in the Council, the Bill provided for Total Prohibition to be reached within a stated period of time by automatic reduction in the number of shops. This evidently alarmed the officials and pro-officials who composed the Committee, and as modified by it, it is nothing more than a piece of local option legislation and that too a halting one. Its operation is limited, at the outset, to Municipalities and small towns and leaves it to the discretion of the Local Government to extend its operation by subsequent notification. Again, the Committee has deliberately raised the minimum proportion of votes necessary for a valid poll to one-twelfth, which, in the opinion of the mover of the Bill, is too high, and in many localities an impossible number to bring together. We hope that when the Bill comes up for discussion, non-officials will put up a tough fight.

"Bread and Freedom": This is a monthly magazine devoted to co-operation and poverty problem and edited by Capt. J. W. Petavel, Lecturer, Poverty Problem, Calcutta University, and Mr. K. M. Banerjee, Editor of Industry and Commercial India. The magazine is mainly intended to popularize what is known as the educational colonies scheme. Briefly, what the scheme proposes to do is to provide instruction to children and students and at the same time enable them to produce food for their own use. This, it is urged, will not only solve the poverty problem of the country by deflecting many unemployed youths to this fruitful field of education, but also serve as a training-ground for character-building and community co-operation. The Calcutta University, under the initiative of the late-lamented Sir Asutosh Mukherjee, was the first to take up the scheme and thousands of copies of the scheme were printed and sent throughout the world, and it is gratifying to note that it has been received favourably everywhere. In America a similar scheme is being put into operation. The scheme has got the support of such eminent persons as Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Rabindranath Tagore, Sir P. C. Ray, Dr. Besant and Sir Dinshah Wacha, and we are glad to see that the Mysore authorities are very much interested in it and are contemplating starting shortly an educational colony in the neighbourhood of Bangalore on the model of that sketched out by Capt. Petavel. The annual supscription of the magazine is Rs. 1 only.

Social Evil in Madras: New India calls attention to the fact that the suppression of commercial vice and rescue work should be organised on a wider scale than by concentrating on them at a few city centres. It is well-known that in Bombay as well as in Madras, it is the mofussil that forms the recruiting ground for the victims of the social evil. According to the South Malabar correspondent of the Madras Mail, there have lately occurred a few recent shocking instances of Brahmana girls of indigent parents who were accepted in marriage by men from the East Coast in the guise of social reformers who do not take dowries, only to be sold or hired afterwards to brothel-keepers in far-off places. A few of the victims, however, managed to escape and return to their homes where they related their bitter experiences and the persecution and disgrace to which they were subjected. It need hardly be said that severe measures should be adopted to deal with this evil and at the same time to rouse the public conscience against it. The Vigilance Association in Madras as well as in Bombay would do well to start a net-work of well-co-ordinated branches throughout the Presidency.

Kaniyar Satyagraha: The following message was sent to us by Mr. T. Ramachandra Rao of Mysore: In the Mysore Representative Assembly, some members expressed their sympathy with the Kaniyar Satyagraha and interpellated the Government on it. The Government declared that they were not hostile to the movement and denied having issued instructions to the local authorities to stop or suppress Satyagraha. In answer to supplementary questions the Government denied all knowledge of persecutions by local officials and promised investigation. The Government's attitude is sympathetic and promising.

Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas: Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas is sailing to-day to England and we wish him a safe and happy voyage and a pleasant sojourn in that country and an early return to this country. One of the burning questions of social reform when this paper was started was that of sea voyage for caste Hindus. The controversy raged for many years without apparently the reform making any headway. Then suddenly as if by tacit consent a change came over Hindu society practically all over the country and the opposition to sea voyage ceased. The trip to England of a leader of Mr. Lalubhai's standing in the orthodox Nagar community may be taken as putting a final touch on this reform. This is a lesson to all reformers not to lose heart because their labours do not seem to bear visible fruit for some time.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n736/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JUNE 19, 1926.

THE INDIAN STATES' PROBLEM.

One of the problems which confront the Indian nationalist is that connected with the existence of Indian States. They number some hundreds in all, but the more important of them do not exceed a dozen at the most. Lord Dalhousie's policy was to put an end to all these States and thus bring the whole country under British rule. It was at least a logical policy whatever its demerits might have been. But it was found in practice to be impossible to carry it out in its entirety. The more expedient course of allowing the States to remain as adjuncts of British rule was adopted. The policy followed towards the States has varied from time to time, according to the temperature of British Indian politics. During the troublous days of the Bengal Partition, the rigorous control exercised over them by Lord Curzon was largely relaxed and this tendency became still more accentuated for obvious reasons during the Great War. It is the general impression that the freedom accorded to the States has not been, except in a few cases, been well used and that, in consequence, there is in several States more misgovernment to-day than ever before. The increasing practice of Indian rulers spending many months every year in visits to Europe, is pointed out as a sign of this degeneration. The former rulers who seldom left their States were in close touch with their people and responsive to their sentiments. The present-day rulers, however, by their frequent absences in Europe, are estranged from their people in sympathy and outlook. They may pass for "good fellows" among their European friends, but among their own people they do not enjoy the same respect and affection as their fathers and grandfathers did. Twenty years ago it was rare to come across a subject of a State, who did not feel proud of being one. Nowadays, one comes across many even of the subjects of the better-governed States who openly say that they would prefer being subjects of British India.

The rapid political advancement in British India during the last quarter of a century, would by itself have made the people of Indian States dissatisfied with their lot, even if the rulers had been as much in touch with their people as their ancestors. The political ideas of the people of the States have changed: their standard of good Government is now the standard of British India. Personal rule has lost its charms for them. In one of Ibsen's plays, a childless mother consoles a mother who had lost her child by telling her that she should count herself happy in that she had a child to lose. Somewhat in the same way the Indian States' politician insists on having the same reforms as British India, notwithstanding that those reforms have been rejected as unsatisfactory and inadequate by influential sections of political opinion. Diarchy has been denounced as unworkable and the other associated reforms, as embodying the shadow and not the substance of political power. But Mr. G. R. Abhyankar, who presided at the sixth session of the Deccan States Subjects' Conference held recently at Poona, demanded that the British Government should compel Indian States not only to set before themselves the goal of Dominion self-government for their States, but should also advance towards it by the roads followed in British India. At the same time, he admitted that the one factor, which is the cause of the greatest complication in British Indian politics, is wholly absent from the administration of Indian States. It is the factor of European vested interests in the public services, in commerce and industry, and even in education. The entire administration in the States is in Indian hands. This in itself is a great advantage which, if the average Indian States' politician did not allow himself to be obsessed by British Indian politics, he can turn to account in obtaining real, effective self-government in his own State and for his own people. This is not synonymous with the Parliamentary system as it obtains in Great Britain. That system of which we are so enamoured, is being discarded by Continental Europe; even in Great Britain, the Mother of Parliaments is no longer held in the same reverence as in the spacious days of Queen Victoria. European statesmen confronted by the realities of modern politics are casting about for fresh political machinery which can deal more promptly and intelligently with the complex problems of administration.

It is in discovering the most suitable system of self-government for India, that political thinkers from Indian States can be of the greatest service to the country. Mr. Justice Ranade once observed that the heart of India beats in the States. It is not perhaps the case to-day to the same extent as thirty years ago. The new generation of Indian States' politicians have formed themselves on the same pattern as the political leaders of British India. But even now there is a good deal of truth in Mr. Ranade's observation; and for Indian States merely to imitate British Indian methods is a waste of valuable opportunity. By right, Indian States should take the lead in guiding Indian nationalism in truly indigenous channels. They can give valuable hints to British India in one of the most vexatious questions of the hour, the reconciling of communal differences. They can deal with a freer hand with the problems of social reconstruction which lie at the root of politics. The re-adjustment of Indian ideals to modern thought, can be more smoothly effected in the States than in British India. The absence of original political thinking in the country, is one of the main causes of our political depression. The Non-Co-operation movement had the merit of originality, and that is why it so readily attracted the masses. It failed because of the communal mentality of the people, which led them to use political power as a means of caste and communal aggrandisement. So long as this mentality holds sway, so long it is idle to talk of a Parliamentary system in India. The essence of that system is the loyal acceptance by the minority of the decisions of the majority in the confidence that one day it will become the majority able to give effect to its views. Where a population is divided into religious communities, a minority community can only command a majority if it carries on a vigorous and successful propaganda of religious proselytisation. We have, therefore, to discover a system of self-government which will take note of this special feature of Indian polity. The difficulties of the politician are the opportunities of the statesman. Political thinkers and administrators in Indian States have it in their power to make a valuable contribution in this direction.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n737/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ATTEMPTS AT COMMUNAL CONCORD.

One result of the recent Calcutta riots is that they have more than ever concentrated the attention of the country on the urgency of tackling the Hindu-Muslim problem. Except for some sporadic attempts as the Delhi Unity Conference, no solid attempts have hitherto been made to bring about unity between the two communities, and it is common knowledge that the resolutions of the Unity Conference are now more honoured in their breach than in their observance. There is no denying the fact that there is a real conflict of class-interests between the Hindus and Muslims and it is this that accounts for the feeling of antagonism between them. Writing in the current issue of the Modern Review, Maulvi Wahed Hossain rightly points out that there are only two ways of avoiding this conflict of interests and bringing about Hindu-Muslim unity: first, the natural process of self-adjustment of mutual relations between the two communities, and second, the settlement of the differences by conscious recognition of mutual rights. But experience has proved us that the first method will take us indefinitely long time to reach the desired goal, while in the meanwhile the conflict of interests will only lead to the growth of a rancourous and rabid communalism as clearly demonstrated by the recent outbreak of Hindu-Muslim riots in several parts of the country. Moreover, political exigencies also require that the Hindu-Muslim question should forthwith be settled. The remedy, therefore, lies in the second alternative which is based upon a policy of "give and take," and it is gratifying to note that the country is gradually moving towards this policy as the best solution for the present strained relations between Hindus and Muslims. The attempt to bring about unity between the two communities by means of pacts and compromises has not been attended with much success. On the other hand, it may bring about estrangement between them as in the case of Bengal. Real unity should be based on surer and more lasting foundations such as is involved in a conscious recognition of mutual rights. The proposal of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru for disfranchising whole areas as a solvent for communal riots and troubles in the efficacy of which he reiterates his conviction will not, we are fraid, achieve the desired object. As we pointed out last week, the basic objection against his proposal is that it will not affect the real culprits and mischief-mongers. It is the voteless goondas and fanatics that are the active agents in communal riots, and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru's suggestion will not only prove no remedy for the disease but will exacerbate the relations between the two communities owing to the punitive nature of the punishment it seeks to inflict. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and men of his light and leading will do well to turn their attention to methods such as that pursued in Bihar and Orissa.

We have already referred to the attempts made by Sir Ali Imam, Hassan Imam and others in Patna to stablish friendly relations between Moslems and non-Moslems by the establishment of the Anjuman-Mohafazat, and we are glad to see that Congressmen in Behar are no less alive to the gravity of the Hindu-Muslim problem. The proceedings of the Conference of leading Congressmen of the province consisting of members of both communities which recently held its sittings at Chapra under the inspiration and guidance of Maulana Mazharul Haque, bear ample testimony to this. The very fact that the Conference was held for full three days and often sat long hours in the nights, is itself an indication of the earnestness of Congressmen in exploring the possibilities of settlement between the two communities. Music before mosques, cow-slaughter, abduction and kidnapping of women, Suddhi and Sanghathan, and such like outstanding issues of communal conflict between Hindus and Muslims were all threshed out, and misunderstandings and misapprehensions removed. Often a petty quarrel between a Hindu and Muslim is exaggerated into a big communal affair and with a view to avoid this, the Conference decided that whenever any trouble occurred at any place the aggrieved party should forthwith inform the leaders of the offending community who would then take prompt measures to do the needful and nip the trouble in the bud. Most important of all was the resolution passed by the Conference that a deputation headed by Maulana Mazharul Haque and consisting of other Congress workers, should visit the various centres of the province, "carrying the message of united action." And lastly a joint manifesto was issued under the signature of the leaders of both the communities calling upon people to settle all causes of differences between them by mutual agreement on the principle of reasonable accommodation of each other's needs. The manifesto also deprecated the use of abusive language against all religions, and while Mahomedans condemned the demolition and desecration of Hindu temples and objects of worship as contrary to the injunctions of the Koran, Hindus for their part declared that interference with Mahomedan religion or religious institutions is hateful to them. Here is an example to other Provinces. Hindus and Muslims will have to relize the stern fact that they have to live together as they have already done for centuries. There are a thousand and one matters in which members of both the communities can work together. Such being the case, it will not be impossible for them to arrive at a settlement on some minor points of difference as music before mosques and cow-slaughter, provided both parties are actuated by a sincere desire for co-operation and common service to the country. We are glad that Allahabad City, through the efforts of Congressmen, has also been able to accomplish something solid and substantial in the direction of Hindu-Muslim unity. The whole City has been divided into several groups at each of which is stationed a Mohalla Committee representative of Hindus and Muslims to whom quarrels will have to be referred, who will then decide what is just and proper in the circumstances and satisfy the residents of the locality. The Bengal Provincial Congress Committee, at its recent session at Calcutta, also resolved upon sending an influential committee to different parts of Bengal to bring about unity between the two great communities. We trust that these resolutions will not remain as mere pious wishes, but will be translated into action as opportunity occurs.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n738/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

WANTED—MORE HINDU RESCUE HOMES.

(By Mr. N. Lakshmanan.)

European writers, like Lecky for instance, have declared that "herself the supreme type of vice, the prostitute remains the ultimate guardian of female morality." This is usually known as the safety-valve theory and, in recent times, it has been exploded by experienced rescue workers of many advanced countries in East and West. It is nevertheless strange to find that Mr. K. T. Dange (525, Budhwar Peth, Poona) has, as it were, given currency to this old theory by the peculiar method of quoting a prostitute whom he "had tried to reclaim." (His letter is published in the Reformer of 15th May under the caption "A Prostitute's Reply").

Curiously enough, the Poona correspondent's comment "The reply will open the eyes of our public men", is quite laconic, and I, for my part, am unable to guess what Mr. Dange expects "our public men" to do or undo. Nor has he taken the reading public into his confidence by stating whether he has succeeded in saving the poor woman from her life of shame or has left her, and her tribe, to wreak "vengeance on men." In one and the same breath, the Poona prostitute seems to talk of revenge and of "doing a great public service" and that "silently." She is reported to have clinched her argument thus: "you men have got the habit of doing nothing and only talking loudly. We are doing public service silently. Consider the crowds of vagabonds, so-called bachelors and the dregs of your class who have been held in check by us. Reclaim us and these locusts will fall upon the society. Do you still think to reclaim us?"

In this connection, may I recall the fact that, about thirty years ago, the late Mr. N. K. Ramaswami Iyer of Tanjore met some of the prostitutes at Madras during a house to house inquiry and published his impressions in the Indian Social Reformer. Thereupon, the late Mr. W. T. Stead, the veteran journalist who fought against the White slave traffic in England, wrote to him suggesting the advisability of every male member being accompanied by one's wife or a trained lady worker when carrying on social investigation among this particular class of women. Ever since I heard of this, I have passed on this valuable information to my friends and fellow-workers and I beg leave to draw Mr. Dange's kind attention to Mr. Stead's method of solving the Social Evil.

Quite apart from Mr. Dange's version of a prostitute's reply, I wish to refer, in passing, to the usual perils incidental to young or inexperienced male members taking up rescue work with a light heart. Swami Turiyananda of the Sri Ramakrishna Mission has recorded two unfortunate cases. (Vide the Prabuddha Bharata for March 1924). (1) In Calcutta, a very good young man of character, learned and intelligent, set himself to reforming women of ill-fame. A girl unfolded to him her tale of woe, which moved his heart. He became inextricably bound up with her. (2) An old man ascribed his unexpected moral downfall to his own faith that he was proof against temptation. He was in fact befooled by a wicked woman.

The problem of fallen women in India is, I think, more easily solved when, in each local area, a trained lady with the true mother-heart takes up the personal work of reclaiming her fallen sisters. A recent instance in Peninsular India is that of Sister Yamini Purna Thilakamma, the founder-Secretary of the Hindu Yavathi Saranalayam, or the Hindu Rescue Home, Kilpauk, Madras. This pioneer Hindu worker returned to Madras only the other day after a fortnight's intensive campaign among the fallen sisters of Coimbatore. Under the auspices of the Senguntbar Mahajana Sangam, she addressed the local Davadasis (so-called temple women) and the local rescue-workers. After this, she had heart to heart talks with the women concerned in their own homes. As might be expected, the response has been quite encouraging. The local Devadasis have gained a new vision of life, and sister Thilakamma herself told me, again and again: "I cannot forget all the kindness showered on me by my sisters at Coimbatore." She collected nearly one hundred rupees from them and about three hundred rupees from the Coimbatore public. The Saranalayam is now under the fostering care of its newly elected President, the venerable Sir Venkataratnam Naidu Garu, and it bids fair to become the premier institution of its kind in Hindu India. The Motherland needs not one, but many, such well-conducted Rescue Homes.

---

JAIL REFORM.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

Prison reform is long overdue. Wide publicity to the present unsatisfactory conditions prevailing in jails in India should be welcomed. For by that means only can we expect anything like reform to follow. Else, the complacent public and the Government are apt to imagine that "God is in heaven and all's right with the world." In this respect the Punjab Jail Committee report and the suggestions for Prison Reform published in the Indian Daily Mail are invaluable. Because the inmates of jails are offenders against one or the other of the laws of society, it does not follow that they should be treated worse than beasts. The authorities responsible for jail administration will do well to remember that none of us are free from the frailties that go to make a criminal and most of us are saved because we are better placed. Utterance to a greater truth was never given than when the great lawyer statesman of America, on seeing a criminal being led to the gallows, exclaimed: "But for the grace of God, there goes Lincoln." Coarse and meagre fare, systematic fleecing where luxuries are concerned and maltreatment of prisoners, are said to be some of the worst features of Bombay jails. One would expect the visitors to jails to get an insight into their working, but they too fit in with the scheme of things and make their visits as perfunctorily as the authorities would desire. If the lot of the inmate inside the prison is bad, that of the released prisoner is still worse. He,

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n739/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

when he has served his term, like Rip Wan Winkle, faces a world, strange and none too friendly, and falls once more a prey to his besetting sin. The public would fain know why the Prisoners' Aid Society, if it has failed to carry out the purpose for which it was started, still continues to exist. Either the Society should be mended or ended. One of the tests of a civilised Government is the way in which its prisoners are treated. It is high time that the question of prison reform is given international importance.

Bombay, 14th June 1926. Yours etc., N. K. AKSHI.

Dr. CADMAN ON PROHIBITION IN AMERICA.

SOBER AMERICA SPEAKS OUT.

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., LL D., President of the Federal Council of Churches of the United States of America, recently gave the following Radio address to the large Radio audience who hear him each Sunday afternoon from the large auditorium of the Bedford Y.M.C.A., Brooklyn, New York:

The Press has widely advertized the present agitation against the 18th Amendment. It has also been increased by an evidently well organised and heavily financed campaign, in which sincere opponents of the Amendment, politicians, self-interested groups and men and women who put their private desires ahead of the public good have participated. They differ widely in their proposals but all agree that the Volstead Law (for enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment for Constitutional Prohibition of intoxicating liquors) should either be repealed or modified. The stray vote taken a few days ago is not conclusive for the drys, and proves too much for the comfort of the wets. But it proves an animus against prohibition which revives the debate upon it and makes it necessary for those who favor it, as I do, to restate their position in a dispassionate and unprejudiced manner.

Unfortunately the discussion of this question upon which few are neutral and many are hectic, has been too seldom calm and judicial. Much that has been said was plainly partisan. In these respects the wets have outdone the drys, freely predicting that pretty much everything from the downfall of the Constitution to the demoralization of the nation follows in the wake of its enforced sobriety. On the other hand some drys have shown a zeal not according to knowledge and injure the cause they aimed to serve. Is it not therefore timely to define the exact nature of prohibition, review its precedents and examine its past as wall as anticipate its future?

In the first place there is practical unanimity of opinion that whatever may be the merits or demerits of the measure, it is as characteristically American as the Statute of Liberty or the national anthem. The policy of wholesale extermination of the liquor traffic by legislative enactment could hardly have been inaugurated outside the United States. Workers for temperance or for prohibition amendments throughout the world look to this country for their leads. It is continually referred to as a fortress of a sumptuary law which undertakes the transformation of a popular habit.

The fight for drink's overthrow is centered here. Nor is there a lover or vendor of intoxicants in Europe, Asia, or other English-speaking States or the wine-growing provinces who does not identify prohibition with our country. Outsiders who accuse us of plutocratic tendencies and merciless debt-collecting propensities, join with those who lament our lack of idealism to attribute to us this, as they think, fantastic attempt to regulate private morals by statutory enactment.

During a recent tour through northern Europe and Great Britian I was impressed with the importance the brewers and distillers of those regions attach to American views on the issue before us. Conspicuous advertizements and quotations from our daily journals and magazine articles published in Germany, Scandinavia, the Low Provinces and the United Kingdom testify to the boldness of the enterprise and comment on its prospects. Many of these quotations and comments are substantially false. Others are mere diatribes, notable for their ignorance of conditions in this Republic. Still others boast of the "freedom" foreign peoples enjoy in the matter of drinking and contrast that "freedom" with the slavery of the Yankees.

So far as Britian's "freedom" is concerned I refer you to the public utterances of Lloyd George, Mr. Rowntree, Lady Astor and many of the leading Clergy of the Churches of that Nation. Debt-burdened and war-weary it still spends the huge sum of nearly a billion dollars (200 million pounds sterling) annually for intoxicating drinks. The economic values of prohibition, as distinguished from its moral values, are stressed by the authorities I have named. The disastrous effects of the traffic in intoxicants upon the health and well-being of the people are a sufficient answer to those wets who point to British freedom as a model for our imitation. Whatever else she has to teach us we have nothing to learn from her about the control of the brewer and distiller. It may be that as the United States once led the way in a political reconstruction now confessed as wise and beneficial by her former antagonists, so she will yet lead the way for a sumptuary reconstruction which shall defeat the predictions of its opponents and vindicate its supporters.

Second, the basic reason on which that reconstruction rests can be stated as follows:

In dealing with social evils such as disease, crime, vice and their sources, it is a legitimate principle that personal liberty must be restricted for the protection of society. Contrary to loose, ill-advised talk on this crucial matter the ever-increasing limitations placed upon the freedom of the individual is the price nations have to pay for their advancing civilization. Science tells us daily what we should and should not do. It places an unaccustomed harness on numerous ways of living and forbids some of them altogether.

You will find no progressive people whose personal rights have not been displaced by the larger rights of the community and the State. Nor is there anything new in its theory and its practice. Greek and Roman discipline and lawfulness explain their intellectual and legal eminence. And though they carried that discipline to rigorous extremes which modern democracies repudiate, the force of their example cannot be lost sight of by us. Do we not promptly resent and condemn any citizen who sets up his private advantage against the general good? These detrimental attempts have been always sternly fought by liberty-loving nations.

Monopolies shook the stately throne of Queen Elizabeth of England. They had a considerable part

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n740/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

in exciting our revolt againt George III. They have been the means of driving from power strong administrations in this country. Only yesterday a Bread Trust was dissolved here before it was well begun. The plea that one can do as one pleases with his own property does not avail for the bakers. Why should it avail for the brewers and the drinkers? The point does not need further elucidation.

The law-abiding citizen is constantly hemmed in by laws and even more so by customs which he gladly obeys because he is aware that his obedience yields the greatest good for the largest number and has its sequel in a larger better life and a more genuine freedom. Is it not true that one of the blots upon our national character is due to the utterly misleading conception of personal freedom which rejects control and defies authority. How else can we account for the swollen lists of divorces, robberies, murders? I maintain that the Republic we love needs a sanitation of the discipline which prevents reckless and assertive individualism from prostituting the honour and imperilling the safety of the American people.

(to be continued.)

A FEW OPINIONS ABOUT WOMEN.

(By Mrs. K. Sathianathan, M. A.)

Manu.

Manu, the ancient Indian law-giver, had but a poor opinion about woman:—

"Poor things at best are these women, to be propitiated because the gods might revenge them; to be bribed and kept happy but never to be allowed independence".

"By a girl, by a young woman, or even by an aged one, nothing must be done independently even in her own house."

And yet, the woman must be honoured:—

"Where women are honoured, there the gods are pleased. Where the female relatives live in grief, the family soon wholly perishes; but that family, where they are not unhappy, ever prospers."

In return, the woman must honour her husband:—

"A husband must be constantly worshipped as a god by a faithful wife. No sacrifices, no vow, no fast must be performed by women apart from their husbands."

Mahomed.

The Prophet Mahomed wrote thus about women:—

"Ye people, treat your wives with kindness. Verily, ye have taken them on the security of God, and made them lawful unto you by the words of God. God hath given you wives that ye may put love and tenderness between you."

Later even when the development of Mahomedan women was being checked by adverse influences, we read that "woman was still the object of chivalrous adoration and of delicate care and attention. Marriage was regarded as a solemn act, the domestic hearth a sanctuary. To the mother belonged the training of her sons and daughters; the sons were brought up by her until they passed into the hands of tutors; the daughters were trained to be virtuous, pure-souled women, the future 'mothers of men'."

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare had a high ideal of womanhood. He knew their failings, and yet he idealized and honoured them. As a critic said, "I am bold to say that next to the Christian religion humanity has no other so precious an inheritance as Shakespeare's divine gallery of womanhood." "Shakespeare," said Ruskin, "represents women as infallibly faithful and wise counsellors, incorruptibly just and pure examples—, strong always to sanctify, even when they cannot save; so that, in all cases, it is the woman, who watches over, teaches and guides the youth."

Robert Browning.

Robert Browning wrote highly of women, and with much variety. As Stopford Brooke said: "There are women in the poetry of the other poets, but not such as those in Browning's poems. Wordsworth's beautifully sketched women are only those of the human affections; Byron's are only those who are loved and in love; Shelley's are hidden behind philosophic, political, or social theories; only in Tennyson's and Browning's work does womanhood become one of its dominant subjects; only here is it treated with separate individuality. Each woman, Browning takes separately; and, leaving out the simple elements common to woman's character, he draws the particular and the complex characteristics; and therefore each of his women is distinct from the other. It is the all round woman we see. Neither lowering her, nor idealising her, he treats woman as one fit to occupy a place side by side with man, and on an equality with him; in a word, as full of intensity of life as man."

Ruskin.

Ruskin spoke of women thus:—"Woman must be enduringly, incorruptibly good; instinctively, infallibly wise—wise, not for self-development, but for self-remuneration; wise, not that she may set herself above her husband; but that she may never fail from his side; wise, not with the narrowness of insolent and loveless pride, but with the passionate gentleness of an infinitely variable, because infinitely applicable, modesty of service, the true changefulness of woman."

Ruskin, as we know, would never compare man and woman in the same qualities. "Each has what the other has not; each completes the other and is completed by the other; they are in nothing alike, and the happiness and perfection of both depends on each asking and receiving from the other what the other only can give."

Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said: "Oftentimes, I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide, as if drawn by some invisible tow-line, with a hundred strong arms pulling it; her sails being unfilled, her steamers were drooping, she had neither side wheel, nor stern-wheel; still, she moved on stately in her serene triumph, as if with her own life. But I knew that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great hull, there was a little toiling steam-tug, dragging it bravely on. And so I have known more than one genius that, but for the brave toiling arms and warm beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestled close in his shadow, and dragged him on against all the tide of circumstances, would soon have gone down the stream, and been heard of no more."

George Meredith.

George Meredith took a very large hearted and modern view of women. He said: "What Nature originally decreed, men are but beginning to see, namely that women are fitted for most of the avenues open to

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n741/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

energy; and, by their entering upon active life, they will no longer be open to the accusation of being craven and narrow. I now believe in women more than ever; they have immense possibilities, of which they are becoming more and more conscious. For ages, they have been compelled to be the mere bearers of children, and the keepers of a comfortable home for men; but nowadays the wider outlook that has opened before them has brought home to their consciousness the fact that these two things do not constitute the sum of the service, which they can render to the race. Women, however, have two great defects or faults. The first is timidity. The other defect is their liability to be carried off their feet by a great wave of emotion. Anyhow, I am in favour of giving them all a vote. Until you throw open to women every avenue of employment, you will never realise the service which they can render. They would make excellent preachers and ministers of the gospel. A woman has an excellent pigeon-holing mind, and therefore would make a good lawyer. She can argue a case with excellent subtlety and ingenuity, and is especially adroit in taking advantage of the weaknesses of her opponent. But, of course, I do not say that women can do everything that men can do; but they should be allowed to try to find out by experience what they can do, and what they cannot; they should be encouraged to try, for, as I say, their great fault is timidity."—The Hindu, Madras

NOBEL PRIZE SYSTEM ALTERS.

The discussion centering about the Nobel Foundation in the matter of its high taxation by the Swedish Government has led to a general survey of the constitution of the foundation and to a discussion as to whether the aims of the founder, Alfred Nobel, have in actual practice been carried out, writes a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor in its issue of March 26th.

Two of the stipulations of Mr. Nobel seem not to have been carried out by the committee on the ground of their difficulty and of a supposed lessoning of the value attached to the honour. One is that the prizes be dealt out annually to the authors or natural scientists who have during the current year produced the work in question. The other is that the prize be given only to those who have made "new discoveries".

Aim of Nobel Prizes.

Many who have been in close touch with the Nobel family have felt that Mr. Alfred Nobel's real aim was to enable young discoverers to continue their valuable work through the help the money would give them and that in the majority of cases the prize has actually been awarded to men over 60 who have succeeded in bringing their work to its zenith without this help. It is also maintained that by "new discoveries" was meant work with marked originality, which should forward the progress of humanity.

The duty of silence imposed upon the distributors of the prizes has prevented an airing of the pros and cons and of the reasons for and against the candidates for prizes. But the committee feels that to judge of the value of a "new discovery" made in the current year is almost beyond human power. It has therefore been in the habit of waiting several years before awarding a prize to a select candidate. In regard to the giving of the Peace Prize, the Norwegian Storting has declared that this prize shall be given out at least once in every five years.

Annual Distribution Inadvisable.

The committee has also felt in the past that to distribute all the prizes every year would be lowering the standard of the candidates and lessen the value attached to this honour. Owing to the difficulty of deciding upon suitable candidates and to the reduction of the amount of the prizes due to the high governmental tax, all prizes were reserved this year with the exception of that for physics which was presented to Prof. Manne Siegbahn of Upsala University, the youngest natural scientist to receive a Nobel Prize in the history of the foundation.

A motion has been entered in the Riksdag, now sitting in Sweden, for the exemption of the foundation from all tax on the ground of its being an institution encouraging natural science, which an existing law covers. The motion also asked that the amount of taxes paid to the Government this year be refunded.

It is believed that this discussion centering around the Nobel Foundation will work toward an increase of the amount of the prizes as well as to the frequency of their distribution and will encourage the impecunious younger inventor and forward the progress of humanity which was the dearest wish of the man to whom the Nobel Foundation is a memorial.

CHILD LABOUR.

A study of "The Health of the Working Child," recently made by the Bureau of Women in Industry of the New York State Department of Labour, showed that one-fifth of the children examined had serious visual defects; almost one-third had dental defects requiring immediate treatment; thyroid enlargment was found in 5 per cent of the girls but in no boys; 4 per cent of the children had heart affections; 3 per cent had some lung abnormality; only 45 per cent had what might be called normal postures; almost a fourth of the children had some degree of flat foot. Only 4 per cent could be regarded as having no defects. Half the children whose work was analyzed had defects which were accentuated by the conditions of their work. For children who at an early age have given up schooling, presumably because they expect to support themselves by trades where physical fitness is their greatest asset, it is a serious finding, the report states, that every other one while yet under 16 has some incipient physical defect which the requirements of his work appear to be intensifying. Subjecting the child under 16 to conditions of work which tend to break rather than strengthen his physical equipment would seem to be false economy.

Child labour conditions in China have for some time been the subject of considerable comment in the public press. A Child Labour Commission was appointed by the Shanghai Municipal Council in June, 1923, to study conditions and recommend regulations applying to child labour in the Foreign Settlement of Shanghai, where, owing to the rapid industrial development in recent years, the child labour problem exists in a concentrated form. On this Commission were such women as Dame Adelaide Anderson, a noted Inspector of Factories in Great Britain, Agatha Harrison, Mary Dingman, and Dr. Mary Stone; the business interests were represented by lead-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n742/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIANS OVERSEAS

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Indian Social Reformer.

No. 16. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1926. Price One Anna

THE COLOUR BAR BILL.

There is evidently no end at all to the anti-Indian legislation of the South African Government. No sooner has the controversy over the Class Areas Bill been temporarily suspended by the acceptance by the Union Government of a Round Table Conference to settle the points of difference between itself and the Government of India, than the Colour Bar Bill promises soon to be on the Statute Book. In our last issue, we pointed out how this Bill which seeks to throw out of employment thousands of Natives and Indians simply because they do not happen to be White, is more ruinous in its effects upon the Indian community than the Class Areas Bill, and urged the Imperial Government to veto the Bill which is now awaiting royal assent after passing both the Houses of the Legislature. That the Colour Bar Bill will neither be vetoed nor be included as one of the subjects for discussion in the Round Table Conference, was made perfectly clear by Lord Birkenhead in the debate initiated by Lord Olivier in the House of Lords on the 19th May. Lord Olivier, to whom India owes a deep debt of gratitude for his ceaseless and vigorous championing of the South African Indian cause, while expressing his satisfaction at the Round Table Conference agreed upon between the parties, asked whether the effects of the Colour Bar Bill on Indians would be raised at the same Conference. He also pointed out that the Colour Bar Bill was as great an infliction as the Class Areas Bill and that, so long as any class was treated as serfs and helots and excluded from certain occupations as the Colour Bar Bill intended to do, there was no possibility of the Indian maintaining the Western standards of life to which the Union Government attached so much importance. Lord Birkenhead, in reply, said that the Bill would now become law and that it was not proposed that the Round Table Conference should deal with it. His lordship also drew a distinction between the Class Areas Bill and the Colour Bar Bill. Whereas the Class Areas Bill was directly aimed against Indians, the Colour Bar Bill was only a part of the Native policy of the Union Government which only indirectly affected the Indians, and, therefore, in his lordship's opinion, it was only of secondary importance. Lord Birkenhead added that it was not in the power of His Majesty's Government to suggest or dictate a solution to the problem. After this candid confession of inability from Lord Birkenhead and the light-hearted manner in which his lordship has trifled away with Imperial responsibilities, it is hopeless to expect much from the Imperial Government.

The only possible remedy is to carry on an insistent and persistent propaganda against this iniquitous measure in and out of India and mobilise public opinion against it before the Conference meets. Both Mahatma Gandhi and Andrews warn us of the immense potentialities for mischief the Bill contains, though the Hertzog Government may have no immediate intention of extending it beyond the Gold Mines where for all practical purposes a Colour bar is now existing. As Mahatma Gandhi aptly puts it: "The sting of the new Bill lies in its enabling powers. It is like the sword of Damocles hanging over the heads of both the natives of South Africa and the Indian settlers, for it can be made applicable to the latter precisely as the former." It is a great pity, therefore, that the Hon. Syed Raza Ali, a member of the Paddison Deputation, should declare that it is not a legislative measure as such and advise the public and the press to be patient and not to agitate for its repeal. True, he admits that, though the Bill does not mention the Indians or Asiatics at all, it empowers the Union Government to frame regulations prohibiting the grant of certificates of competency to our countrymen there if it deems necessary, but he is too much lost in the sincerity and good intentions of General Hertzog to perceive the potentialities for mischief in the enabling provision. Mr. Andrews rightly points out that though General Hertzog may not extend the Bill beyond the Gold Mines, there is no guarantee that his successor will also do so. Moreover, there is a fundamental objection to the Bill. It is only a part of the racial policy upon which the Union Government has embarked. The Round Table Conference is only a courteous gesture on the part of the Union Government and does not betoken a real change of heart, and its acceptance does not mean that a satisfactory solution will be arrived at on the Class Areas Bill. Indeed, Lord Birkenhead was explicit on the point when he emphatically said that "it would be premature to say that the holding of a Conference necessarily connoted certainty of agreement or even compromise." Nor are the Union Government's assurances through the Government of India that there is no immediate intention on its part to extend the Bill beyond the present position, and that in case any extension of it is found necessary, all parties interested in the Union will be consulted, in any way calculated to remove the apprehensions on the Bill. We have by this time become too much accustomed to the Union Government's solemn assurances and undertakings which are treated as no more than scrapes of paper when necessity arises, to take these assurances seriously. As regards the second assurance, Mahatma Gandhi pertinently asks whether it is the intention of the Union Government to exclude representations from out of the Union.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n743/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PADDISON DEPUTATION'S WORK.

The memorandum submitted to the Select Committee on the Anti-Asiatic Bill by the Paddison Deputation and the oral evidence subsequently tendered by them occupy 140 pages of the report.

The following few extracts taken from their oral evidence will show how Mr. Paddison and his colleagues stood their ground very well. They were examined jointly so that whenever one member of the Deputation got into deep waters in the course of the searching cross examination by the Committee, or did not sufficiently stress a point, another member rushed to the rescue. Mr. Bajpai, the Secretary of the Deputation, was particularly brilliant in effective repartee.

European Feeling in India.

How do the small minority of 170,000 Europeans in India feel about the Bill ? This was a question propounded by Sir Ernest Oppenheimer. Here is Mr. Paddison's answer to the question:

"I think that is rather important looking at this problem. There are all sorts and conditions of parties in India as there are here and there are many points in which we—the small minority of Europeans—might differ from the Indians. There are occasions we may differ—between different parties and other parties, but on this point in regard to the treatment of Indians, India is unanimous, including the European population. We have our special newspapers in nearly every province which cater largely for European readers. We have the Times of India, the Statesman and the Madras Mail. Then you have your extremist papers Then you have all sorts of different parties. On this point, in regard to the treatment of Indians in South Africa the Pioneer and the other newspapers absolutely agree.

Not Getting a Square Deal.

"We Europeans—I speak now, not as a Government servant but as expressing the opinion of the average European in India—we must think that the Indians in S. Africa are not getting a square deal. I am sorry to say this but it is our opinion in India. You are dealing with an alien population. Wherever you have different sections of the population we feel terribly about the Indian section of that population being treated unfairly. With us it is a matter of fair treatment. Whatever people may say about the various agreements settled by the Government it has been said many many times that if we send no more Indians here to South Africa, those you have here now would be treated well. That was the promise given to us. If this goes through we cannot regard that this is fair, reasonable treatment. Those people belong to the British Empire and have come over here under certain conditions and you felt that there were too many and you agreed in South Africa that if we sent no more you would treat those here decently, that is to say, to treat them fairly. On visiting the various parts of South Africa we find that South Africa generally does not appreciate the position of the Indian in this matter by which I mean the position of the Indian gentlemen.

"I have very many friends among Indian gentlemen and they feel this appallingly that they should be treated as though they are lower than the races here known and the Cape Malays or Mauritus Creole. My chief, at present in India, to whom I have to report, is a Madras man, Sir Mahomed Habibullah, and an old friend of mine; when I write to him and get orders you can imagine how a gentleman of that sort feels when he hears how his own people are regarded as outcasts. The European sympathizes with that feeling because of Indian friends and it is unfair that the promise that they should get a fair deal if no more Indians were sent over is being broken."

No Dictation.

In reply to Sir Ernest Oppenheimer's invitation to put forward an alternative suggestion Mr. Paddison said: What I feel about this and what the Government of India feel is that we rather differ as to what the Indian problem in South Africa actually is. You have to get down to bedrock as to what is the Indian problem in South Africa. We are rather afraid of seeming to dictate a solution. Is the problem an economic one, but if the problem is how to get the Indians out of South Africa then it is another thing altogether. What is the problem that wants solution ? I think I am right in saying whatever may happen, as matters stand at the present, the Indians here are parts of your population and you have agreed that if we send no more you will look after them, and if you now want to get them out of the country, if that is your object, the policy contained in this Bill will prevent that very solution more than anything else you could find. The Indian in South Africa is at present going back to India in certain numbers but if this Bill becomes law they will dig themselves in here and this will actually prevent people returning to India.

Mr. Bajpai: If this Bill becomes law I would not be surprised if the Indian legislature passed a law to the effect that no Indian domiciled in South Africa would be allowed to enter India.

Mr. Paddison: If you want to get these Indians out, I say it would be very much better to do nothing than pass a Bill like this because this Bill will make them remain here.

Bill Unacceptable.

Mr. Raza Ali: I agree with what has been said as far as practical suggestions are concerned. I think that if the Government of India were asked to consider the question as a whole they would be prepared to do so. If you want us to say which parts of the Bill are acceptable and which parts are not acceptable to us, we say that no portion of the Bill could possibly be acceptable, but if you are prepared to discuss the problem as a whole with the Government of India, I am sure that they will be willing to do so.

Mr. Paddison: If your object is to squeeze the Indian out of South Africa not by force, but by indirect pressure, it is very difficult for the people in India and Indian opinion would be so strong that at the present we cannot do anything. I am only saying that this bill will do harm.

Mr. Devaprasad Sarvadhikari: We have come across numerous white people who have no objection to the Indian. Unless you legislate that no Indian shall do business with a European and that no European shall do business with an Indian, you cannot stop business, but you can handicap it; you cannot get away from

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n744/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

that fact when you are considering what are questions of principles of the Bill, so far as one can gather them. I shall not be drawn into a discussion of the details of the Bill or as to what shall be done to provide for the prejudices of the people—prejudices about which the evidence is not clear. Boycotting the Indian in business had been attempted, but failed—Europeans and other people refusing to do business with him would, in half an hour any after-noon, finish all Indian trade, if there was real and widespread European objection to the Indian.

INSULT AND HUMILIATION.

The consideration which you cannot get away from is that if you segregate him the deep sense of insult, humiliation and degradation which will accompany it will never be got over. That will be a big mistake. The better class of Indians will be sent to the locations as they would not avail themselves of the exemptions that can be granted and, if they did, only Indian people would be drifting further and further awy from what they are to-day which would be far worse. The points against this segregation are, the insult cast on the whole nation and a sense of resentment all round and the impossibility which would starve them of doing business. Pariahs thus to be created in South Africa may, under the exemption, be allowed to come into the towns and do hawking and other business and assist the white people in that way if they availed themselves of the exemption, but further than that they cannot do and general degradation is bound to follow.

HORRORS OF SEGREGATION.

Sir Ernest Oppenheimer: I am not suggesting this as a solution. I wanted to know why, assuming the place set apart will be a place in which anybody who wants to live according to his own taste will be able to do so, and it will be a place that does not make business impossible, there should be this deep sense of insult?

Mr. Bajpai: May I retort with a question? Why should an Eglishman, or rather a European feel a grievance at having to live alongside an Indian?

Sir Ernest Oppenheimer: That is not based on a reason?

Mr. Bajpai: Exactly. We have tried to explain that we regard this as an insult. Evidently our explanation is not satisfactory. We should say that the reason for our feeling this insult is something deep and inherent like the European's prejudice. I think there is a deep sentiment behind it. We have experience which is sufficient to warrant all the horror we can possibly entertain towards segregation. We have a pride of race just the same as you have, and we feel that in India and elsewhere—provided our standard of civilization qualifies us, we can go about holding our heads high, wherever we like. Why should we, on the soil of South Africa—a dominion of the British Empire—be made to assume that we are fit to live only away from the European, and that we would be allowed to go out of these proposed "paradises" only if the law allows us to, and that by way of exception. It is an insult to our national and racial pride. We think, rightly or wrongly, that we should be allowed to live alongside of Europeans if we choose to.

CASTE SYSTEM IN INDIA.

Mr. Marwick: In regard to the caste system in India would it not be correct to say that the untouchables live under a system of social ostracism and social segregation which is absolutely cruel?

Mr. Paddison: There has been a very great improvement in the last 10 years. No doubt he has had a bad time, and as we tried to explain the other day he has come on tremendously now. For instance first of all there is no legislation or restriction of any sort, it is a question or restriction of ordinary ostracism which is breaking down gradually.

Mr. Marwick: In regard to the suggestion that the caste system is breaking up is it not correct to say that Mr. Gandhi himself was threatened with excommunication for his attack on the untouchables in a speech he made before the Indian National Congress?

Mr. Raza Ali: He has not been excommunicated. There is a certain element among the orthodox Brahmins who view all progress as anathema and hurl the bolts of excommunication at the heads of people of more modern ways. I had them hurled at my head because I went to study at Oxford.

AN INTERVIEW IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(BY MR. C. F. ANDREWS.)

The following interview was given to the Editor of the Ladys' Pictorial before I left South Africa, at a time when I was seeking the help of the women of South Africa on behalf of the Indian cause:—

Q.—Can you give us any idea of the main motive which made you leave Rabindranath Tagore and his beautiful home at Santiniketan, where you were so happy with him, and came out to live with the Indian community in South Africa?

A.—The real reason was that I could see impending an inevitable conflict between East and West,—between India and South Africa—if this Asiatic Bill was passed into law and therefore I determined to come over to try to stop it. For I hold almost passionately, as one of the foundation thoughts of all my life, that India and South Africa were intended in the Divine Providence to have a friendship with each other, and understand one another and form one of the links of connection in the great world of mankind.

Q.—Could you give us a little more in detail what you mean by this idea of friendship?

A.—If you take down a map of the world and study the Indian Ocean you will see three points of a great triangle. The apex of the triangle is India, the two angles at the base are Australia on the one side and South Africa on the other. Curiously enough the two southern continents are equidistant from Colombo. It is a ten days' voyage from Durban to Colombo and it is a ten days' voyage from Colombo to Fremantle in Western Australia.

When you think the matter out these two new lands, of South Africa and Australia are the youngest representatives of Western civilisation. They have all the fresh enthusiasm of youth. On the other hand, India is wise with all the wisdom of the ages. India has lived her life and dreamt her dreams for thousands of years while Bushmen roamed in South Africa and also in Australia. India has become also, in the history of mankind, the highest centre of Eastern civilisation, which differs in so many important ways from the West. Therefore it became almost a passion with me that East and West should meet in this great triangle which stretches across the Southern hemisphere. This was not a mere empty dream but an intensely practical matter. For I have been out many times both to Africa and Australia and have travelled all over these continents. Everywhere it has been my one object to remove misunderstandings and to make evident in both of them to the thinking people, and especially to the women, who are the mothers of the two young nations, that it is

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n745/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

supremely important that the friendship of India, which s freely offered, should not be rejected, but be varmly accepted and cultivated for the future benefit of mankind. At the same time I have felt very strongly ndeed that I could not be doing a greater service o India than to help to bring its ancient civilisation nto touch with the fresh enthusiasm and energy of hese young countries of Australia and South Africa.

Q.—Have you had any success on either side in this ractical ideal of yours ?

A.—It is hard to say. But one thing I can say learly. Australia and India have come very much iore closely together in recent years. They have ettled all their difficulties and now there is a way open or mutual understanding. With regard to South frica, on the other hand, I had the very greatest hope in he year 1914 when I was present here and a marvellously iendly atmosphere had been created after the essation of the very remarkable Passive Resistance ruggle of Mahatma Gandhi. I was in Capetown then, nd I have with me still some copies of the lecture hich I then delivered on Rabindranath Tagore. The ape Times printed it in full and commented on it, aking a very real offer of friendship with India, which so became the attitude of both General Smuts and eneral Botha and in the end of all parties. Miss Emily obhouse was here then and she did very much indeed nong the Dutch to create a friendly atmosphere.

Q.—Did you ever come out again, Mr. Andrews, or this your second visit ?

A.—No. I came out again at the time of the Lange ommission, in 1920, and at that period also endeavour- to bring about a reconciliation between the two untries, realising as I did the vast importance of s in the history of the world.

Q.—What was your experience then ?

A.—Unfortunately the elections came in the midst my visit, and the atmosphere become all disturbed party cries. It was not possible to do much then, t this time, it has been far more easy to get in touch h people. Learning my lesson from Australia, I have d my utmost to come into touch with the women South Africa; for if there is one lesson above all ers that I have learnt, it is this, that if women take heartily a question of right and wrong,—a moral ue,—they are bound to succeed. This question of friendship between India and South Africa is to me ioral question. It is inconceivable to me that the nen of this country can allow things to drift into h a state that the two peoples should become per- nently hostile.

Q.—But surely you know, Mr. Andrews, that we nen of South Africa have no vote.

A.—That doesn't matter in the least in this issue. iat I want is your moral support on the side of peace. e issue is so absurdly simple. India is simply asking one thing—to be friends. India is not making any rageous demand, but only that before this Asiatic is passed, South Africa should make a friendly ture and be willing to come to a Conference, where the difficulties between the two countries might be ished out and a permanent basis of friendship be iblished instead of a permanent hostility.

Q.—Will India help us to solve our difficulties ?

A.—She will certainly help in a friendly manner if th Africa does not hold a pistol at her head and say, ur money or your life." Believe me South Africa gain in every way far more by coming to a iference than she possibly could by threatening ia with an altogether obnoxious Bill:—Indian nion, Durban.

INDIANS IN AUSTRALIA.

Mahatma Gandhi writes in Young India:—

"An Indian settler of Australia says in the course a letter: "We can't get work of any kind here in tralia. We are charged the same rates as British. We 't get a rebate on our rates as the latter, but have to our full share no matter how. We try to get work; the answer is: 'No work for black people.' Only Australians or other white races employed. Even our own little block of land we have to put in another man's name to hold for us as 'trustee.' If he is honest it is alright. If otherwise, well, goodbye to your land as it is all Miners' Rights in this part of the country. They say all people get the same fair treatment. Not we poor Indians We can starve here before the British will give us a regular job or wages no matter how clever you are in any trade. You may be the best engineer in Australia, but you are no better. No work for coloured people.

"When Mr. Sastri came to Australia he was only shown the show part got up for the occasion They never told him the hardships we had to put up with. He took with him the impression that everything was all right. The few people he met in Perth city were mostly Beer Bottle collectors and a few cooks among them. He did not see the real hard-working class, camel and donkey teams away out back in a blazing hot country two or three days without water. No, he never came inland. So how was he able to speak for all people? He went away taking a wrong impression of us Indians here in Out-Back district. If we did not grow a few vegetables and hawk them we would die of starvation, as we cannot get any help at all from the Australians." The correspondent sends too the original letter received by him in reply to his mining application from the Registrar, Mines Department, which I copy below:

"With reference to your letter of the 31st ultimo, I would advise you that we are unable to issue Miners' Rights to persons of Indian race." This letter is an eye-opener. It was thought that in Australia there was no racial discrimination against those Asiatics, who had settled there. But the correspondent's letter, fortified as it is with an original letter from the Mines Department, leaves no room for doubt.

---

Recruitment of Labour to Brazil: Captain McCullugh writing in the Times of India, Bombay, from Brazil dwells upon the possibility of an opening for Indian labour in the Amazonas district of Brazil. It is stated that a representative from Brazil is now in India and intends recruiting Tamil labourers for the rubber plantations in Brazil.

Indian Labour in South Africa: It is gratifying to note that the Trade Union Congress in South Africa has agreed to the proposal made by the British Commonwealth Labour Conference, held in London last year, to hold a Conference of representatives of the Trade Union Movement in South Africa and India to consider the question of Indian Labour in South Africa.

Emigration to Malay States: It is stated that there is a rush of emigrants from the South of India to the Malay States. The conditions of labour there and the treatment accorded to labour, are far from being satisfactory. It was only recently that we came across some cases of highhandedness by employers even amounting to the outraging of modesty of some women labourers. In the circumstances, it is not wise to allow any further emigration until conditions of employment in Malay States improve to a marked extent.

Racial Segregation in Kenya Colony: It was reported sometime back that the Kenya Government was contemplating to auction plots of grounds to Europeans only. On May 15 the Indian and Arab landowners of Kenya waited in deputation on Sir Edward Grigg, the Governor, and made a protest against this injustice in an address the text of which we will publish in our next issue. His Excellency the Governor, while sympathising with their cause, pleaded inability to do anything in the matter as the proposal was made by the Secretary of State for Colonies. His Excellency also admitted that the proposal would upset the decisions of the Imperial Government and contravene the pledge given by His Majesty's Government in the White Paper of July 1923.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n746/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ing manufacturers of Shanghai. The Commission made its report in June, 1924, revealing incredibly bad conditions among the child workers in the cotton and silk mills and in other industries. In a number of the mills visited many children were found at work on both day and night shifts who could not have been over 6 years of age. A 12-hour day prevails, with night work, and there is little care for the health and safety of the workers. To make effective the very moderate recommendations of the Commission required a new by-law passed by the ratepayers (taxpayers) in special meeting and approved by a majority of the Consuls of the Foreign Powers In spite of the campaign in favor of the by-law, the necessary quorum failed to attend the meetings called for this purpose on April 15 and on June 2, 1925.

The influence of the United States upon child labour conditions in China was emphasized by Miss Margaret Burton, of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., in an address before the Foreign Missions Conference of America held in Washington not long before the Shanghai meeting at which the child labour recommendations were to be considered Miss Burton, who has studied industrial conditions in China at first hand, said that no one could imagine the setback which efforts toward child labour legislation in China had received by the annulment of the federal child labour law in the United States, and concluded with a strong appeal for the ratification of the child labour amendment as the best way of helping China in her effort to solve her child labour problem :—Information Service, America.

BABAR'S SECRET WILL.

It appears that the Moghul Emperor Babar left a secret will to his son and successor, Humayun. The original Persian document is soon to be published in the Indian Historical Journal. Its English translation is given below :— "Secret will of Zahir-ud-din Mahammad Badashah Ghazi to Prince Nasir-ud-din Mahammad Humayun, whom God grant a long life, written for the strength of the kingdom :

" O son, the kingdom of India is full of different religions; praise be to God that He bestowed upon thee its sovereignty. It is incumbent on thee to wipe all religious prejudices off the tablet of thy heart; administer justice according to the ways of every religion. Avoid especially the sacrifice of the cow by which thou canst capture the hearts of the peoples of India, and the subjects of this country may be bound up with royal obligation.

Do not ruin the temples and shrines of any community which is obeying the laws of Government. Administer justice in such a manner that the king be pleased with the subjects and the subjects with the king. The cause of Islam can be promoted more by the sword of obligations than by the sword of tyranny.

Overlook the dissensions of the Shias and Sunnis, else the weakness of Islam is manifest.

And let the subjects of different beliefs be harmonized in conformity with the four elements (of which the human body is harmoniously composed), so that the body of the kingdom may be free from different diseases The Memoirs of Timur, the master of conjunction, (i. e, fortunate) should always be before thine eye, so that thou mayest become experienced in the affairs of administration."—1st Jamadil Awwal, 935 A. H.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Inquiry into the Textile Industry : A Special Tariff Board has been constituted to inquire into the conditions of the textile industry in Bombay and Ahmedabad. The personnel is composed of Mr. Noyce, a Madras Civilian, Pandit Kaul and Mr. N. Subba Rao.

Caste Hindus freely take water from Untouchables : About two hundred Hindus (the so-called untouchables) of Patuakhali (Bengal) assembled in "Atchala" of the local Kalibari. They were entertained with light refreshments in which Hindus of all classes including Brahmans, Baidyas and Kayasthas took part and drank water from their hands.

Mr. Mirza Ismail refuses Presidentship of Century Club : According to the Leader, Allahabad, Mr. Mirza M. Ismail, the new Dewan of Mysore, has refused to accept the presidentship of the Century Club until the bar is removed from the club premises, which was founded by Sir Visweswaraya during his Dewanship.

Representation for Depressed Classes : In the House of Commons on the 14th instant Earl Winterton replied to a long series of questions on Indian affairs in the course of which he thought it probable that the Government of India would create additional seats in the provincial Councils before the next election for labour and depressed classes representatives in accordance with the recommendations of the Reforms Inquiry Committee.

Wagers In Britain : A cable to the Englishman says: " It is calculated that upwards of £ 200,000,000,000 is actually wagered every year in Great Britain," said Mr. Churchill to a deputation of the Church Council. Of that sum it is calculated that £30,000,000 is street betting. The time may come when the State will consider the whole problem of betting, in which case he agreed it should not be from the point of raising revenue but as a social, moral and political issue.

Ramakrishna Students' Home, Bombay :— Swami Vishwananda, President of the Sir Ramakrishna Mission Ashram, Khar (Santa Cruz P. O.) writes as follows :-The proposed Students' Home at Khar cannot be started unless there are at least a dozen boys coming forward to reside in the Home. Only two applications have as yet been received. Parents and guardians are requested to send applications for their children and wards as early as possible so that the Home may be started before the session commences.

Water Taken From The Hands of Untouchables : Under the auspices of the Krishnagar Hindu Sabha, a meeting of the Hindus of Krishnagar and the neighbouring places was held on the 6th June at 7 p. m. in the Krishnagar Public Library compound, under the presidency of Babu Jyoti Prosad Chatterji and the ban of untouchability was removed in respect of certain sub-castes of the Hindus. The meeting was addressed by a number of leading high caste Hindu gentlemen and after Hari Sankirtan was performed, high class Brahmins, Kayasthas and others freely drank water touched by the sub-castes. This will impart fresh vigour to the Hindu society which is showing signs of decay. The whole audience evinced great enthusiasm in the movement. The people of the sub-castes showed their gratitude by taking the dust of the feet of the Brahmins.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n747/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

The Tamil University: With regard to the discussion raised in the Madras Legislative Council of establishing a University for the Tamil districts, the Government has appointed a Committee consisting of 35 members, with the Raja of Ramnad as President. The Committee will examine the following, among other questions: (1) The necessity for a University in Tamil districts (2) The nature of the University, whether mainly a teaching or a affiliating University, or a partially affiliating and partially teaching University or federal University. (3) Jurisdiction and location of the University. (4) Sources from which funds are available for financing University and (5) The lines on which it should be founded.

Public Libraries in Madras: The Madras Government has taken a laudable step in providing Rs. 10,000 for distribution as grants to Local Bodies for public libraries. As New India remarks, the sum is very insufficient for the needs of the Presidency, and we hepe it will be increased soon. The conditions attached to the grants are also harrassing. Proper auditing of accounts of Municipalities and Local Bodies is of course very necessary, but the provision for inspection by District Educational Officers and other Government servants is liable to be abused by some over-enthusiastic officers. A certain latitude should also be given to local authorities in the choice of literature for their libraries and it is also wise to give some grants to Adult Education Societies which are doing good work.

Delhi Social Service League: The Delhi Social Service League proposes to give its immediate attention to problems of hygiene and infant welfare of the labour colony in Karul Bagh ( a suburb of Delhi.) The colony is situated outside the city walls in an open area and is under the jurisdiction of the Delhi Municipality. It is called Rangapura and has a labour population of about 4530 who are mostly engaged in tanning and shoemaking industries, or are employed in mills and building operations in the new Capital (Raisina). The high rate of infant and adult mortality in the locality had drawn the attention of the League, which attributes it to a want of filtered water and dearth of even unfiltered water for drinking, domestic and sanitary purposes, as also to the absence of drains, pucca roads, and medical help in the shape of dispensaries, maternity and baby welfare centres. The Municipality is also being approached to take up the question of improving the health and sanitation of the locality.

The Punjab Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha: The Hony. Secretary writes: Reports of 242 widow marriages have been received from the different branches and co-workers of the Sabha, throughout India in the month of April 1926. The total number of marriages held in the current year i.e, from 1st January 1926 to the end of April 1926, has reached 865 as detailed below:—1. According to Caste :—Brahmin 158, Khatri 95, Arora 88, Aggarwal 141, Kaisth 27, Rajput 79, Sikh 112, Misc. 165, Total 865. 2. According to Provinces:— Punjab and N W. F. P. 569, Sind 36, Delhi 23, U. P. 180, Bengal 35, Madras 1, Bombay 1, C. I. 6, Assam 2, Behar and Orissa, 12, Total 865. 3. Voluntary donation received during the month is Rs. 85–10–0 and the total amount during the year is Rs. 257–9–0.

A Rare Diamond: A Tanjore correspondent of the Swarajya writes:—Recently, it will be remembered, the valuables and historic relics of the Tanjore Palace Estate were sold in public auction under the immediate presence and the supervision of the then District Judge of Tanjore West, Mr. P.C. Lobo, Bar-at-Law. In this sale, a necklace consisting of various kinds of precious stones was purchased by a merchant for Rs. 4,000 and odd. This was resold to another merchant for Rs. 10,000 and odd. This second purchaser took away the precious stones from the necklace and began reshaping them into several jewels. In this process he met with a diamond weighing about $5\frac{1}{8}$ carats which he got recut and set in a ring. The present owner of this historic ring is one Mr. Narayanasami Pillay of Negapatam, a merchant and commission agent. This rare and wonderful piece of stone is bluish white with a light rosy tint during day-time but changes into a blue stone when exposed to the sun's rays. It does not shine in a dark chamber during day-time but sheds a bright moon-like lustre in a completely closed dark room during nights. The magnitude of the dazzle of this wonderful stone of the royal household of Tanjore, during nights, is double the size of the stone itself. The local diamond merchants and many other experts from Madras and other far-off places who paid a visit to this queen of stones confess that, in all their life, they have not come across a stone of this kind and that it baffles all valuation. It may even be a new kind of radia diamond.

A Summer School at Quilon: This was sent to us for publication:—The first Travancore and Cochin Y. M. C. A. Summer School is proving a success fully up to the hopes of those associations which have sent students to it. About 40 students from various parts of these States are taking the intensive course there. All of them are secretaries and leaders of the Y.M.C A. work. Even though the intensive programme each day extends from 6-45 in the morning to 8-15 at night, there are games and swimming every afternoon as a part of the course, and there is as much enjoyment as hard work in the School. Mr. E. C. Worman is teaching Association History and Methods of Religious Work, Mr. K. T. Paul, Modern Indian Biogrophies; Emily Gilchriest Hatch, Educational Methods including the Drama, Pictures, Charts, Lantern Slides and Surveys; Mr. S. Manuel, Co-operative Methods; Mr. D. S. Hatch, Mechanics and Methods of Y. M. C. A. Work, also Bee-keeping; Mr. J. Jesudas, Poultry and Husbandry; Dr. A. G. Noehren, Physical Education, Mr. K. K. Kuruvilla and Professor P. S. Marvin of Oxford, Social Service, Citizenship and Christian Ethics. The games, swimming and evening meetings are held in the open air on the sea beach, near Sea View Bungalow, where the teaching faculty are living.

A Strike of Wives: Thus the Hitavada, Nagpur: "We have all heard of many strikes but this is the first time we hear of " a strike of wives. " A Moscow message to the Times of India says that a strike of wives, the first recorded in Russian history, was successful in the peasant village of Karmava recently. A peasant woman, Aksinia Karasieff by name, was given a sound beating by her husband for attending meetings and declaring that women are the equals of men. Immediately the enraged woman called out every woman of the village from her home and ordered them to strike against the tyranny of their lords and masters. The women complied. The houses were empty, the children were neglected and the cows unmilked. The correspondent then points out:—The women had made the village schoolhouse into a fortress and there embattled, they stood until they were assured that their terms would be agreed to. The men marched on to the schoolhouse determined to make short work of the petticoat rebellion. But they found the schoolhouse barricaded, the women determined on fight and no apparent means of subduing them. The husbands scratched their heads in perplexity. Nothing of the kind had been known in Russia before and there were no precedents. Finally the women gained a complete victory. The husbands sheepishly signed a pledge to refrain from beating or cursing their wives; and the triumphant women then returned to their homes to still the protesting cries of the deserted children and farm animals."

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n748/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

A Solution of the British Indian Problem: Mr. J. Ganapathy, Palamacottah, has drawn up the following solution of the British Indian Problem for the consideration of Indian leaders and British statesmen:—1. That the British nation grant to British India responsible Government immediately, the King of England holding the same place in Indian constitution through his representative as he now does in the British constitution. 2. That in return for this boon British India be bound not only to use British goods freely but also to buy all foreign goods she may require except agricultural produce from Great Britain alone for the next 10 or 20, 30 or 40 or 50 years as may be agreed upon, subject to the following conditions:—That no monopoly, or combine or trust shall be created in Great Britian for the manufacture or transportation of any goods for sale in India. That a standing committee composed of the representatives of Indian and British Chambers of Commerce be empowered to declare after due inquiry at the instance of any Indian merchant or trader that the price demanded for any kind of British goods was unduly high and to reduce the price to any level it thought fair to both countries. That all the higher appointments in every department of the British Indian Government, Civil and Military, one half shall be held by the Indians and the other half by Britishers; the latter receiving as overseas allowance one-third of the pay attached to their offices in addition to such pay. That in every legislature in British India a number of Britishers be nominated as members by the King or his representative. That the Native State in India shall only be responsible to the British Crown, the British India Government being only an ally of the British Crown in so far as the Native States are concerned. That the British Indian constitution be in all other respects what it is now.

The Kirpan Cases In Sindh: The Hon. Secretary of the Sri Guru Singh Sabha writes to inform that the general congregation of Sikh men and women assembled in Gurudwara on the evening of 30th May 1926, passed the following resolution unanimously:—"The Kirpan or sword, which is one of the essential sacred symbols of the Sikhs, was exempted from the operations and restrictions of the Indian Arms Act several years ago and the law prescribed no length for its size because the Sikhs consider such specification as sacrilegious. Ever since the exemption the Sikhs have been openly wearing Kirpans of different sizes. Since 1921 some Sikhs in the Punjab were imprisoned for wearing Kirpans longer than nine inches, though numerous others were wearing much longer Kirpans without let or hinderance! In 1924 two Sikhs, who had been convicted for wearing Kirpans longer than 9 inches, thought it expedient to relax the policy of orthodox non-co-operation and appealed to the Lahore High Court, which decided both the cases in their favour and they were honourably acquitted. The High Court declared that the Kirpan meant sword and that according to law a Sikh carrying a sword committed no offence. Some weeks thereafter two Sikhs were arrested and hauled up before the City Magistrate of Hyderabad, Sind. The attention of the authorities was invited to the judgment, of the Lahore High Court and both the cases were withdrawn. It is alleged that a few months back some Sikhs were fined at Mirpurkhas and Sukkur and another recently fined at Tando Adam for wearing Kirpans longer than 9 inches. Such a case is also pending against a Sikh visitor from the Punjab in the Court of the City Magistrate, Hyderabad, Sind. In 1922 the Sind Sikh Provincial Conference held at Sukkur during Easter Holidays and the Sind Sikh Publicity Committee in their open letter to the Viceroy dated 15th June 1922, had already protested against the Bombay Government's "unlawful" order fixing the size of the Kirpan to be 9 inches. This meeting of the Sikhs, held under the auspices of Sri Guru Singh Sabha, Hyderabad, while inviting the kind attention of the Executive and the Judicial authorities to the above facts, respectfully urges that the alleged convictions against the Sikhs at Sukkur, Mirpurkhas, and Tando Adam be set aside, the case pending at Hyderabad be withdrawn and the Bombay Government's above-mentioned order be cancelled."

ADVERTISEMENTS

MATRIMONIAL.

WANTED a grown up girl or virgin widow of any Brahmin Caste to marry a Madhwa Brahmin aged 29 in Tanganyika Government Service on Sh. 500/- per mensem. The bride should be prepared to accompany. For further particulars apply to R. R. C/o the Indian Social Reformer.

PROF. ERNEST WOOD'S FAMOUS BOOKS.

CONCENTRATION—A PRACTICAL COURSE.

This extremely popular book, which has already undergone six editions, has now been thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged. Mostly Re-written.

Contents: Success in Life—The Magic Box—Aids to Concentration—Chains of Gold—Concentration in Daily Life—Control of the Body and the Senses—The Removal of Intruding Thoughts—Methods of Concentration—What Meditation is—Meditation—Obstacles to—Mantric and Symbolic Meditation—Conclusion.

Price. Wrappers; Re. 1 Boards, Re. 1-4 Cloth, Re. 1-8.

CHARACTER-BUILDING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

Contents: Why you must Develop Character—What Character is—Preparing the Ground—The Foundations—The Walls—The Roof—The Verandah—The Gardens—The Orchard—The Three Fundamental Virtues—Testing the Character—The Man of Will—The Man of Love—The Philanthropist—The Man of Understanding—The Philosophy—The Way of Imagination—The Magician—The Man of Investigation—The Scientist—The Man of Reverence—The Devotee—The Man of Beauty—The Artist—The Science of the Emotions—The Three Fundamental Vices—Ultimate Aims—The Great Law.

MEMORY—TRAINING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

"A capital essay on the training of memory, with practical exercises of self-tuition."—Review of Reviews.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n749/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Social Reform Directory.

Under this heading we propose to publish from time to time a list and short accounts of Institutions of Social Reform, as we are receiving enquiries regarding them. Secretaries or other officials connected with such institutions are requested to send us, free of charge, in brief, accounts of their institutions on the model of those given below. We particularly request information regarding institutions for girls and young women such as Orphanages, Widows' Homes, Hostels for women-students and Rescue Homes.

The Calcutta Protestant Home for Fallen Women.

The Calcutta Protestant Home for fallen women, 68, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home for Christian women and girls. It was founded in 1878 by Miss Lavinia Fendall and has accommodation for 25 girls and 15 babies or children. The girls remain in the Home for periods of 2 years or longer during which they receive vocational education enabling them to make a new start in life. The Home is interdenominational; is maintained by voluntary contributions, and managed by a Committee of ladies representing various Chr stian Communions. Each girl is paid a percentage on the work done by her. The Home is for Europeans and Anglo-Indians only. Its cost is about Rs. 15,000 per annum. The present Lady Superintendent is Sister Eleanor to whom communications should be addressed. The property of the Home which stands in a fine compound in the North of Calcutta is in the custody of a Board of Trustees also representing different Christian Communions. The Convener of the Trustees is the Rev. Herbert Anderson, 59, King's Road, Howrah.

The Children's Rescue Home, Calcutta.

The Children's Rescue Home, No. 22, Dum Dum Road, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home for Hindu and Mahomedan girls mainly rescued from the haunts of vice in Calcutta. It is under the auspices and control of the Calcutta Vigilance Society who collected the funds for its opening and have undertaken to run it for 3 years as a social experiment. The Home has only just been started. Its Superintendent is Miss Linsell. Matrons and teachers have been appointed and the girls who vary in age from 4 to 10 will have their religious susceptibilities respected and, it is hoped, will be so brought up that they shall find it possible to return to respectability in their own communities. The Home will be independent of Police control or connection but will work in helpful co-operation with the Police who under the Children's Act are now in a position to prevent the exploitation of child life in the brothels of this City.

The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.

Much of the spade work done towards the amelioration of the condition of the women of Bombay is due to this organisation. It conducts a Hostel for women students and a Widows' Home. Elocution and essay competitions exclusively for girls are held annually under its auspices. Scholarships to women and girl students studying in Schools and Colleges are provided by this Association. Mr. D. G. Dalvi and Mrs. Kashalkar are the Joint Secretaries.

Sir Ganga Ram's Widow Re-marriage Society.

The Society has extended its activities throughout India. It publishes three monthly journals named Vidhva Sahaik in Urdu, Vidhva Bandu in Hindi and Widows' Cause in English. The Society conducts an Ashram for invalid old men and women. It had prior to this a Widows' Home and a High School for Girls. 9 paid workers of the Society visit 521 stations, mostly in the Punjab, several times in the year. The Sabha has three Vidwa Ashrams, in Lahore, Hardwar and Muttra and besides is allowing contributions to several Ashrams in U. P. and other provinces to encourage this movement. The Society has its headquarters at Lahore and has made several efforts to enlist the co-operation of similar institutions in other parts of India. The Honorary Secretary of the Society is Lala Lajpat Rai Sahani.

Kanya Mahavidyalya, Jullunder City.

The avowed object of this institution is to give useful and practical training to women so as to fit them for domestic life. The courses of studies prescribed have this object in view and students are not prepared for University Examinations. The Vidyalya maintains also a Widows' Home and an Ashram or Orphanage. Mr. Dev. Raj is the President of the Vidyalya which has done much to improve the position of women in Northern India.

Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

This excellent institution is still in its infancy and owes its existence to the indefatigable efforts of Yamini Purna Tilakamma. It is a Rescue Home for the uplift of the Devadasi community. Propaganda work on behalf of this institution is carried on both in Madras and the mofussil by the Kalavantula Sabha.

The League of Mercy, Bombay.

It is a Society for aiding, retrieving and succouring fallen European and Eurasian women and girls in the Bombay Presidency. Besides doing preventive and rescue work and assisting young women found in morally undesirable surroundings by providing shelter and help, it conducts a small creche for babies up to 4 years of age and a Children's Home at Lonavla. The Society has a branch at Poona. Its Bombay address is Karanjia House, Lamington Road, Bombay 11.

A Widows' Home At Puri.

At the instance of the Hindu Mahasabha, Babu Gopa Bandhu Das has opened a Widows' Home at Puri, which is one of the important places of pilgrimage for Hindus in Northern India, to give shelter to widows and other women who get stranded there.

The Pandharpur Orphanage and Foundling Asylum.

This institution is maintained at Pandharpur by the Bombay Prarthana Samaj. The Foundling Home is the only institution of the kind founded and maintained under non-Christian auspices. During the half a century the institution has been in existence, it has been the means of saving hundreds of Hindu widows from sin and crime. All communications should be directed to the Secretary.

Training for Social Work.

A course of training for Social Work is given for women students at the University Settlement, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay. The aim of the course is to provide opportunities by which women of all communities, who have finished their general education, may prepare for a life of usefulness and service. The course, which extends over a period of one year, includes both theoretical and practical training. During the monsoon, students may prepare for the Social Diploma given by the Social Service League in October. Special training is given to any students who look forward to making Social Service one of their definite interests and activities in later life. The course of training begins in June. Further information may be had from Mrs. Maclean, Wilson College, Bombay 7.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n750/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed .. ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,003
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, asur, Hydrabad (Deccan), sansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents —The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2% from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5% per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)

Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Dohad ( „ „ ).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha (District West Khandesh).
Parola (District West Khandesh).
Nira (District Poona).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily, balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n751/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

FREE FOR THE ASKING.

SEVEN UPANISHADS.

( Isha, Kena, Katha, Prasna, M[illegible]upanishadiya ) Deva Nagari with English translation and notes by H. R. Bhagavat, 2nd edition, Price Rs. 2-8-0.

FREE IN JUNE 1926.

(1) Any Hindu B.A. B. L., (2) any Hindu Professor (3) any Hindu Head Master of a High School, (4) any Hindu graduate whose age exceeds 30, (5) any Hindu pleader whose age exceeds 30, or (6) any Hindu Government or State servant getting Rs. 100 or more per mensem, can get the above book free of cost on sending three annas for postage. If he so chooses, he should send two annas more for postal registration.

All letters bearing any date of June 1926 will be attended to.

H. R. BHAGAVAT, SADASHIV PETH, POONA CITY.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, | ... | ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS ,, | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n752/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a

Tonic?

IF SO

use only the world renowned

"Atank Nigrah Pills."

Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness digestive troubles and similar complaints.

Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)

Bombay Branch:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions | 1 Inch | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. | | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | | | |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes : "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

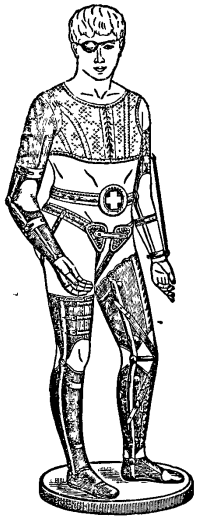
AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n753/mode/1up

realpatidar.com



RELIEF
FOR THE
SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,
Lamington Road,
BOMBAY No. 4.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 14 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship." The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n754/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1926. No. 48

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Social Evolution in British India.
Early Marriage Horrors.
Women as Legislative Councillors.
Internal Consumption of Opium.
Awakening among Bohra Young Men.
Another Child-wife Tragedy.
Tinnevelly District Adi-Dravida Conference.
The "Republic."
The "Day-Light."
Communal Differences and British Rule.
A Common Language for India.
Our Sisters in Factories.
A Kalavicharam Case in South Kanara.
Widow Marriage Home, Vayalpad.
Dr. Cadman on Prohibition in America.
Anglo-Indian Education.
Music Before Mosques.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Social Evolution in British India: Sir Henry Maine observed fifty years ago that Indian social evolution has been arrested by the British Indian Courts. What was fluid custom in pre-British days has hardened into a rule of law from which departure was practically impossible. The East India Company's Judges extended the Brahmanical code to tribes and castes to which they were not intended to apply. The British Barrister Judges, on the other hand, filled any gap that disclosed itself in Indian law by borrowing from ancient Roman or medieval ecclesiastical law which they had studied in their Inns of Court. The result was a highly explosive compound which has gone far to shatter Indian Society. The most recent instance of this kind, is the judgment of the Privy Council in a Bombay case in which a claim was made upon the property of a deceased Hindu of the trading caste by one who had been his mistress for some years at the time of his death. The decision is of considerable importance in its bearing upon the social and family life of Hindus, and we propose to deal with it at length in a future issue. Suffice it here to say that the Privy Council, on the basis of texts which have obviously been rendered obsolete by the progress of social ideas, has decreed in favour of the claim. The decision cannot but strike any one, who knows anything about the state of Hindu society at the present day, as calculated to plunge it back into a social condition when the standards of family life were very different from what they are now. It will strengthen the hands of the members—about twenty have given notice of a motion in the next session—who are moving in the Legislative Assembly for the establishment of a Supreme Court of Appeal for India in India.

Early Marriage Horrors: The slow increase in the age of marriage of girls, especially in view of the relatively more rapid rise in that of men, is creating a position charged with terrible consequence. We have recorded more than one case of suicide of girl wives in order to avoid forced intercourse with their husbands. In many other cases, the real cause is disguised by some other excuse such as bad cooking or neglect of household work. The latest case occurred in Madras where a Brahmin girl of 13 or 14 years died as the result of burns. In her dying statement, the girl said that her husband had poured kerosine oil on her clothes and set fire to them. The husband in his statement at the inquest said that he had sought to have intercourse with his wife but she had told him that she would consent if he came some time after. He went out and, after a short interval, he heard the cries of his wife and found her clothes on fire. The Jury found that the death was either suicidal or accidental and was not caused by the act of the husband. This must be accepted unless a regular Court finds otherwise. In any case, there can be no doubt that the sexual attentions of the husband were unwelcome to the girl, and we endorse Mrs. Margaret E. Cousens' observations published in the Madras papers. She writes: "The case throws a lurid light on the unnatural system of child marriage which has become worse than ever by its separation from the joint-family system. The only remedy is the raising of the age of consent to 16, thus making illegal any marital relations till girls are more able and fitted to take care of themselves and their husbands and till husbands have less temptation to act the tyrant. The Women's Indian Association has this year incorporated into its objects the abolition of child marriage and child-parentage. The many cases of suicides and deaths of young wives reported recently in the press cause us to redouble our efforts towards gaining this reform and we ask all sympathisers to join up with us and support our endeavours."

Women as Legislative Councillors: The recent orders of the Government of India enabling Provincial Councils to remove the disqualification of women to stand as candidates for the several Legislatures will soon be given effect to in Bombay and Madras. Dr. Paranjpye has given notice of a resolution, which he intends to move in the next session of the Bombay Legislative Council, proposing to remove the ban on women becoming members of the local Council. We understand that notice has been given of a similar resolution in the Madras Legislative Council. We have no doubt that the resolutions will all be passed, and we trust other Provinces will also do likewise. Women have already acquitted themselves creditably in Municipalities and Local Bodies and as Hony. Magistrates and lawyers too, and there is no reason why they should not do equally well as Councillors. The presence of women representatives in the Legislative Assembly is very necessary, since the attitude of the Assembly in the past towards the Age of Consent, the Maternity Bill and such other legislation affecting women has not been all that it should be, and there is no doubt that even a solitary woman representative would have done much to influence its deliberations. We are glad that some member has given notice of a resolution in the Legislative Assembly to remove the ban on women becoming members. We have in this connection to call attention to the retrograde amendment introduced in the Madras Electoral Rules, by which a woman of a family in Malabar might transfer her right of vote to a male member of the family. Malabar is considered to be most advanced in

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n755/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

female education and it is nothing but an insult to the self-respect of women to deprive them of even their power of vote. Of course, the provision is only an enabling one, but it is often liable to be misused by interested parties. When there are even women Legislative Councillors in Cochin State, we cannot believe for a moment that their sisters in the neighbouring province are so ignorant as not even to understand the use of the vote.

Internal Consumption of Opium : The statement which the Government of India has issued on its policy towards the internal consumption of opium, is most disappointing. Having decided to gradually stop the immoral traffic in opium to the Far East, we thought that Government would now turn its attention to eradicate the evil in India, except for strictly medicinal or scientific purposes, by legislation or otherwise. But it is not to be. Government, after an exhaustive survey of the situation, has come to the conclusion that "a policy aiming at the prohibition of the use of opium in India, for purposes other than medical and scientific, would be clearly impracticable in the circumstances even if it were desirable." Government says that there is no evidence that there is any serious and widespread abuse of opium in British India and that the statistics show a progressive reduction of consumption in British India as a whole, but it has conveniently omitted to supply statistics in support of its statement. It is, however, well-known that in several parts of the country the consumption of opium is much above the minimum prescribed by the League of Nations. Especially is the evil prevalent to a large extent in Assam, Punjab, and the Godaveri districts. Government waxes eloquent over the medicinal virtues of opium and its use as an anodyne for large sections of the population placed beyond the reach of skilled medical assistance; but it forgets that it is only in large towns and cities where skilled medical assistance can be had that the evil is rampant to a large degree. Still more indefensible is the Government's stand by the Royal Commission on Opium which reported in 1893. The conclusions of this Commission have been challenged by impartial individuals as going direct against the evidence tendered before it, and, further, during the last thirty years or so, medical research has made many discoveries on the injurious effects of opium which were not available to the Commission when it reported.

Awakening among Bohra Young Men : It is a hopeful sign of the times that the Bohras, an important sect among Mahomedans in this part of the country, are awakening to the need for effecting urgent social reforms in their midst, and it is but fitting that young men should take the lead in the matter. Addressing the Young Men's Bohra Association which held its annual meeting on the 19th instant, Mr. Amiruddin Shalebhoy Tyebji made an impressive speech. He rightly pointed out that there is a great deal of extraneous ceremonial observances on occasions of marriages and deaths, some really essential and some copied from other communities merely out of imitativeness or mere courtesy, which may well be shed, thus effecting a considerable saving of money ill-spent which can be put to more practical uses such as establishing scholarships, founding useful institutions like schools, hospitals, maternity homes etc. Mr. Tyebji did not pay mere lip service to social reform, for, in his own person, he has set a noble example to others by observing only such ceremonies as were absolutely necessary during the recent sad death of his wife. We are glad to see that the President stressed the importance of education, for it is upon education and more education alone that we can find a remedy for the communal ills from which the country is now suffering.

Another Child-Wife Tragedy : The Sholapur correspondent of the Times of India writes on the 23rd instant: "In a sessions case decided yesterday in the court of Mr. R. S. Broomfield, I. C. S., District and Sessions Judge, Sholapur, Bhagwan Bhanudas Satpute of Jambgaon, Taluka Barsi, District Sholapur, was tried for an offence under Section 304 I. P. C. The facts in brief were that the accused who is aged only 20 had a quarrel over some household work with his wife, who was only 10 or 12 years old and beat her. The prosecution could not find out with what the blow was given, but the medical evidence showed that she died of concussion of the brain due to a blow near the left ear. The assessors, who were four in all, opined that the accused was guilty of simple hurt only. The Sessions Judge disagreed with the assessors' opinion and convicted the accused under Section 304, and sentenced him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment."

Tinnevelly Dt. Adi-Dravida Conference : Thanks to the efforts of Mr. Veerian, the depressed classes of Madras are rapidly realising their disabilities in society. The various Adi-Dravida Conferences that are now and then being held in the Presidency, speak much for the organising ability of Mr. Veerian. It was only last week that Mr. Veerian addressed the Adi-Dravidas of the Tinnevelly District and gave them some good advice on matters of emigration, prohibition and agriculture. Referring to the recruitment of labour to Ceylon, he warned the Adi-Dravidas to keep a watchful eye on the deceitful methods practised by the Kanganis or recruiting agents, who, it would appear, by forging signatures of the Village Munsiffs, are decoying women and minors without the knowledge of their lawful guardians. It is also stated that certain Village Munsiffs blindly affix their signatures to contracts without making proper enquiries. This, however, would no longer happen if, as Mr. Veerian pointed out, Government adopts the system of appointing some Adi-Dravidas as Village Munsiffs and Headmen.

The "Republic" : This new English weekly in Cawnpore, edited by Mr. G. P. Nair, is a welcome addition to the ranks of Indian journalism. As the name itself indicates, the Republic has in view a Federal Republic for India, though not now, at a later date. The objects which the paper sets before itself are worthy and commendable: to shake off the present political sluggishness, to remove the social evils, to create a spirit of mutual goodwill between the Muslims and Hindus, to elevate the untouchables from the oppression and tyranny of the orthodox class, to promote education among the masses and develop the facilities and resources for agriculture and industry. The policy of the paper, we are glad to note, will be "to refrain on the one hand from slavishly following every drift of party or popular impulse and on the other from wearying readers by forcing insincere or artificial 'stunts' upon them." We daresay the paper will prove of much use to a city like Cawnpore which cannot boast of many journals in its midst.

The "Day-Light" : This is a new English weekly from Meerut, edited by Mr. N. L. Bhatnagar. It proposes to devote itself to the solution of the problems of ignorance and poverty, the two greatest curses of India. The first issue contains a call to the graduates of our Universities for co-operation and we hope it will not be slow in forthcoming. The annual subscription is Rs. 4.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n756/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JUNE 26, 1926.

COMMUNAL DIFFERENCES AND BRITISH RULE.

Twenty-five centuries ago the Emperor Asoka laid down the equal treatment of all religious sects as the corner-stone of Indian imperial policy. That principle was observed by Hindu rulers as testified to by the ancient Syrian Christian, Jewish and Parsee communities which have existed for centuries unmolested in the practice of their respective religions. The policy was taken over by their Mahomedan successors and so long as it was adhered to there was no serious challenge offered to Moslem supremacy in the government of the country. The departure from that policy was the main cause of the downfall of Mahomedan rule in India. British rule similarly was established on the foundation of perfect religious equality. The Queen's Proclamation declared that no favour would be shown to any religion and that every religion will be protected equally by the State. This policy was on the whole strictly adhered to till the beginning of this century. The first open departure from it was the declaration of Lord Minto, in his reply to a Mahomedan deputation, that religious beliefs should be taken into account in conferring the franchise for the reformed Legislative Councils. Even Lord Minto's Government, however, did not contemplate the separate communal electorates which Lord Morley in a fit of impatience foisted upon the country. This gave a new bent to the course of Indian politics. This concession to the communal spirit is chiefly responsible for much of the political difficulties of the Government of India since then. These difficulties have greatly increased and threaten, unless counteracted by proper measures, to bring about the disruption of the results of a century of British rule.

The modification of the Partition of Bengal disappointed Mahomedans without satisfying the Hindus of that province. The passive acquiescence of the British Government in the annexation of the Turkish provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina by the defunct Austrian Empire, was another disappointment. The failure to give effect to the British pledges regarding Turkey in the Treaty of Sevres, led to the Khilafat movement in India and the Non-Co-operation movement was avowedly started to give a non-violent direction to the feelings roused by that Treaty. The Treaty of Lausanne was not regarded as a concession to justice but as the fruit of Turkish military prowess against the Greeks who had been backed by the British. The abolition of the Khilafat and the measures of secularization of the State adopted by Kemal Pasha, led to the collapse of the Khilafat and, with it, of the Non-Co-operation movement, the rise of the Swarajist Party and the entry of Congressmen into the reformed Legislatures. This immediately brought to the front the question of communal representation not only in the Legislative Councils, but in the Municipal and Local bodies and in the public services, and the differences became acute especially in Bengal and the Punjab where Hindus and Mahomedans are in about equal proportion in the population. The political differences reacted on the religious and social sphere, and the recent Hindu-Mahomedan riots are the consequence. The Hindu Mahasabha which for many years had remained a negligible quantity, sprang into prominence and opened wide its doors to all communities professing a faith of Indian origin. In Northern India it has become more influential than any non-sectional movement. It has undoubtedly created a new spirit among Hindus, which Government does not seem to have realised adequately. There is a feeling growing that Government expects the Hindu community to give way whenever there is a dispute relating to religious observance. The comments of a Brahmo journal of Calcutta on the recent orders of the Government of that province lend colour to it. We reproduce them in another column. The situation has a sociological interest transcending even its political gravity. Foreigners viewing the Hindu community from outside are struck by its numerous and conflicting sects and castes. They do not see the uniting principle underlying these. Even Hindus themselves are not conscious of it. But the sequence of events during the last few days is of deep significance.

Communal conflicts have hitherto been generally between Mahomedans and Hindus. Now we have conflicts between Mahomedans and Sikhs, and there has been one or two incidents between Mahomedans and Gurkhas. The Rawalpindi riots which commencing on the 15th lasted for three or four days, originated in a quarrel between Mahomedans and Sikhs and eventuated in the burning of Hindu shops and houses. English journalists, commenting on the communal troubles, usually observe that they prove the necessity of the continuance of British rule. Deeper reflection will show that they are a proof of the failure of that rule in its most essential duty as an imperial government, and that they will, if allowed to continue, become its greatest peril. India is not the only country where there are several races and languages. Dr. Gerald Scott, in an article in the current number of the Review of Reviews headed "Why America is Prosperous," observes that there are forty-seven races and forty-seven languages represented in the federation, but they are kept from antagonism by the provisions of the American constitution prohibiting the levy of any customs duties between one State and another, the maintenance of any military force by any State or the hindrance in any way whatever of absolute free trade between the several States. "The citizens of each State," it is provided by another article, "shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States." Comparing the United States with Europe, he observes that the races and languages of Europe are actually fewer in number. It will be seen that we have all the conditions in India which prevent antagonism between the races and languages of the United States, but there is one thing here which makes all the difference. The United States do not take note of the communal and religious affiliations of their citizens. Here

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n757/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

the very franchise is communal. The steady pressure of British rule previous to the intrusion of communal considerations, kept the Indian communities from antagonism. When that rule began to differentiate between Hindu and Mahomedan and Anglo-Indian and Sikh, its foundations became loosened and its force as a unifying agent began to relax. It has now to shape its course in constant fear of offending the susceptibilities of this or that community. It can no longer say as it could in the last century in the words of Oliver Cromwell: "The State takes no note of men's beliefs." It has become involved in a communal maze where it can please none and must offend all. It is not easy to suggest the means by which it can extricate itself from its present invidious position. But it must extricate itself somehow or other, for otherwise it would be compassing its own certain ruin.

A COMMON LANGUAGE FOR INDIA.

(By Mr. J. Raja Ratnam Isaac.)

Leaders in India desire that there should be a common language for all India in order to unite together the people of the land and become the medium of communication between the different parts of the country. It is not the desire of the leaders that the vernaculars should be given up—to think of such a thing will be neither practical nor desirable nor rational.

There have been attempts to make Hindi or Urdu or Bengali that common language. Telugu and Tamil and many other languages have also been spoken of as suitable languages, being the vernaculars for a large number of people in India. It seems to be the fashion to try and impress upon the rest of the people the importance of their own mother tongue. It is of the utmost importance to find out what that common language ought to be, before we begin to agitate for its adoption. A mistake made in this will not only result in a considerable waste of energy but will also end in a stupendous failure. People who have recommended one or the other of the Indian languages, have done so, perhaps choosing the one which is being spoken by a large number of people in India. Whichever language that has been tried has always been found a hardship for the other parts of the country, one of the reasons being that only the educated—shall I say educated in English?—understand the value of a common tongue for India and when they tried to learn another vernacular it became practically the third language they had to master. In the Bangalore Y.M.C.A., we attempted to organise classes for studying Hindi four times and every time it had to be given up, not only because of the difficulty of the task but also because the men were not convinced of its objective and its usefulness. Certainly, it will be a great burden and practically an impossibility for the villager first to learn his own vernacular—which only a very small percentage of them know to read and write—and then learn an additional language for which they would hardly find any use. To ask him to give up his mother tongue and learn only the common language will be nothing short of a preposterous proposition.

Therefore in the selection of a common language, we have to ask the question whether that language ought to be the one which is being spoken by the largest number in India or by the largest number of leaders and thinkers in the country and that from all parts of the land. These latter are the men who have to come together and discuss the affairs of the country and take the leadership in this land. I venture to think that it is immaterial for the masses to come together and exchange views and it is most unpractical. It is of paramount importance that the leaders should have a common language and the number who speak that language must be ever increasing and widening throughout the length and breadth of the land. Have we not got such a common language now? Does not English fall in line with this and has it not helped our leaders to come together and guide the land? Over two millions of the leading classes speak it from all parts of India and millions of the future leaders of the country are learning it. Though the number who speak English seems to be small when compared to the population of India, yet the leadership of the educated in this country is far out of proportion to what is indicated by their numbers.

Again Mahatma Gandhi has beautifully defined the idea of the nationalism of India—that it is the desire for the freedom of the country so that it may be free in order to die if need be so that the human races may live, that India may contribute its share to the wealth of the world. This can be achieved only by a vital contact with the rest of the world and not by isolation. If India's culture and civilization is to be made available to the world, I cannot think of any better step than to make English the common language of India, just as it is the adopted common language of the world to-day. If we feel that we have a mission to the world I maintain that it can best be fulfilled by our making English our common language also.

Yet another reason—the desire for an additional language must be for its cultural value and should make it possible for us to imbibe the wealth of the world. It is to make it available for us the progress and knowledge of the world. We do not want to be petty insular and sink within ourselves. We want to drink deep of the larger life of the world. If this is true, then there is no other language which we can covet for our nation as the English language. English is being spoken not only by the largest number of the enlightened people of the world but also it is the one language spoken by the largest number among the non-English speaking nations of the world. Because of the British contact we have made a splendid start. The spread of the English language is very rapid in India and it is bound to be of immense benefit to India and the rest of the world. I do not think that there is anything except unjustifiable prejudice which does not advocate it to be made the common language of India. India will

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n758/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

certainly be the poorer if this world contact which we have through English is lost.

I met a young lady in Europe, a relation of Tolstoy. She was glad that she and I could converse together in English and she said that when she was a little child the one advice Tolstoy gave her was, "learn to speak English." If India is not going to have English as the common language, then the only other language which can perhaps take its place is French.

OUR SISTERS IN FACTORIES.

(By Mr. S. K. Jain.)

The charges against the general public for neglect of its duty are increasing day by day. The grievance of the female factory workers is one of them. The reason for this negligence of duty is obvious. It has become a difficult affair with the rich to think in terms of the poor. The middle classes are hastening to come in level with the rich and, as such, to think of their brethren who are placed in less fortunate circumstances is absolutely out of the question. The poor have ceased to cry not because they have lost hope, but because they are helpless. The cry of the reformers is a cry in the wilderness.

It is no wonder, therefore, that very few know that there are about 30,000 women workers in the Bombay mills who form nearly one-fifth of the textile-workers in the city. Though the grievances of these women are many, they never complain, nor does anyone care for them. They go on with their work day in and day out, and when a strike breaks out they go out and go back with the men for grievances which may not directly affect them. And this clears their position in the mills!

It is time indeed for us to know what this working woman is. She is a human-bee. She gets up as early as 4 o'clock in the morning and attends to her domestic work, such as washing, cooking, and looking after her children. From morning till evening she works in the mills for 10 hours. Sometimes, it seems, in Ahmedabad she is made to work beyond the time specified in the Factory Act. Such complaints, thanks to the mill owners of Bombay, are very rare in this city. After her hard labour during the day, she goes straightaway home in the evening and again takes up her domestic work. She hardly gets 6 hours' rest. She has no time for recreation. Even on Sundays she finds hardly a couple of hours to go about as men do, but she is very busy, like the humming bee, in preparing household provisions for the year. Nobody need deceive himself with the thought that the mill premise is a place where one can get pure air and pure water. If the single tenements where most of the mill hands live are unhealthy and uncomfortable, the factories are in no way better off. What would be the health of a woman who works for about 17 hours a day and lives in the most congested place without time for recreation or rest? The indifference of the Factory owners in matters affecting the health of the working woman bears testimony to the fact that her hardship is rarely realised.

I had an opportunity, recently, to examine the tap-water in a certain mill in Bombay, and it is no exaggeration to say that I found innumerable well-developed perceivable injurious germs, very small fish, woollen and cotton dust, and dirt. The fact that the mill hands either bring water from home or go out in the recess period to fetch water from the neighbouring places, is itself an adequate proof of the utter uselessness of the tap-water for drinking purposes. The other mills in Bombay fare no better. What does the workwoman do? She either brings water with her in bottles or does not drink water at all. In the hot weather sometimes she has to drink it most reluctantly. In India giving water to the thirsty is considered to be a great virtue (punnia) and the various choultries and water-sheds in India bear testimony to it. It is really painful that the mill owners little realise the fact that most of the diseases originate from unclean water. The health of the poor labourer is not taken into consideration at all.

The mill owners have never thought it their duty to provide decent accommodation for the women-workers to have their afternoon meals during recess. I have seen in one of the Woollen Mills in Bombay these women taking their meals in the godown where the wools are stored. The slightest breeze will do to throw wool-dust or mud in their food. Thus, along with their food they swallow without their knowledge some wool-dust or mud which gets mixed with the food. After meals they take rest either on the wool heap or on the dirty floor. Many come with their babies which also suffer with their mothers for want of decent accommodation. Many drug their children with opium to make them sleep till they return home in the evening. It pains me to say that about 98% of the children born in the industrial areas in Bombay are drugged with opium, and let the reader understand what havoc this poison would work on the coming generations of labour. There is no créche accommodation where these children can be looked after when their mothers are working. The cost of maintaining a créche is not much. It would come to only about Rs. 250 per month for a créche for 25 children, which amount, I am sure, will not ruin the industry even in times of depression.

The very heavy infant mortality in the industrial area in Bombay is the direct result of the bad housing conditions, the drugging of children with opium, want of créche accommodation and want of maternity benefits. It is a great boon to these helpless sisters that Mr. N. N. Wadia has given a princely donation of Rs. 16 lakhs for a free maternity home. Other mill owners like the Currimbhoys and Tatas have also provided facilities.

From the moral point of view these sisters suffer an irreparable loss. Experience has shown me how quickly and virulently vice works in society. Vice finds factories the most fertile field for its luxuriant growth. It is pretty right that cotton and fire cannot be friends. Being placed as they are in the most abject condition it is no wonder the weaker

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n759/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

elements fall victims to degradation. Their mental and physical breakdown is due to the want of some Lady Inspectors who will not only draw their attention to this, but find means to overcome it.

There is the Factory Department. It is not large enough to cope with the work and the Annual Factory Report gives numbers of mills which have never been visited during the year or which have been visited but once in the year. It seems the Government have recently appointed a Lady Inspector, but considering the enormity of the work, I am at a loss to know what one can do alone. This shows that Government are not making a serious attempt to find out how things stand.

Even ten Lady Inspectors will not be enough. It is only they who can lift these sisters in the factories from dire hardship to happiness. What have we done to teach our women on whom devolves all the enormous responsibilities of physical well-being and bodily health and strength? Nothing. On the contrary, we have brought them so low with us in our demoralisation and degradation that to-day she, who presides over the most important department of human life, is hopelessly and profoundly ignorant of the first laws of preservation. Nor is there a man in ten thousand who realises what woman is to the human race, and the tremendous responsibility that devolves upon her. It is time we find a remedy to our self-inflicted blindness.

A KALAVICHARAM CASE IN SOUTH KANARA.

Among the Nambudiri Brahmins of Kerala in South India there is a curious custom of trial and social punishment, when a woman is suspected of immoral relations with any person or persons of any community. As soon as her relatives or members of the community suspect that she is leading an immoral life, a sort of trial, which often extends to over two years, is conducted in a secluded place, in camera, in the presence of half a dozen priests with the help of the local ruling Raja. The suspected woman is isolated and kept in an outhouse to which access is restricted to the vaidikans or priests and the Raja, and none else, without their special consent, is allowed to see or talk to the woman. This trial is said to be conducted according to the so-called Sankara Smrithi applied and applicable to Kerala only. The woman is asked to answer the questions put to her regarding her character and to name all the persons who visited her in order from the very beginning. Then notices are served on the persons named to appear before these judges, so that they may conduct the trial. At the same time these persons are put under temporary socia expulsion. If after the protracted trial the woman is found guilty, she is brought before the public from her confinement and in the presence of all she is declared a licentious woman and forthwith excommunicated ceremoniously and is made to live in a corner of the village ,to be maintained by her former relatives, provided she creates no further troubles. All those who had any connection with the woman are also expelled from the community and most of them embrace Mahomedanism or Christianity just to escape social persecutions. This sort of trial is termed "Kala vichara." The last sensational trial of such a character was conducted in the Cochin State more than 30 years ago in which as many as 64 persons, some of whom were very respectable and rich, were incriminated and driven out of their respective communities. The Maharaja of Cochin made it a condition thereafter that a sum of Rs. 5,000 or so is to be deposited by the complainants and, in case, they fail to prove the alleged immoral alliance satisfactorily, the amount be forfeited and the complainants will then be proceeded against, since it was found that many persons from selfish or other motives or to extort money illegally from the parties not infrequently made false complaints. We are indebted to the New India of Madras for the following report regarding a case of this kind from its South Kanara correspondent:

"A sensational Kalavicharam has been conducted by the Raja of Thekke Kovilakom at Nileshwar. A widow of a particular Illom (Nambudiri house there) was suspected of immorality. There was only a male child in her family, which had properties having an annual value of about Rs. 1,000. About a month back she was brought to Nileshwar, where she was kept in a house close to the Thekke Kovilakom, and the compound of the house was kept under lock and key. Recently the Raja held a Kalavicharam, and it seems that she has given a statement incriminating one Nambudiri, five Nairs and a Moovari. The Raja of Thekke Kovilakom then got the Raja of Kakkad to issue notices to the seven persons concerned, putting them under social interdict, (i.e., prohibiting them from entering temples, touching tanks, wells, etc., and holding intercourse with the other members of their community).

In the meanwhile, there arose a rumour that the Raja was going to give the Nambudiri woman to a Mopla for rupees five hundred. As a result of this rumour, Mr. Vedabandhu, the Secretary of the Arya Samaj, Palghat, Mr. Gopal Naik, Secretary of the Arya Samaj, Mangalore, Mr. N. Prabhu, B. A, B. L, High Court Vakil, Mangalore, Mr. M Madhava Rao, B.A., B.L, High Court Vakil, Mangalore Mr. T. Narayana Nambiar, M A., B.L, Hindu Religious Endowments Inspector, who was on that day at Nileshwar, and some others, went to the Raja of Thekke Kovilakom and requested him not to sell her to a Mopla, and also told him that in case he was going to let her adrift, the Arya Samaj was prepared to take her up. The Raja told them, it is alleged, that she would not be given to a Mopla, that she would be released from her present position after getting some documents executed by her, and that he would try to see whether she could be entrusted to the Arya Samaj It seems that Messrs. Prabhu and Nambiar had a talk with the woman in the house where she was kept under lock and key.

In the meanwhile, things took a sensational turn. In the notices issued to the persons alleged to have been incriminated by the woman, they were asked to appear in the compound where the woman was on the 25th

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n760/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

May, at 2 p. m., and show cause why they should not be excommunicated. On the receipt of these notices, the Nambudiri and the five other Nairs sent a registered notice to the Raja of Kakkad, challenging his authority to conduct the Kalavicharam, alleging that the whole thing was being done by the Raja of Thekke Kovilakom in order to extort money from various persons, to get hold of the property of the woman, and also to gratify the private malice which he bore towards them. They also made a request in it for copies of the proceedings of the Kalavicharam, and informed the Raja that, without prejudice to their other contentions, they would appear at the appointed time and at the appointed place. It seems that a copy of the notice was taken in advance to the Raja, to avoid delay in transmission, but he refused to accept it. On the 25th ultimo, these six persons went to the gate of the compound where the woman was kept, and demanded admission. Admission was refused to them on the ground that they went in a body. They replied that the enquiry was open, that they had been asked to appear at one and the same place and at one and the same time, and that, therefore, they could not help being together. Finally, they said that they would go in one by one, provided that their Vakils also were allowed to accompany them, in reply to which they were told that it was no Court of Law, and that the Vakils should not appear. Then these persons went to Mannambrath Kavu, which was their village temple, where a meeting of Nairs was held, and resolutions were passed challenging the authority of the Raja of Thekke Kovilakom to conduct Kalavicharam and to ostracise Nairs without the consent of the Nair community, alleging that the whole transaction was prompted by the malice and avarice of the Raja, that no weight can be attached to a prostitute brought from Mangalore for the purpose and confined by the Raja in his own compound and under his influence, that the whole incident was illegal, and an unjust and flagrant outrage on common human decency and natural justice, and the interdict caused by the Raja should not be respected by the Nairs. The Nambudiri and the five Nairs then openly bathed in the tank, and went into the temple. Notice has been sent to the Raja by them to show cause why civil and criminal action should not be taken against him for having defamed them. Arrangements are being made to have the suits filed.

Most probably, this would be the last Kalavicharam that Kerala would know. The legality of the Kalavicharam itself would be challenged, as it involves the confinement of a subject of His Majesty the King-Emperor by another subject of His Majesty, and also the conviction of persons."

WIDOW MARRIAGE HOME, VAYALPAD.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

SIR,

In response to your call about our Widow Marriage Home in your letter dated the 7th June, 1926, we have to thank you for the kind enquiry you made about us and furnish the following information:

Under the presidency of Mr. C. Raghunatha Reddi Varma, an Arya Samaj was started in Vayalpad with four or five members in 1913. The strict lives of the members attracted the attention of the public so much so the Samaj spread very quickly. One of the fundamental principles of this Samaj is "Ahimsa" (or kindness to animals). The members began to preach their religion in the near villages and I am glad to say the rural population adopted the Vedic religion and refrained from meat. In the course of some four or five years nearly some thousand people have actually become strict vegetarians and nearly some five or six thousand people have promised to give up non-vegetarian diet. The impetus to the movement was so great that people even gave up "Gangala," a dreadful rite in which a Kali or some other diety is placed in the centre of the town and thousands of goats and buffaloes are offered. This custom is very prevalent in these parts.

Every year an anniversary of the Samaj was held on a grand scale when the non-Brahmins were given holy-thread by the Brahmin purohits.

Thirdly Mr. Raghunatha Reddy has opened a school for the Panchamas in his own house and is financing the institution. He even goes to the extent of feeding the boys and bearing their expenditure on clothes and stationery. He got employment, for such of the panchama boys who have passed their examination, in Government service.

Fourthly on the anniversary of the Samaj in 1911, we are glad to say, we began widow marriages. The first time two marriages were celebrated in the presence of Messrs Somanatha Row, P. S. Sarma, Rishi Ram from Punjab, M. J. Sarma from Madura and Satyanand Swamy. The impetus to the movement was so great that by the end of June 1926 we are able to celebrate twenty widow marriages in all the castes.

The marriage expenses are completely borne by Mr. C. Raghunatha Reddi who conducts the marriages in his own house. From the beginning, but for the ardent zeal of Mr. Reddi, the Samaj would not have come to a good position. He even gave presents to the bride and bridegroom in the form of jewels.

Sriman Ganga Ram has given a good property for the cause of widow marriages. The Lahore Sabha had promised help to this institution, but it did not do so. If Mr. Reddi had not financed it from his own pocket, the Samaj and its work would have slept long ago in these parts.

I have taken the permission of Mr. Reddi to furnish you a short account of this institution. He is a kind and sympathetic man and personally looks to the preaching and other journeys for the sake of stopping "Gangalas."

Vayalpad, Yours etc.,
21st June, 1926. R. RAMACHANDRAIAH.

Dr. CADMAN ON PROHIBITION IN AMERICA.

SOBER AMERICA SPEAKS OUT.

(Continued from the last issue.)

Third, the fact that prohibition is native to our soil and the familiar principle that private rights end where the public good begins, logically lead to the next position. Is the liquor traffic an evil of such virulence as to deserve extermination? In other words, does drinking come within the category of those disastrous practices which ought to be regulated by public control? I affirm that it does, and that the nub of the debate before us is the extent and nature of that control.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n761/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

In spite of resistance to national prohibition the reasons that secured it remain unchanged in America and have been strengthened by the experience of other nations. The perils of alcoholism give a growing uneasiness to statesmen everywhere. And although the degrading habits of those who openly flout the law are serious for them, they are neither as widespread nor as iniquitous as the consequences of the legalized traffic of a decade ago.

Glance back a moment at the Egypt out of which we have come before murmuring too loudly about the "dry wilderness" through which you march to the Promised Land. Saloons on nearly every corner, groggeries in the slums and breweries which owned them in full blast, do not form a pleasing picture of the recent past. They were sinks of human undoing, alive with legislative corruption, political fraud, prostitution, gambling and crime. I know few who dare to hint that these dens of drink and creative sources of poverty and misery should be restored to their former vile supremacy.

Who, I ask, except the dissolute, desire the return of the saloon? Yet should prohibition be weakened at the dictates of its foes, I am convinced that eventually the saloon will (would) return Its non-social and pestilential rule will be resaddled upon the people. Those who are disposed to heed the pleas of the wets for a more liberal interpretation of the law should ask them how the return of the saloon is to be avoided. I have esteemed friends who conscientiously differ with me on this issue but who loathe the saloon. Yet they have not been able to show me where the traffic in intoxicants will wind up once it is legally introduced and sanctioned.

Surely this contingency and the fearful risks it would incur in our crowded vehicular traffic should be taken into account. But I meet those who are averse to prohibition because, as they declare, it was foisted upon the people by a puritanic minority. Let us keep steadily in mind the incorrectness of this declaration. Prohibition was voted overwhelmingly as a policy first in most of the States separately and then nationally for one reason and one only. The voters had become convinced that the liquor traffic was an evil of such magnitude that it had to be destroyed. (Considerably more than half of the people and territory were already under dry laws —local option—before the national Government declared for Prohibition, hence it was not surprising that forty-six of the forty-eight separate State Legislatures accepted the Eighteenth Amendment within a few months after it was passed by both Houses of Congress)

Moreover the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted by those regular methods which the framers of the Constitution devised. And its adoption was more speedy and unanimous than that of any other amendment to the Constitution. As a policy entire legal suppression of the liquor traffic is seventy years old in the United States. During that long period the traffic was reported on from all sides and given repeated opportunities to reform. How did it behave beneath this scrutiny? How did it respond to these opportunities? I ask you to recall its stupid brutalities, its flagrant violations of law and its conscienceless outrages upon the security and peace of countless American homes.

If you urge that some measure not so radical as prohibition should take its place as a control of liquor, the answer is they have been tried elsewhere and in part here and have failed. Taxation, Police supervision, State regulations or the governmentally controlled systems of some of the Canadian Provinces have alike proved ineffective. Finland after experimenting with other plans has followed the example of the United States and adopted Prohibition. Rapid strides towards restriction are being made in Germany. France, Portugal and Spain have remonstrated with Scandinavia because of the diminution in their wine trade there. The powerful distillery and brewery interests of Great Britian are alarmed by the news that Prohibition is deeply rooted in America. They understand what our steadfastness signifies for their lengthy tenure of profit and of the honours of the State.

There are many sober, industrious, loyal, law-abiding men and women who have no sympathy with the deplorable conduct of flask carriers and cabaret habitues. But because they believe that prohibition is wrong in principle, they are by far its most serious-minded and reasonable opponents Yet for those among them who accept the New Testament, it announces that abstention from anything causing offence is a high Christian privilege. In view of what drink has done, is doing illicitly and illegally now and threatens to do if freed from the hindrances imposed upon it, I submit that the exercise of that privilege by all disciples of Christ is reasonable and right. The prominent Clergy of the Churches who publicly oppose prohibition maintain a peculiar silence about the Pauline precepts to which I refer.

We must consider that descriptions of the violations of the law, of the wealth of bootleggers and others preying upon our people are usually made by those who want the modification or repeal of prohibition. Why they should make a concerted drive in this particular policy is not obvious apart from their prejudices. Other laws are exceedingly difficult of enforcement, but we do not advise their modification or repeal.

Another feature of the situation is that prohibition has not been given a fair and equal occasion. No sooner was it established and the wets had recovered from the shock it gave them, than they began to encompass its destruction. But after enduring drink for many centuries and nearly always with ignominious results, can we not endure prohibition even for a decade? What homes has it blighted, what disgrace has it brought upon us, what shame and sin, when compared with the unbridled use of intoxicants during those centuries? Is there a man before me whose family escaped the pernicious reign of the beer and whiskey lords and their satellites? If there is one he is both singular and fortunate.

I ask for a rigid enforcement of the law backed by an equitable and rational public opinion which will not be diverted from this magnificent experiment till it has had a fair opportunity. Give sobriety at least an equal chance with drunkenness. In view of the undeniable benefits which have already been produced by prohibition and because of the sheer impossibility of dealing with the liquor evil by any other method, I call upon all good citizens to rally to its support. Grant it a thorough-going demonstration for the next ten years and I am persuaded you will not regret your patience and determination.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n762/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

As President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, I herewith submit the statement of a Committee representing the Churches which number twenty millions of their members in the United States and an equal number of adherents. It is our duty, according to this Committee.

1. To magnify the value of the principle of total abstinence and the obligation upon the law-abiding citizens to practise the same.

2. To make unmistakably clear to both the lawless sellers and the lawless buyers of intoxicants that the liquor traffic has been permanently outlawed in the United States as the enemy of society.

3. To urge local, State and federal governments to co-operate with increased vigour against the present organized resistance to the prohibition law until as adequate an enforcement of the law has been secured as of any other social legislation.

( Printed in the Christian Herald, April 24, 1926, New York )

(Concluded)

ANGLO-INDIAN EDUCATION.

Why is it that the public press gives so much space and attention to the Anglo-Indian? If there is a microscopic community in India it is the Anglo-Indian—a little over 100 000 and scattered in minute groups over the country. Col. Gidney, the political leader of the community, has a way with him in public oratory which is by some considered arresting, but to us his utterances give the impression of 'good copy." The attention of the press in India is arrested mostly by sensationalism, flamboyance is the quality which can obtain space. But this is not all. The Anglo-Indian community has become the object of a trial of strength between two contending groups. As a community it has been regarded as under the special protection of the European, that is of the Government and the British mercantile community. Under this regime it has lived in the past a life of comparative security. Jobs were found for Anglo-Indian young men, in the railways, the telegraphs and in assorted departments such as the Salt and Opium, as also in confidential clerical positions. In these positions in the past and even at present the Anglo-Indian has drawn higher wages than his Indian colleagues. This position of privilege has now been challenged with the result that the Anglo-Indian has lost his feeling of security, and the new generation is being thrown into an unkind world where competition is the only law. It is the adjustment which has led to widespread unrest. What the Anglo-Indian will do under these circumstances is apparently a matter of great concern not merely to the community itself but to others. The Indian nationalist has openly invited him into his ranks, but the Anglo-Indian while welcoming the invitation sees little more in it than a gesture. Will Indian political parties ensure him a livelihood and those standards of life to which he has been accustomed? Naturally the reply must be in the negative. On the other hand the European in India considers that any acceptance by the Anglo-Indian of these overtures would be treason to the traditional protectors of the community, and views with concern what he considers a victory for his opponents. The European too or for the matter of that the Government is unable to guarantee the Anglo-Indian the position he has held in the past. The prospect before the community is not bright, for it suffers from a handicap which the present generation will find too formidable to overcome. Fundamentally the system of education under which the Anglo-Indian has been trained has made him a misfit. He has been brought up in Church Schools which have been based on a European curriculum, not infrequently he is taught European classics when he imperfectly spoke or read the English language itself. His knowledge of some Indian language was so slender, that to hear him speak is an outrage. As for Indian culture or thought, he was taught to consider such as beneath his notice, and part of his educational equipment was a profound contempt for Indians and things Indian. In serious subjects such as mathematics, the foundation of the science of engineering in which he often acquires some skill, he has a wholly inadequate training, and is incapable of making headway in the profession. These then are his handicaps:—

(1) Ignorance of the culture and language of the people among whom he is compelled to live, and (2) Inability to rise in his profession because of an imperfect educational foundation. The only remedy, and we know it is a radical one, is to abolish the present code of Education for European Schools. This as a first step, on which others must follow. We do not ask the Anglo-Indian to renounce his social customs, but we cannot get away from the solution that, to succeed in India, he must be educated with Indians.—The Guardian, Calcutta.

---

The Anglo-Indian is the subject of an editorial in the Guardian in its issue of June 10th. The paper criticizes somewhat severely the educational code in force in the schools in which he is educated, declaring its abolition the only remedy for removing the handicaps under which he is now living. While regarding the Guardian's proposed remedy as unnecessarily radical we share the belief that the type of education being given to most Anglo-Indian children is far from suitable to the conditions under which they must spend their lives. It is not sufficiently practical. It follows much too closely the lines of education traditionally favoured in classical schools in Great Britain. The curriculum is not designed to suit the needs the pupils will experience after their school days are over.

The Indian vernaculars do not recive the amount of attention they deserve. Many ex-students of European schools in India fail to get along well under Indian conditions because they do not have a decent working knowledge of the vernacular which they are expected to use. Again the teaching of science is inadequate. During his recent visit to India Dr. Paul Monroe offered this criticism repeatedly. He visited a number of European schools and declared that their equipment for teaching science was much inferior to the equipment he found in the schools that served Indian boys.

A curriculum for any group of students should be devised to meet their needs and it should be recognized that the needs of various groups differ widely. What may be an excellent course of study for students in Great Britain who look to a University course there may be altogether unsuitable as a course for the majority of Anglo-Indian or European children in India. There is no such thing as a proper standard

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n763/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

curriculum for English-speaking children, not even for the first few years of their study. A group of experienced educators assigned to the job of preparing the best possible curriculum for Anglo-Indian boys would certainly prepare something very different from that which is now in force. But if they were charged with the task of putting the new curriculum into use they would find the latter job much more difficult than the former.—The Indian Witness, Lucknow.

MUSIC BEFORE MOSQUES.

The Governor's decision on this vexed question, so far as Calcutta is concerned, has at last been made public in the form of a communique, and, as is usual in such cases, has given satisfaction to neither of the contending parties. Our own place of worship and those of our sister churches are situated on public thoroughfares and our people when they assemble for congregational worship are victims to processional music quite as much as our Muslim brethren, when they gather together in mosques for worship. In this matter, therefore, we might be presumed to have a bias in their favour. Nevertheless we confess that Hindus have not received that impartial justice which the strength of their case entitled them to expect. On the face of it, it appears that nothing can be more reasonable than to demand that all music should stop, when passing before a place of public worship, when public congregational worship is going on therein. But there is a world of difference between a mosque and, say, a Christian church. Christian churches are generally very limited in number and public worship in them is generally a weekly affair. Mosques are almost innumerable, many of them very small in size capable of accommodating mere handfuls of people, often situated in localities of predominantly Hindu population. Public worship in them is not merely a daily affair but is conducted five times a day for indefinite periods amounting altogether, according to the claims of our Muslim brethren, to 24 hours in the day. It seems therefore that there must either be restrictions imposed upon the construction of mosques or the people building or using them must be distinctly told that in localities where the population is predominantly Hindu they must submit to disturbance by music except on special occasions—say, during Jumma prayers and on days of Id and other festivals. In this respect, Hindus have both right and prescription on their side. As matters stand, a handful of Mahomedans have only to build a Lilliputian Mosque at Kaligat, a place of Hindu pilgrimage, in order to turn the entire socio-religious practice of the neighbourhood topsy-turvey. This would create an intolerable situation, and we don't see how it can be averted unless His Excellency's decision is supplemented by further restrictions and exceptions. The Nakhoda Mosque on Chitpore Road has had special consideration shown to it on the ground of its size and importance. Music shall stop before it at all times. In this respect it has been given a distinction not enjoyed even by Christian churches. No wonder that people are saying that Government has been swayed more by Mahomedan truculence than by regard for its size and importance. In the meanwhile, the image of Raj Rajeswari remains unimmersed, even though the organisers of the procession are prepared to abide by the terms of His Excellency's decision. We understand that the Police Commissioner has promised to grant a permit on the terms originally granted after the Bakr-Id is over. Another concession to Muslim truculence. We wonder whether the Government realises that in thus yielding to force and threat it is encouraging Mahomedans to further truculence and exasperating 'mild' Hindu to adopt a similar attitude and lending support to the contention of extremists that you cannot expect to get your legitimate demands granted, unless you make yourself nasty or dangerous.—The Indian Messenger, Calcutta.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Servants of Guzerat Society: According to the Gujerati Punch, Ahmedabad, Dr. Chandulal has an idea of starting a kind of Servants of Gujerat Society on the model of the Servants of India Society.

New Vice-Chancellor of Calcutta University: Professor Jadhunath Sarkar has been selected to succeed the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Greaves as Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University from August next.

Tax on Totalizator Betting: The Bombay Government has decided to increase the tax on totalizator betting at races from 2½ to 4 per cent. The new rate will come into force at the next Poona racing season.

Untouchables at a Satya Puja: In Calcutta at the house of Bhau Kisan Chand a Satyanarayan Puja was held which was attended by more than 300 Mehtars and Domes who were treated with cordiality by the upper caste Hindus.

A School for Untouchables: The Abhoy Ashram of Comilla has been conducting a school for Mehtars (a class of uhtouchables), the present attendance being 28 of whom 20 are Mehtars. Now a Bank has been started which will advance money to Mehtars at special concession rates of interest.

Mr. Kandaswamy Chetty Gives Up Title: Rao Bahadur O. Kandaswamy Chettiar, in a long letter to the Chief Secretary to the Madras Government renouncing his title of Rao Bahadur, regrets that consistently with his views on the present political situation in India in general and the Madras Presidency in particular, he is unable to continue to be a title holder.

Nellore District Conferences: The Nellore District Political Conference was held last week under the presidentship of Mr. Swami Venkatachalam Chetty, President of the Madras Corporation. Resolutions were passed on untouchability and prohibition. We are glad to see that along with it the Andhra-Andhra Conference was also held with Mr. Narala Devendrudu, M. L. C., as President

Use of Public Wells: As the result of the persistent efforts of Pandit Gurudatt, the Hindus of Gharota Gurdaspur District have agreed to allow Mahashas to draw water from the public wells. The Mahashas were originally domes and were brought into the fold of Vedic religion more than ten years ago but were not hitherto admitted to the public schools or allowed to use the public wells.

A Freak of Nature: It is reported from a village in the Lahore district that a daughter with a strange assemblage of features was born to a carpenter's wife. The child's face was like that of a bear, the tongue was fixed on the neck and the ears were longish like those of a donkey. This freak of nature died within a few hours of birth.

Registration of Muslim Marriages: The U. P. Government has appointed a committee with Mr. Justice Suleman as Chairman and 14 members, including Raja of Jahangirabad, Dr. Khan, Raja of Salempur, etc, whose duties will be to advise the Government whether compulsion to register Muslim marriages is permissible under the Muhammadan Law, and to consider and report whether registration of Mussalman marriages should be made compulsory.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n764/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Enquiry into Back Bay Scheme: The Bombay Government has appointed a non-official committee consisting of four Indians and three Europeans under the chairmanship of Mr. J. A. Kay, Chairman of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, to report what, if any, further portion of the Back Bay Reclamation Scheme can be undertaken with a reasonable prospect of reducing the present loss, especially with reference to blocks 1 and 2. The report is to be placed before the Committee of Enquiry which the Government of India have decided to appoint.

Reclamation of Kohlis: A correspondent writes to the Tribune, Lahore:—The Arya Samaj, Simla, was the scene of great enthusiasm recently when an overcrowded meeting of all sections of Hindus was held on its commodious Hall to perform the reclamation ceremony of a large number of the so-called untouchables of the Simla Hill States. The proceedings commenced with bhajans of Pt. Nathu Ram and his party. Some of the "untouchables" also entertained the audience with their music. All the Kohlis were then seated round the sacred fire (Havan Kund) and their Parvesh Sanskar and sacred thread ceremony was performed amid cheers. In spite of all sorts of threats from their own high caste people, none of the Kohlis hesitated from taking part in the ceremony.

Ramakrishna Students' Home, Jaffna: The Ramakrishna Society of Jaffna decided some time back to establish a Students' Home in Jaffna, with a view to provide free board and education to orphans and poor deserving students. To give effect to this resolution, the President of the Society, Swami Vipulananda, and some friends visited Colombo in April last and appealed for funds. The appeal met with a ready response, and friends and sympathisers subscribed liberally. It was then decided to make a beginning with six students for the present, and increase the number gradually according to the amount of financial support the public are able to give. The formal opening ceremony of the Home took place on Sunday the 6th instant at 7 a. m. Three students were then admitted to the Home. In the evening the Swamiji delivered a very instructive and inspiring speech on "Gurukula Vasa," and dwelt on the great necessity of such a Home for Hindus, whose poor children were often lost to the community on account of the indifference of the Hindus to their welfare.

Widow Marriage at Vellore: A correspondent writes: Mr K. Sarangapany Ayyangar, Prosecuting Inspector of Police, North Arcot District, Vellore, deserves the heartiest congratulations of the Hindu Society for the very bold step that he has taken in bringing about the re-marriage of his widowed daughter, Miss Ranganayaki, who lost her husband shortly after her marriage, even before attaining puberty. Though Mr. Ayyangar comes of a very orthodox family, he made bold to face the social ostracism of his community by putting an end to what he conceived to be the social tyranny prevalent in the Hindu Society. The bridegroom, Mr. Kandadai Veeraragavachariar, of Shrotriempakkam village near Tiruvallur, who is an ardent Congress worker, has set a noble example to all those who are interested in promoting the cause of social reform. It is hoped that more marriages of this kind will take place in future in the best interests of our national welfare.

Social Workers' Training Class, Bombay: The Social Service League, Bombay, has decided to organise a class for the training of Social Workers for a period of about ten weeks beginning from 10th July 1926. The class will be held at the head office of the Social Service League, Girgaum. Lectures will be arranged generally on Thursdays and Saturdays in the evenings and visits to Social Service institutions will be paid on days on which there will be no lectures. The following well-known social workers have so far promised to conduct the class on subjects mentioned against their names. (1) Mr. O. H. B. Starte, I. C. S., Criminal Tribes Settlement Officer, Dharwar, (The Beggar Problem); (2) Mr. S. R. Deshpande, B. Litt., (Cantab), (Indian Labour Problems); (3) Dr. G. S. Ghurye, Ph. D., (Principles of Sociology); (4) Prof. R. M. Joshi, M. A., I. E. S., (Indian Economic Problems); (5) Principal T. A. Kulkarni, B. A., (Crime and Punishment); (6) Miss M. Katherine Davis, of the League of Mercy, (Vigilance Work); Dr. V. R. Khanolkar, M. D., B. Sc., (Lond) of the Seth Goverdhandas Sunderdas Medical College, (Public Hygiene); (8) Rao Bahadur S. S. Talmaki, B. A., LL. B., (Industrial Housing); (9) Dr. Miss Jerbanoo B. Mistri, L. M. & S., (Child Welfare); (10) Rev. J. P. Edwards, (The Drink Evil); (11) Mr. V. L. Mehta, B. A., Managing Director, Bombay Provincial Cooperative Bank, (Cooperative Movement); (12) Mrs. A. W. Maclean, of the St. Columbia High School for Girls, (Life Histories of Social Workers); (13) Prof. H. L. Kaji, M. A., (Consumers' Cooperation); (14) Mr. H. D. Chhatrapati, Principal, Victoria Memorial School for the Blind, (Education of the Defectives); (15) Mr. F. Weber, Physical Director, Y. M. C. Association, (Games and Playground.) An examination will be held in the last week of September and certificates will be awarded to the successful students. Those desirous of joining the class are requested to register their names at the office of the Social Service League, Servants of India Society's Home, Sandhurst Road, Bombay, on or before the 10th July 1926. Students are required to pay an entrance fee of Rs. 2/- only. Names should be registered at the office of the League any time from 12 to 6 P. M. For further particulars, apply to Mr. D. S. Savardekar, Assistant Secretary, Social Service League, Bombay.

ADVERTISEMENTS

PROF. ERNEST WOOD'S FAMOUS BOOKS.

CONCENTRATION—A PRACTICAL COURSE.

This extremely popular book, which has already undergone six editions, has now been thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged. Mostly Rewritten.

Contents: Success in Life—The Magic Box—Aids to Concentration—Chains of Gold—Concentration in Daily Life—Control of the Body and the Senses—The Removal of Intruding Thoughts—Gymnastics of Concentration—What Meditation is—Methods of Meditation—Mantric and Symbolic Meditation—Obstacles to Meditation—Contemplation—Conclusion.

Price. Wrappers; Re. 1 Boards, Re. 1-4 Cloth, Re. 1-8.

CHARACTER-BUILDING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

Contents: Why you must Develop Character—What Character is—Preparing the Ground—The Foundations—The Walls—The Roof—The Verandah—The Gardens—The Orchard—The Three Fundamental Virtues—Testing the Character—The Man of Will—The Man of Love—The Philanthropist—The Man of Understanding—The Philosophy—The Way of Imagination—The Magician—The Man of Investigation—The Scientist—The Man of Reverence—The Devotee—The Man of Beauty—The Artist—The Science of the Emotions—The Three Fundamental Vices—Ultimate Aims—The Great Law.

MEMORY—TRAINING—A PRACTICAL COURSE.
Price, Wrappers As. 8

"A capital essay on the training of memory, with practical exercises of self-tuition."—Review of Reviews.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n765/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Social Reform Directory.

Under this heading we propose to publish from time to time a list and short accounts of Institutions of Social Reform, as we are receiving enquiries regarding them. Secretaries or other officials connected with such institutions are requested to send us, free of charge, in brief, accounts of their institutions on the model of those given below We particularly request information regarding institutions for girls and young women such as Orphanages, Widows' Homes, Hostels for women-students and Rescue Homes.

The Calcutta Prot-stant Home for Fallen Women.

The Calcutta Protestant Home for fallen women, 68, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home for Christian women and girls. It was founded in 1878 by Miss Lavinia Fendall and has accommodation for 25 girls and 15 babies or children. The girls remain in the Home for periods of 2 years or longer during which they receive vocational education enabling them to make a new start in life. The Home is interdenominational; is maintained by voluntary contributions, and managed by a Committee of ladies representing various Christian Communions. Each girl is paid a percentage on the work done by her. The Home is for Europeans and Anglo-Indians only. Its cost is about Rs. 15,000 per annum. The present Lady Superintendent is Sister Eleanor to whom communications should be addressed. The property of the Home which stands in a fine compound in the North of Calcutta is in the custody of a Board of Trustees also representing different Christian Communions. The Convener of the Trustees is the Rev. Herbert Anderson, 59, King's Road, Howrah.

The Children's Rescue Home, Calcutta.

The Children's Rescue Home, No. 22, Dum Dum Road, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home for Hindu and Mahomedan girls mainly rescued from the haunts of vice in Calcutta. It is under the auspices and control of the Calcutta Vigilance Society who collected the funds for its opening and have undertaken to run it for 3 years as a social experiment. The Home has only just been started. Its Superintendent is Miss Linsell. Matrons and teachers have been appointed and the girls who vary in age from 4 to 10 will have their religious susceptibilities respected and, it is hoped, will be so brought up that they shall find it possible to return to respectability in their own communities. The Home will be independent of Police control or connection but will work in helpful co-operation with the Police who under the Children's Act are now in a position to prevent the exploitation of child life in the brothels of this City.

Sir Ganga Ram's Widow Re-marriage Society.

The Society has extended its activities throughout India. It publishes three monthly journals named Vidhva Sahaik in Urdu, Vidhva Bandu in Hindi and Widows' Cause in English. The Society conducts an Ashram for invalid old men and women. It had prior to this a Widows' Home and a High School for Girls. 9 paid workers of the Society visit 521 stations, mostly in the Punjab, several times in the year. The Sabha has three Vidwa Ashrams, in Lahore, Hardwar and Muttra and besides is allowing contributions to several Ashrams in U. P. and other provinces to encourage this movement. The Society has its headquarters at Lahore and has made several efforts to enlist the co-operation of similar institutions in other parts of India. The Honorary Secretary of the Society is Lala Lajpat Rai Sahani.

Kanya Mahavidyalya, Jullunder City.

The avowed object of this institution is to give useful and practical training to women so as to fit them for domestic life. The courses of studies prescribed have this object in view and students are not prepared for University Examinations. The Vidyalya maintains also a Widows' Home and an Ashram or Orphanage. Mr. Dev Raj is the President of the Vidyalya which has done much to improve the position of women in North-rn India.

Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

This excellent institution is still in its infancy and owes its existence to the indefatigable efforts of Yamini Purna Tilakamma. It is a Rescue Home for the uplift of the Devadasi community. Propaganda work on behalf of this institution is carried on both in Madras and the mofussil by the Kalavantula Sabha.

The Pandharpur Orphanage and Foundling Asylum.

This institution is maintained at Pandharpur by the Bombay Prarthana Samaj. The Foundling Home is the only institution of the kind founded and maintained under non-Christian auspices. During the half a century the institution has been in existence, it has been the means of saving hundreds of Hindu widows from sin and crime. All communications should be directed to the Secretary.

Training for Social Work.

A course of training for Social Work is given for women students at the University Settlement, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay. The aim of the course is to provide opportunities by which women of all communities, who have finished their general education, may prepare for a life of usefulness and service. The course, which extends over a period of one year, includes both theoretical and practical training. During the monsoon, students may prepare for the Social Diploma given by the Social Service League in October. Special training is given to any students who look forward to making Social Service one of their definite interests and activities in later life. The course of training begins in June. Further information may be had from Mrs. Macleau, Wilson College, Bombay 7.

The Salvation Army Womens' Rescue Home, Matunga.

This Institution was opened by His Excellency, the Governor of Bombay, in March 1925, and is situated on the Sion-Matunga main road, some 10 minutes walk beyond King's Circle, Matunga. The purpose of the Home is the reclamation of fallen women and girls irrespective of creed, colour, or caste. It is also a Refuge and Home for women and girls who are in moral danger. The Home is fully equipped for its purpose, and includes a complete Maternity Ward. The Matron-in-Charge, Adjutant (Miss) Bassett, is a Certified Nurse, and is a Member of the Bombay Presidency Nursing Association. There is no interference with the religion of those who enter the Home, and each inmate is free to maintain her own religious inclinations. Every effort is made to teach the highest possible moral standards, and to guide the inmates of the Home in the direction of higher ideals of living. Domestic industries are taught, including sewing, and all kinds of needlework, also household duties. There is also a Day School conducted.

University Settlement, Bombay.

The University Settlement provides a Hostel for Women Students attending any College in Bombay and also supplies a place of residence for about 30 Indian professional women. The Staff of the Settlement, who are usually British University Women, are prepared to take pupils in English and other subjects. A course of Training for Social Work will be held in the Settlement from June 21st 1926. For particulars apply to Miss E. C. Gedge, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay 7.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n766/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed ... ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,003
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jaria, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Nasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Sansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2% from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5% per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed or daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co, Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Shirpur ( „ District West Khandesh).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondaicha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n767/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

FREE FOR THE ASKING.

SEVEN UPANISHADS.

(Isha, Kena, Katha, Prasna, Mundaka, Taittiriya and Aitareya.)

Text in Deva Nagari with English translation and notes by H. R. Bhagavat, 2nd edition, Price Rs. 2-8-0.

FREE IN JUNE 1926.

(1) Any Hindu B. A. B. L., (2) any Hindu Professor (3) any Hindu Head Master of a High School, (4) any Hindu graduate whose age exceeds 30, (5) any Hindu pleader whose age exceeds 30, or (6) any Hindu Government or State servant getting Rs. 100 or more per mensem, can get the above book free of cost on sending three annas for postage. If he so chooses, he should send two annas more for postal registration.

All letters bearing any date of June 1926 will be attended to.

H. R. BHAGAVAT, SADASHIV PETH, POONA CITY.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, ... | ... | ,, 5,93 42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.

Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n768/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a
Tonic?
IF SO
use only the world renowned
"Atank Nigrah Pills."
Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness digestive troubles and similar complaints.
Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.
ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)
Bombay Branch
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.
Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,
10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ½ Column. | | ¼ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 13 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 26 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |
| 52 | | | | | | | | | | | | |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN
CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.
Price 10 Annas a Pot.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
AMRUTANJAN DEPOT
MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n769/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER
AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila. Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE, THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 14 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship.' The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n770/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1926. No. 45

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Salvation Army.
The Punjab Money-Lender's Bill.
Two Important Judgments.
The Bombay Children's Act.
Communal Electorates.
Is it Prohibition?
Returned Indians fr m Fiji.
Rajasthan Kshatriya Maha-sabha Samachar.
Coue and the New Psychology.
Bombay Jail Administration.
Johannine Conception of the Logos.
Hindu Widow Reform League, Luckgow.
Proselyting and the Salvation Army.
The Lee Commission and the Transferred Services.
Athletic Clubs.
Widows' Home at Puri.
Prince Dara's Love of Vedanta.
Excise Officers Hood-winked.
Women Justices of the Peace and the Children's Act.
News of the Week.

NOTES

The Salvation Army: We are afraid that there was some injustice involved in our reference to the Salvation Army in our paragraph last week on Proselytising. It is, therefore, with pleasure that we publish Brigadier Dayasagar's statement of the aims and methods of the Army. He says that while the Salvation Army offers its social service free to people without reference to caste or creed, it does not hold out material inducements to them to enrol themselves as soldiers of the Army. We must say one thing for the Army. It has not only not encouraged among the Indian converts, as some other Missions have done, the habit of transforming themselves into black or brown Europeans in dress and manner of life, but its European officers, men and women, have adopted a form of Indian dress which suits them wonderfully. The Salvation Army officer, if he is a man, looks every inch like a Sastry in his Indian dress, and, if a woman, is far more decently and artistically clothed than her sisters with their nowadays bare arms and bare legs, and the few rags which reveal more than they conceal of their busts. We are not so sure as the Brigadier naturally is that the average adherent of the Salvation Army in India is morally or spiritually a better man or woman than many men and women who never heard of the Army. The acid test, however, is not so much what the convert himself is, but what his descendants in the second or third generation are likely to be. Sceptics and athiests, who have worked out their own beliefs and live up to them, are often remarkable for their purity of life and public spirit. We think, however, that the Salvation Army which, the Brigadier says, is distinct from any Protestant sect and from Roman Catholicism, has in its methods avoided some of the mistakes of other Missions.

The Punjab Money-Lenders' Bill: The Punjab Money-Lenders' Bill, after a heated controversy raging over a week, has been finally passed by the Punjab Legislative Council. The Bill is designed to afford protection to borrowers from the cruel exactions of money-lenders and, with a view to the same, prescribes certain measures for proper accounts to be kept by money-lenders. Most of the money-lenders in the Punjab seem to be Hindus while the Mahomedans as a rule are borrowers and hence, from the first, the measure has been looked upon as a communal one by the Hindus and as directly aimed at them. The readiness of Government to help the non-official mover with amendments to his Bill, still further increased the apprehensions of the Hindu community. The unpopularity of the measure may be judged from the fact that there were as nearly as 200 amendments to the Bill, and the Swarajists also walked in purposely to throw out this measure, only to walk out when their attempts had all ended in failure. An attempt was made to secure a postponement of the discussion of the Bill to a more propitious time, but that too failed. For our part, we would welcome any measure calculated to save the borrower from the exactions of the money-lender, be he a Hindu or a Mahomedan, but the opposition to the present measure seems to be based on the fact that it penalises money-lending as such. It is obvious that such a course, besides being impracticable, will inflict untold hardships on many a poor man who cannot get on without borrowing. The proper remedy, of course, lies in the extension of the credit side of the Co-operative Movement. And now that the Bill is passed, we hope the measure will be worked in the right spirit and the defects remedied as they come to light then and there.

Two Important Judgments: The Right Hon. Srinivasa Sastry, in the course of his Kamala lectures, emphasised that the all-embracing power of the Executive in India is due to the fact that the Judiciary in India is not so vigilant in safeguarding the rights and liberties of the individual citizen as the judiciary in other countries and that, more often, the judiciary in India sympathises with the Executive rather than with the oppressed citizen. Two important judgments have been delivered recently, one in Bombay and the other in Calcutta, which clearly show that the Judiciary in India is gradually asserting itself. In the Bombay case, a certain Mr. Evans who was arrested on a charge of criminal misappropriation was denied the benefit of counsel by the Police before investigations could be completed. As a special case, however, the Commissioner of Police consented to Mr. Evans consulting counsel in his sight but not in his hearing. Not content with this, Mr. Evans carried the matter to a Bench of the High Court which gave a general ruling to the effect that the Police have no power under any circumstances to refuse counsel to an arrested person. Mr. Justice Madgaonkar rightly pointed out that "the end of justice is not merely to convict a man, but to afford free opportunities to both sides to lay their case fully and fairly." It is one of the fundamental axioms of criminal law that every accused person is considered to be innocent until his guilt is proved before a competent Court of Law, and the affording of all facilities to the accused to prove his innocence is only a necessary corollary to it. Acting on this, their lordships have justly over-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n771/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ruled the objection raised by the prosecution, and have created a valuable precedent for the future. In the Calcutta case, the question at issue was whether the Police can detain an arrested person for an indefinite period of time without producing him before the Magistrate. "No," was the answer given by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Sulaiman and 13 other Mahomedans who had been taken into custody, following a fatal stabbing case, during the Bakr-Id week. Their lordships observed that the mere fact that Police investigation was not complete was no reason whatsoever that arrested persons should be indefinitely detained. As regards the rule-making power of the Police Commissioner, Mr. Justice Rankin said, with which Mr. Justice Chotzner concurred, that in no case statutory rights of citizens even under arrest on suspicion could be encroached upon by the Police.

The Bombay Children's Act: Elsewhere in this issue we publish the proceedings of an influential meeting of the Women Justices of the Peace in Bombay held last Monday under the distinguished presidentship of Lady Cowasjee Jehangir. The meeting has forwarded a letter to the Government urging the necessity of putting the Children's Act into immediate operation and of establishing Children's Courts with Hon. Women Magistrates on the Bench. But if these are not practicable at present, the signatories request Government to enforce the Act by section by section, beginning with Parts II and III which enable welfare workers to rescue children from unwholesome and undesirable surroundings and send them to recognised places of safety under the Act, and also to attach one Woman Magistrate to each Magistrate's Court where children and other young offenders up to 16 years of age are tried. These are modest demands and Government will find the least difficulty in conceding them, provided it has the welfare of children in heart. While Madras and Calcutta have their Children's Courts and Children's Homes, the Bombay Government still holds to its antiquated and inhuman procedure of sending young children to ordinary Courts like ordinary men and in some cases sentencing them to terms of imprisonment which would do justice to a hardened criminal. It is time the Bombay Government revises its notions of treatment of juveniles and makes an honest effort to put the Children's Act into operation.

Communal Electorates: Opinion in India is gradually veering round to the view that it is the system of communal electorates that is at the root of the present communal trouble and that the best way to put an end to it is to abolish the communal electorates. It is a matter for gratification that enlightened Muslims themselves in several parts of the country are coming to hold this view. In the course of a letter addressed to the Tribune, Lahore, Mr. S. M. Haq of Amritsar writes: "Most of our communal riots in recent years can be traced to political and municipal elections, and the best remedy for them, in my opinion, is to abandon a system of polling which compels us to encourage communalism. The system of communal electorates is fictitious, is based on distrust which it tends to increase and is contrary to the facts of every-day life The Mahomedans can afford to give it up without injury to our strength on elective bodies. Otherwise the differences will widen with increased political powers." We are glad to find that Dr. Kichlew, whose activities in recent months have not been much to the liking of Hindus, also condemned communal representation in the course of his Calcutta speeches and put forward a vigorous plea for joint electorates under which "the Hindu and Mahomedan will have to seek the help and co-operation of each other." It is time that a widespread agitation is carried on in the country for the abolition of the present pernicious system of communal electorates and communal representation.

Is it Prohibition?: The following is taken from an editorial note that appeared in a recent issue of the Tribune: "A remarkable case of Government's anxiety to raise revenue somehow or other by the sale of liquor has been brought to public notice by the arrest and incarceration of a liquor contractor in Yeotmal District, C. P., for failing to pay his monthly instalments. It appears that there was a general decrease in the consumption of liquor in the District, owing to failure of crops, and the liquor contractor could not sell the quantity of liquor to enable him to pay the requisite revenue to Government. Under these circumstances the man was arrested and put in jail. So his people were obliged to pay up the arrears." The Tribune added that in the Punjab also such cases are not rare. This is hardly in keeping with the professed intentions of these Governments. Their policy more or less amounts to this: willy-nilly, Government should get the revenue; if people refuse to drink, the liquor contractors will have to force the liquor down the unwilling throats of the people; and, if they fail in their endeavour, they will have to pay the penalty of incarceration. And yet these Governments never fail to pay lip-service to total prohibition as the ultimate goal of their excise policy!

Returned Indians from Fiji: An Associated Press message depicts the sad plight of a hundred returned emigrants from Fiji who are stranded in Calcutta. The message runs as follows: "About 100 Fiji immigrants who returned to India last year are stranded in Calcutta. Those immigrants, who hail from districts in the Punjab and the United Provinces, returned from Fiji last year and proceeded to their native places where they were subjected to social ostracism. They now desire to go back to Fiji and have arrived in Calcutta but are not in a position to pay their passage having run through all that they had earned during their sojourn at their native places. The Government is not in a position to help them. The Calcutta Port police are finding it difficult to help them beyond affording them shelter at Garden Reach." We understand that the Secretary of the Imperial Indian Citizenship Association left Bombay last night to enquire into the condition of these people and to arrange for their relief.

Rajasthan Kshatriya Mahasabha Samachar: We have received a copy of the above Hindi magazine edited and published for the Rajasthan Kshatriya Mahasabha, Ajmer, by Mr. Kunvar Sultan Singh, the Assistant Secretary of the Sabha, in order to voice the cause of the Rajputs in India. The chief aim of the journal is to reform the social condition of the community especially of women who are comparatively less cultured than their sisters in other communities. The number under review contains informative and useful articles on marriage, the ill-treatment meted out to Rajput women by society, the caste sub-divisions and the antagonism existing among the various divisions of Rajputs, and reports and news of educational institutions and hostels conducted by the Sabha. The annual subscription is only Rs. 1-8-0. We wish every success to the Sabha in its activities to better the social condition of the Rajputs in India.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n772/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JULY 10, 1926.

COUE AND THE NEW PSYCHOLOGY.

M. Emile Coue's death was announced in the daily papers last Saturday. This journal was one of the first in India to call attention to his important contribution to psychology by way of therapeutics. Coue kept a druggist's shop for many years and was also interested in the application of hypnotism to the cure of certain diseases. In his experience as a druggist, he found that certain drugs had a beneficial effect on certain patients, which could not be explained by any medical potency in the drugs themselves. In his practice of hypnotism, he found that only about one-tenth of his hypnotized patients were completely hypnotized. These two observations suggested to him that there was some inherent power in the human mind which helped or hindered the application of external stimuli. From this point his course became easy. He found that the patients who were completely hypnotized were those who willingly co-operated with the hypnotizer, while those who resisted or were doubtful failed to come under his spell. He concluded from this that the external agent was only an accessary and not an essential factor in mental methods the success of which depended on the patient's whole-hearted acceptance of and belief in it. In other words, the outside suggestion became an operative force for the amelioration of the patient's condition, only when it had been assimilated and transformed into the patient's own consciousness. This was the genesis of his method of auto-suggestion or self-suggestion which entirely dispensed with the necessity of a hypnotiser. The hypnotiser had first to put you to a sort of sleep when you were reduced to a passive state of mind and then suggest to you what he wished you to think or believe. Coue said and showed that you could do this for yourself consciously and deliberately, and that your sub-conscious self was more readily amenable to your own suggestions than to those of a third person. He constantly warned his patients that he did not pretend to cure them : he only taught them to cure themselves. His technique was so simple that it became ridiculous on the lips of scoffers. His two main rules were : "Every morning and every evening betwixt sleep and waking, practise concentration upon the formula of general suggestion, namely, Day by day, in all respects, I get better and better." And when, during the waking hours, you are unexpectedly assailed by some mental or physical trouble, have recourse to the particular suggestion this is passing off."

There was one rule which Coue regarded as fundamental to the success of auto-suggestion. "Above all, be careful never to let the will interfere in the practice of auto-suggestion." This, indeed, is Coue's great contribution to our knowledge of ourselves. Religious and moral teachers and philosophers have for long emphasised "the will" of man as the greatest of his faculties. Coue said "no, not the will, but the imagination." The "will" can effect anything only through our imaging faculty. By itself it is not only powerless but is positively harmful. Take the case of a drunkard who is earnestly anxious to give up drink. He exerts all his will power and manages to remain an abstainer for perhaps a month or even a year. Then all of a sudden, he finds himself in a position to indulge in a glass of liquor without being observed, and he does so, with the frequent result that he thenceforth becomes a greater drunkard than ever. He has tried hard to get away from the habit, and has failed. His self-confidence is broken. He lets himself drift down the road to ruin. Or take the common case of sleeplessness. So long as you are worrying about it, that is, trying to bring your will to bear upon it, you plunge deeper and deeper into the mire. Coue says, do not struggle against it, simply forget it, image to yourself a state of profound repose : there are greater chances of your falling into sound sleep. Moralists had long ago discovered the futility of didacticism; social reformers have found that "frontal attacks" are productive of more harm than good, But neither of them had found the "why" of it. Coue crystallised the principle in two sentences. "When the will and the imagination are at war, the imagination invariably gains the day. In the conflict between the will and the imagination, the force of the imagination is in direct ratio to the square of the will." This scientific enunciation of it is Coue's : but the truth itself has been anciently known to Hindu thinkers. In fact, Professor Charles Baudoin who has formulated the science and philosophy of Coue's method in his great book entitled "Suggestions and Auto-suggestions," observes : "As one of the curiosities of history, and further as a lesson in humility, we may point out that the states just described under the names of collection, contention, and autohypnosis, are described, with considerable psychological acumen though not, of course, in modern psychological terminology, in the precepts by which, for centuries past, the yogis of Hindustan have been accustomed to attain self-mastery". He then proceeds to illustrate the observation by reference to the Yoga texts.

The man whose 'will" has controlled his senses but whose imagination still fondly lingers over the sense-objects, is the "mittyachara," the hypocrite, denounced in the Gita. The same thought finds expression in the words of Jesus that the last state of the man, from whom an unclean spirit has been driven out without a clean spirit being put in its place, is worse than the first. "When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out. And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in and dwell there; and the last state of that man is worse than the first.' This in the language of metaphor is precisely Coue's law of "reversed effort." If you wish to uplift an individual or a people, it is not enough to remove the evils they suffer from : you should put a positive aim and ideal in their deepest mind where it will fructify into conduct. The application of the principle to education is far-reaching and profound. But this must be reserved for another occasion.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n773/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

BOMBAY JAIL ADMINISTRATION.

One of the disquieting features of the Administration Report of the Bombay Jail Department for the year 1925 is the enormous increase in juvenile crime. It is stated that in addition to 70 children under 16 years of age sent to prison, as compared with 45 in the previous year, 392 persons under 16 years of age were released by Magistrates on probation of good conduct, as compared with 285 in the previous year. It is really horrifying to see young children hardly in their teens sentenced to various terms of imprisonment ranging even to 4 years and more in some cases and thus contaminated in the company of hardened criminals. Nothing but the instantaneous operation of the Bombay Children's Act of 1924 can bring about a satisfactory state of things. This Act, it may be remembered, prohibits the commitment of children to prison and gives power to the Police and welfare workers to remove children from undesirable surroundings and detain them in separate Homes where they can be subjected to the process of reformation. But, for one reason or the other, Government has been holding up this important piece of legislation with the result that not only a large field of preventive work is denied to welfare workers, but a large number of children, who, with a little careful training can be made useful citizens of the State, are being spoiled beyond all hope of reclamation. It is really regrettable that Government, notwithstanding vigorous protests and representations, has not as yet realised the beneficial effects of this legislation and the Inspector-General of Prisons expresses a pious hope that it may be found possible to bring this measure into operation throughout the Presidency before long. The Bombay Government is also slow to realise the utility of the Borstal system. Madras, in this respect, has forged much ahead of Bombay and the latest report of the Borstal Institution at Tanjore is a standing testimony to what such institutions can do towards reclaiming many young offenders and making them useful members of society. However, we are glad to see that the Inspector-General personally visited the Tanjore Institution to acquaint himself with the nature and working of the system and we hope it will be found possible to carry out before long his scheme for the conversion of the Dharwar Juvenile Jail into a Borstal Institution fit to accommodate 400 boys together with the necessary workshops and school-rooms.

Of a piece with Government's treatment of juvenile offenders is its gratification at the amendment recently introduced in Sec. 109 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the Central Legislature restoring the discretion to Magistrates to award simple or rigorous imprisonment as the case may be for those who fail to furnish security. This Section, as we pointed out at the time when the amendment was made, besides prostituting a preventive into a punitive punishment, is liable to be misused for political purposes as in the case of the Nagpur Flag Satyagraha agitation. The public may remember that it is the system of appointing convicts as officers and wards in jails that was condemned by the Punjab Jails Committee as being the cause of the existence of corruption and abuses in the administration of jails. The Bombay convict officers, however, seem to be an exception. It is refreshing to read in the Bombay Report that the work and conduct of the convict officers are satisfactory and that they form a most valuable section of the disciplinary staff in all jails. We are also glad to see that Government realising the difficulties of finding good recruits has taken proper measures for securing a more contented service by paying the warders as well as the Police and granting them the same allowances as are given to the Police in Sind, at Thana and Ahmedabad, a policy which has been fully justified by its results. It is also gratifying to note that the number of floggings, a barbarous sort of punishment which should be resorted to only in extreme cases, diminished to 17 in the year under report, and the offences for which whipping was ordered were only for conduct seriously affecting the discipline of the jails. One special feature of the year under report is an increase in the profits from jail labour, and while we agree with the Inspector-General of Prisons that jail labour ought to be used a very great deal more than it is in manufacturing goods for the use of Government, we cannot too often stress the importance of paying for the labour of convicts in some cases, which may help them a good deal in their life after discharge from prison. The fact that the Bombay Presidency Released Prisoners' Aid Society assisted only 282 prisoners during the year as compared with 484 in 1924, clearly shows that the Society has not been able to do much in the direction of helping released prisoners. We hope the Society will take note of this and extend its activities in future.

JOHANNINE CONCEPTION OF THE LOGOS.

(By Mr. G. Y. Chitnis.)

There are many differences which separate the gospel of St. John from the Synoptic, and none is so marked as that which consists in the metaphysical presupposition with which he begins his gospel. "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God and the word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehended it not." These verses which begin the gospel may be taken as representing the view of the Alexandrian Jew Philo, who not only blended Jewish and Greek ideas about the Logos, but also achieved a syncretism of divergent Greek conceptions. His Logos is a synthesis of the ideas of Plato and the universal causality of the Stoics. Philo's Logos is very much like the Platonic idea of the good except that it is creatively active. It is, however, doubtful, whether the fourth Evangelist derived his conception of the Logos from Philo or from St. Paul. In his later Epistles, St. Paul gives us almost the whole of the Logos doctrine, which we read in the Prologue to the fourth gospel. The con-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n774/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ception of Christ as the cosmic principle is even more emphasised in Colossians than in the gospel. When we read of the Pauline Christ that he is the image of God, that in him the pleroma of the Godhead dwells in a bodily form, that he was the agent in creation, and the immanent spirit through whom are all things, that he pre-existed in the form of God, that he is the first-born of all creation, in whom and through whom and to whom are all things, that all things are summed up in him, that he is all and in all, that his reign is co-extensive with the world's history, that he is the life-giving spirit abiding in the souls of his disciples, forming himself in them, and transforming them into his likeness, enlightening them and uniting them in one body with himself, it seems more likely that the fourth gospel was written under Pauline inspiration. When we further remember that Philo had absolutely no interest in the doctrine other than metaphysical, and he was not in the least concerned in reconciling the Jewish conception of an historical Messiah with his theory of the Logos, we may safely assume that the writer of the gospel came directly under the influence of St. Paul, and only indirectly under that of Philo. It is possible, nay probable, that St. Paul himself may have been influenced by the Jewish-Alexandrian speculations, but no sufficient evidence exists to warrant this assumption.

The question which naturally arises at the very outset of our inquiry is, why did St. John seek to identify the historical Jesus with the Logos? Is it merely because he was anxious to present the life and career of a Jewish Messiah in a form that would appeal to the Hellenised mind, or is it because he thought the Greek and Alexandrian speculations the most appropriate intellectual moulds to interpret the mystery of the Divine Incarnation? An answer to this question will largely depend upon the attitude we adopt towards the gospel. Some scholars have ignored the fourth gospel altogether on the ground that it contains very little of the historical material for reconstructing the life of Jesus; this is perfectly true; we cannot treat the fourth gospel as a biography of Jesus; as a matter of fact even the Synoptic gospels are not strictly biographical; but the fourth gospel is something more than a mere chronicle of events that actually took place in the life of Jesus. It is to be treated as a record of the experiences of the man who felt himself to be in mystic union with Jesus the Christ. The writer was not merely a biographer; he was not a philosopher, but a mystic and, if you will, a poet and an artist; and the intellectual moulds in which he has tried to express himself are, therefore, to be understood not historically or philosophically, but as an expression of the soul of a mystic and an artist. We can, if we like, approach it as a representation of a drama that was being played on the stage of this writer's imagination. That may give us some clue to unravel the mystery of this document, which is otherwise a sealed book in the hands of a philosopher or a historian.

(to be continued.)

HINDU WIDOW REFORM LEAGUE, LUCKNOW.

Mr. Kunj Behari Seth, the President of the above League, has issued the following Appeal:—

The Hindu Widow Reform League, Lucknow, which is an Association registered under the Societies Registration Act has been making steady progress. Its objects are:— (1) to educate Hindu widows so that they may be able to stand decently on their own legs and thus become useful units of society, (2) to encourage and bring about their re-marriage and (3) to establish a Widows' Home in order to carry out more satisfactorily and elaborately the first two objects.

So far as the first object is concerned, two widows are receiving stipends from the League and are students in the Government Normal School for Girls, Lucknow. One of them is a Brahmin widow who will go up for the final examination for trained teachers next year. The other, a Kayasth widow, after passing the Vernacular Middle Class examination, will join the training class from the next session which begins in July 1926. The aim of both the widows is to become trained teachers.

Regarding the second object, namely, the re-marriage of widows, the activities of the League have been confined mainly to widows belonging to respectable families, be they rich or poor. From June 1925 to May 1926 nine widow marriages have taken place. According to castes they may be classified thus:—Kayastha 5, Brahmin 2 and Khatri 2. This number is an improvement as compared with the number of marriages performed in the preceding years; but looking to the appallingly large number of young widows who should be married, it is only yet a drop in the ocean. For in the United Provinces alone, according to the Census of 1921, the number of pure Hindu widows (1) of the age of 15 years, and below was 43,404, (2) of the age exceeding 15 but not exceeding 20 years, 50,656 and (3) of the age exceeding 20 but not exceeding 25 years, 98,073.

As President of the League I have come across the following difficulties in settling widow marriages:— (1) Guardians of widows desirous of remarriage insist on much better qualifications in male candidates than in the case of maids, and rather impossible conditions are sometimes imposed. (2) Sometimes marriages of widows are sought for before they have completed the age of 16 years. (3) Widows are allowed to remain idle at home instead of receiving education at school which is likely to enhance their matrimonial value. (4) Members of one sub-sect or sub-division of a caste will not admit of marriage in another sub-sect or sub-division though of the same caste. For instance, among the Khatris a Dhaighar will not choose a Charghar, Baraghar or Bunjai match; a Purbia Khatri will not accept a Pachhyan or Punjabi match; a Sarin will not accept a non-Sarin; and vice versa. Among the Kayasthas a Srivastava Dusre will not countenance a Srivastava Khare and vice versa; a Saksena Dusre will not accept a Saksena Khare; nor a Srivastava will accept a Saksena or Mathur or Bhatnager etc., and vice versa. Similarly a Kanyakubja will not accept a Sarwarya or Sanadh or Gaur or Sarasvat, and vice versa. Thus the field or circle of marriage of widows is made much narrower. The traditions, sentiments, customs, usages and even the blood of a caste being substantially the same, there should, I think, be no objection to the breaking up of the water-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n775/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

tight compartments of its sub-castes. (5) Regarding the male suitors for widow marriage, the pick and flower of youngsters do not generally come forward. It is often only the scum or refuse of the males who apply for widows' hands. For instance, men pretty far advanced in age, having too many children, having already got a wife who has been deserted or a wife who does not beat male children or any children, or those who have been disappointed in securing a suitable maid, come forward as candidates for widow marriage.

Widow marriage being a drastic, serious and major reform, other reforms (for instance, inter-sub-caste or inter-caste marriage) should, as a matter of course, accompany it and should be treated as minor and ancillary to it. The field for widow marriage is not allowed to widen liberally and consequently widows and their guardians have to wait for years till the enthusiasm, solicitude and even the necessity for such marriage are smothered or sometimes drifted into wrong channels; and ultimately the idea of re-marriage is dropped.

I beg to ask the orthodox Hindus to pay their righteous and careful consideration to the following points. According to them it is an act of piety—rather every father or mother considers it his or her pious duty—to marry their maiden daughters. Now, if the marriage of maids of a certain age is an act of piety the re-marriage of widows of the same age should be an equal—though according to my view it should be greater—act of piety. I may illustrate what I mean. Suppose maids of the age of 17 or 18 are married as an act of piety. There is no good reason why the marriage of widows of that age should not be equally pious. Similarly, if it is right to compel maids of any age to be married, widows of the same age should likewise be compulsorily married.

Hindu India cannot improve unless and until the widows are either liberally educated so that they may become useful citizens or are freely re-married to make good the deficiency in the population which is gradually decreasing.

For want of sufficient funds no Widows' Home could yet be established by the League. Unless an efficient, tactful and enthusiastic lady be employed on Rs. 100 or 150 per month, it will not be safe to start such a Home. Guardians of widows of respectable families will not permit them to live in a Home unless it is so decently managed.

The number of life-members of the League up to date is 79 as compared with 76 (of whom two have since died) of the last year. Thus there has been an increase of 5 members during the year.

The permanent fund of the League is yet too small. It cannot be said to be satisfactory until it reaches up to Rs. 25,000. There are three ways to give financial aid to the League. Firstly, there is the system of life-membership. Any person, having sympathy with the cause of the League, may become its life-member by paying a non-recurring subscription of Rs. 25. Secondly, donations are also accepted from those who wish to extend their generosity to the League. Thirdly, there is the system of monthly or annual subscription.

I beg, therefore, to appeal to the public to financially help the League and make it a grand institution in the United Provinces to ameliorate the condition of the Hindu widows. Any sum, however small, may be remitted to the undersigned and it will be very thankfully received and acknowledged.

PROSELYTING AND THE SALVATION ARMY.

With reference to our editorial paragraph on "What is Proselytism?", Brigadier Dayasagar of the Salvation Army writes to us:

Now, I wish to point out what the Salvation Army really is and does. In case of famine the Army's social operations have supplied the famine-stricken with food and clothing, and has also put down some wells and fed starving cattle, without any regard to caste or creed, such being the rule with all our social and medical operations.

During the progress of famine operations some poor people seek to join the Army's ranks with a view to getting special treatment, but no special treatment is given. That sort of thing has always been deprecated by the Army leaders and steps taken to prevent it. People who come from selfish motives are not the material the Army wants; they are only a hindrance. The Army is constantly calling upon Salvationists of all ranks down to the latest converts to deny themselves and subscribe to its funds for the benefit of others. The Army does not entice people away from other religions by promising temporal benefits. It attacks their sins, and tells them of a loving Saviour, of a just and Holy, but merciful God and seeks to save their souls.

Had the Army rank and file been recruited in the manner you suggest, it would never have produced so many unselfish and self-denying social and spiritual workers, who are willing to live on the merest pittance in order to bring holiness and happiness to the wretched and sinful and lead them into paths of industry, usefulness and virtue. It is well to remember that taking the world over, the Army is converting a great many more "Christians" than non-Christians. The conversion aimed at is not merely credal. It is the change of heart and life. The social workers of the Army are successful because they possess that wonderful Salvation which the Salvation Army exists to spread throughout the world. Of course, it is a part of the Army's purpose to get the derelicts of society to desire and aim at improvement, spiritual, moral, mental and temporal. Do not non-Christian Reformers also have a similar aim? As regards 'better food', the Salvation Army does not at all make it a rule, apart from famine operations, to supply its converts with food, nor does it ever supply non-Christians with food in order to induce them to become converts. Neither does the Army supply its Soldiers and Adherents with clothing. They buy their own and give out of their poverty to feed and clothe the poor of all communities, because the love of God constrains them. The average Indian convert of the Salvation Army does not change his place of residence, and is quite content with the same dwelling he used before; but usually he keeps it cleaner. Hopes of better housing are held out by the Salvation Army as an inducement to join its ranks.

As to 'a protected life', well, there is something in that, I admit. The Salvation Army Uniform and the constant open testimony to the experience of Salvation has been a real protection to many a saved drunkard. The society of its Soldiers and Officers has been a means of protection from evil companions who would lead the convert back into sin, and in times of oppression and persecution the Officers of the Salvation Army have often

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n776/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

enabled the down-trodden classes to obtain justice. But I was not aware that this is so great an attraction that the drunkard prefers to openly break with the drink habit, and the densely superstitious idol worshippers, on that account, would change their form of worship.

The Salvation Army exists to convert sinners. It began with getting sinners saved in so-called Christian countries in which it daily continues to gain strength with most blessed results, and it came to India to save sinners—all kinds of sinners, Mahomedan sinners, Hindu sinners, nominal Christian sinners, sinners of every creed and nation, to covert them to Christ and God, and to help them to lead better lives.

In "Orders and Regulations for Salvation Army Officers" the object of the Organization is thus defined :

"The Salvation Army is an Organization composed of persons who know their sins forgiven, and who are united together in love to God and man for the common purpose of bringing others to submit to Jesus Christ.

"The word 'Salvation' indicates the purpose of the Organisation, namely, inducing all men to submit to God, embrace the 'Salvation' provided for them in Christ, accept Jehovah as their Sovereign, obey His laws, and spend their lives in the loving service of those about them, thereby enjoying the favour of God both here and hereafter.

"The word 'Army' indicates that the Organisation is a 'Fighting' force, constantly at war with the powers of evil, and also that, in certain features of its construction and government, it resembles an ordinary Army. It differs, however, from all such Armies in that its object is not to slay, but to save.

"The official name of the Organization is 'The Salvation Army'. Its exclusive right to this name has been acknowledged by eminent legal authorities in different countries."

Every Salvationist, with or without rank, is a pledged total abstainer from all intoxicants, and every Officer is a pledged non-smoker.

The Salvation Army is international and non-political. It is also non-controversial and non-sectarian, and is therefore not to be confused with Protestant and Roman Catholic bodies.

THE LEE COMMISSION AND THE TRANSFERRED SERVICES.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

It is well-known that some of the most important recommendations of the Lee Commission were those which related to the future of the services operating in the transferred field of administration. The services chiefly affected were the Indian Educational Service, the Indian Agricultural Service, the Indian Veterinary Service, the Roads and Buildings Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers and the Indian Forest Service in Burma and Bombay. The recommendations of the Commission were firstly, that no further recruitment should be made by the Secretary of State for these Services, secondly, that the personnel required for these branches of administration should in future be recruited and appointed by local Governments. In order to give effect to this policy it was further recommended that the Secretary of State should delegate to local Governments under section 96 B. (2) of the Government of India Act authority to fix the conditions of service and appointment of these new Services and to regulate all matters concerning them.

It is also well-known that these recommendations were accepted by the Government of India and the Secretary of State. Orders were issued soon after the publication of the Lee Commission Report discontinuing all fresh recruitment to these All-India Services. The drafting of the necessary rules for the delegation of the Secretary of State's power to local Governments proved to be a matter of considerable complexity; but two resolutions issued recently by the Home Department contain rules made by the Secretary of State in Council on the 9th March 1926 which delegate to local Governments full powers to regulate their Provincial Services not only on the transferred but also on the reserved side. These powers will now enable local Governments to proceed with the policy advocated by the Lee Commission, namely, the building up of new Provincial Services to take the place of the old All-India Services on the transferred side recruitment for which has, as already explained, been discontinued for some time.

30, Nisbet Road, Yours etc., Lahore, June 27th 1926. Observer.

ATHLETIC CLUBS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The following is an interesting extract from German Die Post, which reveals the enthusiasm the Germans have for Athletic sports :

"So great has been the after-the-war enthusiasm of the German people for athletic sports that membership of the main sporting organisations has risen to about 7,000,000. . . . . Adding the membership of the numerous small local clubs not affiliated with the national leagues, it is estimated that at least 10 % of the population of Germany is enlisted in sport clubs. . . . . The three main national sporting societies are the Central Commission for Sport and Physical Culture, the German National Committee for Physical Exercise, and the German Turners' Association. . . . . The Central Commission combines all the labour athletic societies, with a membership of approximately 1,500,000 men and women mostly youths. Its motto is "Sport makes the masses Healthy". . . . . With some 4,000,000 members, the German National Committee for Physical Exercise is the strongest sporting body and its slogan is "Sport is Struggle". Its members hope to capture prizes and make records, especially in international events, as one way towards restoring German prestige abroad. . . . . The German Turners' Association used to be affiliated with the National Committee, but it withdrew sometime ago, and adopted a decidedly nationalist attitude, in contradistinction to the nominally neutral political stand of the National Committee. Its 1,500,000 members rally to the slogan "Sport is a substitute for Army Service".

In years gone by we had many such Athletic Akhadas, but for one reason or the other many have too soon disappeared and this has adversely affected the general health of the masses and middle-class people. I, therefore, trust the interesting reports of German Athletic

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n777/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Clubs will help to revive our dying enthusiasm in our old Akhadas and wish many of their kind spread over the whole City of Bombay and Bombay Presidency where young men and women can take courses in physical training.

I wish also to draw your readers' attention to the mottos of the German Athletic Clubs, viz:

(1) Sport makes the masses healthy,
(2) Sport is struggle,
(3) Sport is a substitute for Army service.

The above hardly need my comment and I sincerely trust that men and women of India, at least the intelligent and cultured India, will take up this idea.

Bombay, 3rd July 1926. } Yours etc. Dhirajlal Chhaganlal.

WIDOWS' HOME AT PURI.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I thank you very much for your letter of 7th June 1926 wherein you have made enquiries regarding the Widow's Home at Puri. The institution was started in January last. The object is to give shelter to helpless widows who might otherwise be seduced to evil ways. The institution has nothing to do with widow remarriage. It is meant to be a seminary for training of widows for social services. It also receives girls and other women who are stranded in life or are rescued from the clutches of bad men. The present address of the institution is Jagannath Bidhavasram, Puri, B. N. Ry. I hope to have your help and support for the institution.

Puri, 23rd June 1926. Yours etc., Gopabandhu Das, Secretary.

PRINCE DARA'S LOVE OF VEDANTA.

It may be said that Emperor Aurangzeb not only undermined the Mughal Empire, but also undid all the noble efforts of his predecessors for the union of the Hindu and Muhammadan cultures and religions. He was the antithesis of his wise great-grandfather in this respect. Akbar the Great, easily the best and the greatest of Muhammadan rulers in India, saw with his far-sighted vision the impossibility of maintaining a lasting political organisation without recognising the capabilities and the important position of the Hindus in it. He further felt that a mere external union was nothing, if it was not backed by a more real union of their cultures and religions. His matrimonial alliances with the Hindus and respect and regard for their religion and culture were obviously prompted by these considerations. His son and grandson, carrying Hindu blood in their veins, followed practically, if not explicitly, the policy of Akbar. Aurangzeb set himself deliberately against all these. And in spite of his honest industry, great administrative powers, temperate habits and scrupulous dutifulness, he caused the decline of the great empire.

In these days when the thought of communal tension and the absolute necessity of communal union for the welfare of India has made us thoughtful, the noble, but tragic memory of Prince Dara, the eldest son of Shahajahan, haunts our mind. One feels that if Dara had sat on the throne of Delhi, the sad spectacles of the present times would not have been seen, and India's history would perhaps have told a more pleasant tale. For, Akbar was, in nobility of mind and breadth of outlook, the prototype of Prince Dara, and Dara's love of Hinduism was generous and pregnant with possibilities for the Indian nation as that of Akbar himself.

The new year number of The Prabasi, a Bengali monthly, edited by Sjt. Ramananda Chatterji of The Modern Review, contains a short but interesting article from the pen of the renowned historian, Prof. Jadunath Sarkar, on Prince Dara and his study of Vedantism. The Professor says it was while Prince Dara was the Subadar of the Allahabad province that he engaged learned Pandits from Benares to translate fifty Upanishads into Persian, which he afterwards published in manuscript with a preface of his own, under the title, The Secret of Secrets. It is this translation which being rendered into Latin by a French soldier, reached in later days the hands of Schopenhauer and evoked from him the noble exclamation: "In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the solace of my life—it will be the solace of my death."

Dara was an earnest seeker of truth, and having studied without satisfaction Sufism the Bible and other scriptures from able and renowned teachers, he found, as he confessed in his preface, the fulfilment of his heart's desire only in the Vedas, and especially in their Advaitism. He was no bigot however and had an eye for religious synthesis. For when he discovered that Sufism and Vedantism differed only in form, he composed another treatise, significantly named The Union of Two Seas, in which he established the truth of Advaitism in terms of Sufism. He also used to visit Hindu Yogis and enquire of them the secrets of spiritual life. But he never went against his inherited religion, for he saw no contradiction between being a Muhammadan and believing in and respecting Hinduism.

It was an evil day when Aurangzeb incited the fanatical soldiery against his eldest brother in his avarice for the royal throne, declaring him a Kaffir, a heretic. For, on that day he undid all that the wisdom of his fathers had achieved towards the creation of a united nationhood by bringing together two great communities. This is the greatest tragedy of Aurangzeb's rule.—Prabuddha Bharata, Calcutta.

EXCISE OFFICERS HOOD-WINKED.

Mr. V. W. Thambiaiah of Kuala Lumpur, who is an ardent supporter of Total Prohibition in Ceylon, writes in the Hindu Organ, Jaffna:—

We know there are among us anti-temperance workers who exerted undue and unsuccessful influence on the voters during the local option campaign and who even now endeavour to thwart away the good effects of the abolition of the many taverns. We maintained from the beginning that drinking booths or tempting pits for the poor and weak class of people who, though when sane are capable of realising the dangers and curse of intoxicating drinks, yet when a tempting object is placed before them could not but fall victims to that temptation. It was to root out this temptation that the abolition of the taverns was sought for and it should be our endeavour to see that the object of this abolition is not set at nought by anti-temperance workers. We are informed that through

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n778/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

their influence and support several illicit booths in dry areas are in existence and, therefore, I would appeal to our indefatigable temperance workers to be awake and keep safe the fruits of their toils by starting Vigilance Societies in every district independently or conjointly with the Excise Officers to bring to book all illicit offenders.

Lime Coating in Toddy Pots.

There is much to be studied in respect of the illicit traffic in toddy and Excise Officers will do well to note the following technical points relating first to its illicit extraction under cover of sweet toddy license. There is much foul play in the lime coating of sweet-toddy pots by tappers. The lime-coating is not done once for all, but only then and there when a pot is attached to the spathe. As the functioning of the spathe is in progress, the drops of toddy falling therefrom into the pot erase the coating and when the functioning has ceased, it will be noticed that that portion of the lime-coating covered by the contents of the pot is entirely erased out and the lime dissolved therein. When the bottom portion of the lime coating has thus been erased out, the top portion uncovered by the contents would be parched up and when the contents of the pot have been poured out, it will be noticed that the pot has entirely lost its bottom coating retaining the top one. It is here that the tapper tricks, in that when he attaches the pot again to the spathe he does not coat its bottom portion with lime at all, and when the yield of the spathe is over it will be nothing but pure toddy. Detective officers who are not already aware of this foul play and who have only a cursory inspection of the pot and its contents are easily hood-winked in this way. Even if they will take the trouble to suspect the colour of the contents the tapper will be ready for them with a delusive excuse that the coated lime was insufficient and therefore did not act properly. It must be noted that very old lime coating that has been parched up and become one with the pot will not help the transformation of fermented toddy into sweet toddy. There are more things to be studied in this connection by Excise Officers. In detecting cases of this nature the offender should be surprised not when they are on the tree but when they are down only, with the pot and its contents. I am inclined to think that much of the illicit traffic in toddy is carried on by sweet toddy drawers under cover of a sweet toddy license. They found it a necessity to hood-wink the authorities even when toddy taverns existed and that they will find this necessity much more keen at present with the absence of these taverns, it cannot be doubted. But I must say that detection of their offence is much easier now than when taverns existed, as at that time little hesitation in action by detective officers was required, though possession by a tapper of fermented toddy was traced in order just to find out whether the stock traced was purchased from or belonged to the tavern. It is not so now. The mere sight of fermented toddy will suffice to bring the tapper to book.

More Vigilance Societies Required.

In addition to the activities of Excise Officers in this direction Vigilance Societies started for the purpose could also do much, and there is greater reason to start these Societies, in as much as there are stronger bodies of anti-temperance workers to defeat the single activities of the Excise Officers. Our temperance workers will please note this.

WOMEN JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND THE CHILDREN'S ACT.

A meeting of the Women Justices of the Peace was held at 6-15 on Monday July 5th in the Seva Sadan, Bombay, which was kindly lent for the occasion, the object being to discuss the advisability of urging upon Government the necessity of putting the Children's Act into immediate practice.

Lady Cowasjee Jehangir presided and in her opening remarks said :—

Ladies, this is the first occasion when we, women Justices of the Peace of Bombay, meet together to do some useful work and I am very glad that we meet here today to help in a cause which is connected with children, for to my mind, children whether rich or poor are like flowers in a land and it is every woman's duty to help and rescue them from pitfalls etc., in which they often are found, in most instances through their innocence and in-experience I find in Madras a Children's Act was passed in 1920 and by stages put into operation. In 1925 a Children's Court was set up and, I believe, the Act is in full operation. In Calcutta the Children's Act is in partial operation. It is being enforced in stages and it has a Children's Court and a place of safety. In Bombay, a Children's Act was passed in 1923 but it is still not in force at all, but remains completely held up.

It think it is quite time we should ask Government to put the Act into force by sections as has been done in Calcutta and Madras. The Calcutta Act is still not completely in force and the Madras Act only became so last year. We should, I think, urge Government to put parts II and III of the Bombay Act into force immediately so that Protection could be given to childen living in bad surroundings and the children offended against by bad people. At present welfare workers have no authority to help, but if we could have Parts II and III of the Act put into immediate force they would then be empowered to rescue such children. They would also be enabled to investigate many cases at present not disclosed at all, to give relief, and to send children to such Bombay Homes etc , as are recognised as fit places of safety under this Act. We cannot expect our accommodation in such homes to increase until the pressure of overcrowding what accommodation we now possess has been applied. Then as the need becomes obviously manifest, steps will be taken to supply it whereas, if we shelve the whole Act ever as now, the need will not be supplied as the pressure will not have been felt.

I think a Children's Court with Honorary Women Magistrates on the Bench is urgently needed, but if the establishment of such a Court must inevitably be delayed, let us petition that in the interval one Woman Magistrate should be attached to each Magistrate's Court where children and other young offenders up to 16 years of age are tried. I feel sure that if the pressing need of parts II and III were properly represented before Government we should find our representation bearing fruit."

It was decided after some discussion that the resolution passed at the meeting should be embodied in a letter which should be signed by Women Justices and forwarded to Government. This was passed unanimous-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n779/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ly and the following letter has been sent to the Secretary to Government, Home Department:—

Sir,

We, the undersigned Women Justices of the Peace of Bombay, have the honour to request and urge upon Government the necessity of putting the Children's Act into immediate practice; or if that should not be deemed possible, of enforcing it by section by section beginning with sections II and III.

We desire to see Chidren's Court established with Hon. Women Magistrates on the Bench; but, if the establishment of such Courts be delayed, we would urge that at least one Woman Magistrate be attached as soon as possible to each existing Magistrate's Court to sit with Men Magistrates in all cases where children and other juvenile offenders up to 16 years of age are being tried.

We believe that the enforcement of this Act and the appointment of Women Hon. Magistrates will greatly help the efforts of all who are carrying on Welfare Work amongst the young people of the City of Bombay.

"We would therefore request you kindly to bring this letter to the notice of Government."

Signed:—Dhunbai Cowasji Jehangir, Luxmibai Jugmohandas, Serenbai Muncherji Cama, K. Nowrange, Tarabai M. Premchand, B. Turner Watts, Jainuls F. Chinoy, B. A. Engineer, Cecilia D'Monte, Khadija Shaffi Tyabji, Minna Fernades, Malin Sukthankar, Shivgavri C. Gajjar, Evelyn C. Gedge.

The meeting closed with a cordial vote of thanks to the Chair.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Output of Coal: We have been requested by the Chief Inspector of Mines in India to publish the statement showing the output of coal in the various provinces in British India during the year 1925, in advance of his annual Report. The figures are as follows: Assam, 317,997; Baluchistan, 22,707; Bengal, 4,913, 852; Bihar and Orissa, 13,931,244; Burma, 25; Central Provinces, 708, 554 and the Punjab, 74,662 tons.

Compulsory Education in Delhi: Compulsory primary education for boys was introduced from July 1st in two of the predominantly Muslim wards in Delhi city. The Municipality has, for purposes of primary education, divided the city into nine wards. The taking of census of two Hindu wards is already complete where it is expected that compulsory education would be introduced from early October, thereby covering almost half of the Delhi city. The Municipality is in no way neglecting the girls' education in the city and would start five more girls' schools this month, bringing the total to twelve. Much credit for this is due to Mr. Sohanlal, Secretary of the Municipal Committee.

The Bank of India, Limited: We are asked to publish the following: The transactions of the past six months have resulted in a profit of Rs. 8,52,305-13-6 from which a sum has to be deducted Rs 75,000 for Income Tax and Super Tax, leaving a net profit of Rs. 7,77,305-13-6 for the half year ended 30th June 1926. To this amount has to be added Rs. 1,88,976-10-1 brought forward from the last account, making a total of Rs. 9,66,282-7-7. This sum the Directors have disposed of as follows:—In payment of an ad-interim dividend at the rate of ten per cent per annum (Rs. 2-8-0 per share) free of Income Tax on the Paid-up Capital of Rupees One Crore for the half year ended 30th June 1926, which will absorb Rs 5,00,000-; carried forward to the next account Rs. 4,66,282-7-7.

Late Prof. Emile Coue: The death is reported of Prof. Emile Coue of Nancy, who devoted a whole life-time to put mental healing by auto-suggestion on a scientific basis. Though mental healing has long been known to exist from time immemorial, Prof. Coue's special contribution consists in proving that the suggestion need not be made to the patient by another but can be made by the patient himself. The suggestion he prescribed was that a patient has to say to himself, just before retiring to bed, or just before rising, when he is between sleep and wakefulness, the words: "Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better." Though some of his theories are not yet accepted by orthodox psychologists and physicians, there is no denying the fact that Prof. Coue attained a marvellous success in curing many diseases, bodily and mental, by his method of auto-suggestion.

The Punjab Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha: The Honorary Secretary writes: Reports of 239 widow marriages have been received from the different branches and co-workers of the Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha, Lahore (Punjab) throughout India in the month of May 1926. The total number of marriages held in the current year i. e., from 1st January 1926 to the end of May 1926, has reached 1104 as detailed below: 1. According to Caste:-Brahmin 203, Khatri 133, Arora 136, Aggarwal 164, Kaisth 34, Rajput 102, Sikh 137, Misc. 195, Total 1104. 2. According to Provinces:-Punjab and N. W. F. P. 766, Sind 40, Delhi 31, U. P. 202, Bengal 39, Madras 4, Bombay 2, C. I. 6, Assam 2, Behar and Orissa 12, Total 1104. 3. Voluntary donation received during the month is Rs. 295-0-0, and the total amount during the year is Rs. 552-9-0.

Geneva Urges Film Censorship: According to the Social Welfare, Toronto, a movement to protect children throughout the world from undesirable moving pictures has been initiated by the League of Nations Advisory Commission on Child Welfare in the adoption of a resolution for the creation of Central Censorship Boards in each country, composed of educationists and parents. The resolution stipulates that these Boards should prohibit the presentation of films demoralizing to the mentality and morality of children and encourage films which develop the education of a child. It further recommends an international entente between the National Boards, with a view to international interdiction of undesirable pictures. National legislation is favoured to insure proper ventilation of moving-picture houses, with ample exits, and the prevention of the exhibition of inflammable films.

C. P. Barbers' Conference: The fourth session of the Berar and C. P. Hindu Barbers' Conference met at Wardha on the 9th June under the presidentship of Mr. N.G. Amritkar of Morvi and adopted resolutions urging the Government to grant certain concessions to the students of the caste by way of scholarships, praying Government for greater opportunities in public services and asking for raising of age unit in respect of incumbents of the caste. The Conference has demanded that one

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n780/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

representative should be allocated for the caste in the nominated members in the C. P. Council. Another resolution has appointed a deputation to wait upon H. E. the Governor with a view to put before him the grievances and disabilites of the caste. The Conference has pledged its support to the non-Brahmin Movement while it has rejected in the Subjects Committee a resolution according its sympathy to the Hindu Maha Sabha. It has supported with a large majority a resolution approving of the Madras Religious Endowments Bill.

Extravagance in Weddings: Thus the Catholic Leader, Madras: The Madras Mail calls attention to some undesirable features in the social life of the Anglo-Indian community on the occasion of weddings. Our contemporary points out how money is wasted to get things done on a grand scale and money borrowed from sowcars by the poorer classes. The remarks of the Mail apply with equal force to Indian Catholics also. If Anglo-Indians spend money on dances and liquor, Indian Catholics squander it on empty shows and useless formalities In rural districts, the festivities last three or five days among Indians, when solemn processions are held at night by torchlight in the midst of squibs and fireworks of all kinds. All these elaborate festivities and functions cost a great deal of money. Many contract debts which they are never able to repay. It would, therefore, be wise on the part of the leaders of both communities to exert their influence to see that weddings are celebrated with greater simplicity and in a less expensive fashion.

Uplifting the Untouchables and Hill Tribes in Assam: A Free Press of India message says that Swami Satyananda of the Hindu Mission with his party visited Gauhati recently. There was "Nagarsamkirtan" for two days. Several leading gentlemen of the town accompanied the Samkirtan and passed through all the principal streets of the town. The chief object of the Mission is to uplift the condition of the untouchables and to convert the hill tribes to Hinduism. The Swamiji delivered a lecture in the local Sanatana Dharma Sabha about the object of his Mission. A strong committee has been formed in connection with the Mission there. In this district, the untouchables are not allowed to enter the temples of Kamakshya, Umananda, Kedar Madhav and other Hindu Temples. The committee has first directed its attention to this matter and it is confident that within a short time it will succeed in inducing the temple authorities to do away with this ban. It has maintained that unless the condition of the untouchables was improved the Hindus were sure to die out.

Social Workers' Training Class, Bombay: As previously announced the Social Workers' Training Class will be held at the Head Office of the Social Service League, Girgaum, Bombay, from Saturday 10th July. The syllabus of lectures is now ready. Students intending to join the class are requested to register their names at the League's office at an early date. In order to familiarise the students with the working of some of the leading social service institutions in and around the city arrangements are being made to visit the following institutions:—(1) Thana Central Prison, Thana; (2) Narottamdas Madhavdas Mental Hospital, Thana; (3) David Sassoon Industrial and Reformatory Institution, Matunga; (4) Ackworth Leper Asylum, Matunga; (5) Salvation Army Industrial Home, Moreland Road, Byculla; (6) Salvation Army Rescue Home, Matunga; (7) Beggars' Camp, Matunga; (8) Children's Home, Matunga; (9) Seva Sadan, Gamdevi; (10) School for Deaf-Mutes, Thakurdwar; (11) Victoria Memorial School for the Blind, Tardeo Road, Tardeo; (12) Infant Welfare Society's Creche at Tardeo, Tardeo Tram Terminus; (13) Currimbhoy Ebrahim Workmen's Institute, Delisle Road, Parel; (14) Bombay Working Men's Institute, Elphinstone Road, Parel; (15) Bai Motlibai Maternity Hospital, Byculla; (16) D. M. Petit's Children's Hospital, J. J. Hospital, Byculla; (17) A Cotton Mill, (18) J. N. Petit Orphanage, Lalbaug, Parel; (19) Arthur Road Jail, Arthur Road, (Jacob Circle); (20) Bai Avabai Framji Petit Parsee Girls' Orphanage, Bandra.

Dr. Barnardo's Homes: To Dr. Barnardo's Homes, the largest family in the world, falls the honour this year of celebrating its Diamond Jubilee. In the sixty years of existence it has received 100,700 destitute boys and girls and babies into its family circle. It is still going on growing at the rate of 5 per day. It to-day numbers 7,636 children. Since the first beginning of the work at Stepney Causeway (the London Headquarters) it has extended so that the Homes now include Model Villages for girls and boys, Technical Schools, Naval and Mercantile training centres for older lads, a Babies' Castle and numerous branch Homes and Ever-Open Doors throughout the country. The food bill alone for this gigantic family is one of great concern. 22 903 meals have to be supplied every day to the Barnardo family. About 1,000 gallons of milk are required daily. An urgent appeal to raise 400,000 Half-Crowns for the Food Fund is being made. The President of the Homes, H. R. H. the Duke of York, has written an appeal in which he says that: "As President of this great work for destitute children, I take the keenest interest in the Special Appeals which are to be made by the Homes during the present year. The work of Dr. Barnardo's Homes is well-known and universally appreciated . . . There is none more justly entitled to any assistance which it is in our power to give than these famous Homes, established for the benefit of destitute children sixty years ago." Cheques and orders may be made payable to "Dr. Barnardo's Homes Food Fund" and crossed, and addressed to "Dr. Barnardo's Homes Food Fund." 18-26, Stepney Causeway, London, E. I. England.

A Golden Jubilee Celebration: The Madras Agricultural Students' Union, Coimbatore, celebrates it golden jubilee at the Agricultural College, Coimbatore, from July 12th to 17th, this (Madras) being the first province to found the Agricultural College in 1875. The chief items of the programme are: (1) The opening of a New Building for Teaching by His Excellency Viscount Goschen of Hawkhurst, G. C. I. E., C. B. E., V. D., Governor of Madras. (2) An Agricultural Exhibition, (3) Conferences and popular lectures interspersed by sports and lively entertainments. This celebration marks the eve of a healthy turn in the progress of agriculture in India, in the activities of the Agricultural Departments in this country and of this Union which has been for over 13 years publishing a monthly magazine in English for the spread of agricultural knowledge amongst the English knowing classes and organising annual meetings of agricultural scientists and workers and public men and helping the cause of agriculture in sundry other ways working in close association with the local Department of Agriculture. It is expected that men of authoritative views in the domain of the science and practice of Agriculture and of Economics and distinguished men in other walks of life will take part in the proceedings by contributing papers, delivering lectures or giving discourses.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n781/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

NEW BOOKS. Two Books of JUST PUBLISHED.

GREAT VALUE.

TALKS ON THE PATH OF OCCULTISM

is a companion volume to The Masters and the Path, and is intended for the daily use of aspirants. It consists of a commentary by Dr. Besant and Bishop Leadbeater jointly on At the Feet of the Master, The Voice of the Silence and Light on the Path, and is full of detailed explanation, advice and instruction.

Pages 969 with full index.
Price: Cloth and Gold Rs. 12.
Boards... Rs. 10.

THE GOLDEN BOOK OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY 1875—1925.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

Issued in Commemoration of the Jubilee of the Theosophical Society by its General Council.

Edited by C. Jinarajadasa, M. A., Vice-President of the T. S.

334 Illustrations and Index.
Cloth and Gold in Art Paper, pp. 421,
Price Rs. 12-8.
THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6|—; Foreign, 10s., Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33| 1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer, Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION ?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to :—
THE MANAGER,
The "Indian Social Reformer,"
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n782/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,16,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-25) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street,

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)

Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District [illegible]).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( ,, ,, ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( ,, ,, ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n783/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Jaganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. F. PANDIA, General Manager.

THE INDIAN WITNESS.

[ Founded 1870 ].

Largest Circulation among Christian Weeklies in India.

Special attention to Temperance and Public Morals.

Rapidly Growing Subscription List.

Rs. 8/- per annum in India.

Rs. 9/- in foreign countries.

EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Address—INDIAN WITNESS,
HAZRAT GANJ, LUCKNOW.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED | ,, | ,, 5,93 42,125 |
| PAID UP | ,, | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS | ,, | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A.:—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n784/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a
Tonic?
IF SO
use only the world renowned
"Atank Nigrah Pills."
Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness, digestive troubles and similar complaints.
Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.
ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)
Bombay Branch
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.
Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate, Bombay.
10-11-26

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
[BEGUN IN 1890.]
A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.
Published every Saturday.
THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.
OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.
Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN
CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.
Price 10 Annas a Pot.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
AMRUTANJAN DEPOT:
MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n785/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

( ONLY A FEW COPIES LEFT. )

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE, THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 14 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship." The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n786/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1926. No. 44

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Karve Women's University. | Proselyting by Christian Missionaries. |
| Fling at Men. | Kaniyara Satyagraha. |
| Prohibition in Baroda. | Prof. Radhakrishnan in England. |
| Missionary Activities in India. | Women's Welfare and Birth Control. |
| What is Proselytism? | The Pioneer of Women's Movement. |
| A Right Move. | Indian Representative at the International Women's Suffrage Alliance Congress, Paris. |
| "Prohibition." | Bombay Women's Meeting. |
| Professor Radhakrishnan at Oxford. | News of the Week. |
| Fighting Communism in China. | |
| Philosophy of American Government. | |
| Child-Marriage Tragedies. | |
| Siddha Samaj, Badagara. | |

NOTES

Karve Women's University: Sir Moropant Joshi's address at the annual function held last Sunday to confer degrees on about half a dozen women students of the Poona Women's University, was in the nature of a special pleading for that institution. His position demanded Sir Moropant to speak up for the University, but his encomium was not warranted by the figures which he himself quoted. If after strenuous propaganda work carried on all over India, in season and out of season, to enlist students for it, the institution can only show 40 students on its rolls after nearly a decade of its existence, it can be voted only as a failure. Either the ideal of the Indian Women's University in which the "fictitious importance" attached to English in the other Universities has been transferred to wifehood and motherhood, does not appeal to the generality of women, or they are averse to being shunted off from the common track of education. Sir Moropant thinks that Indian women's education should accommodate itself to the fact that every Indian woman gets a chance to marry. It should be rather considered a healthy and welcome sign if our women do not look upon marriage as an economic necessity. It is not intelligible why some people are anxious to show that the Indian Women's University is the last word in Indian women's education. As a matter of fact many a member, who holds high and responsible position in the Senate of that University, takes care to send his daughter or ward to the recognised University. The Indian public may not condemn an institution outright, but they are too wise to mistake the chaff for the grain. Our contention is, let us not set a limit to the woman's progress, let us not say to her thus far shalt thou go and no further in the domain of education. We have no quarrel with the Women's University, but we take serious exception to the attempt made to exalt it beyond its actual merits.

Fling at Men.: A woman correspondent writes:—"Now-a-days it is the fashion at women's meetings to have a fling at the men. Whether the meeting is held to discuss women's franchise or to condemn social evil, or to advocate the right of women to sit in Council Chambers, or to plead for the cause of education, whether it is relevant or irrelevant, some women are sure to be found indulging in wholesale recrimination of men. The pace for this sort of oratory is set by women from the West, where the antagonism of the sexes was rampant at the time of the Women's Suffrage movement and is blindly followed by our women. A little introspection will, however, show that men in India, far from being obstacles in the path of women's progress, have themselves taken the initiative for the amelioration of their condition. To mention only a few instances. The pioneers of the Social Reform movement were all men. The late Pandit Vidyasagar devoted a whole lifetime in fighting to retrieve the young widow from a life of sorrow and seclusion. It remained for Prof. D. K. Karve to start the Widow's Home at Poona where a number of widows were cared for and educated. Behind all the present-day movements for the uplift of women there are indefatigable men workers who have made woman's cause their own. In spite of all this, it is irony to say, as was reported to have been said at the meeting held last Monday at Marwadi Vidyalaya,—an account of which is published elsewhere—that men are mere talkers and stand in the way of women's progress. It is a patent fact that some of the ladies who indulged in this kind of language are not able to carry on their professional and public work without the backing of men. If women have strict regard for veracity, they should lay the blame on themselves for their backwardness rather than conveniently visit it on the devoted heads of the other sex. Experience shows that men are only too willing to give facilities to women for greater freedom, but the latter are slow to avail themselves of it. Even at the present day very few women are found devoting themselves unstintingly to the services of their sisters as the men have done. It is much to be desired that those women who have been nominated to public bodies should be more vocal and not retire into the shells as they almost always seem to do."

Prohibition in Baroda: It is a pity that Baroda, one of the most enlightened Indian States and which has been the pioneer of many social reform movements in the past, should be regrettably backward in the matter of prohibition. During the last session of the Legislative Council, a motion was brought forward by a member demanding the appointment of a Committee to consider how the State revenues could be dealt with to permit the adoption of a total prohibition policy in excise administration, but it was defeated chiefly through the vigorous opposition led by the Dewan, Sir Manubhai. At the special session of the Council which was held recently, a motion came up for consideration urging the appointment of a Committee to report whether any liquor shops could be closed in view of the rise in the excise revenue, but, as before, it met with strong opposition at the hands of officials. Sir Manubhai, in opposing the motion, trotted out all the stock arguments in the armoury of the anti-prohibitionists, that increased revenue did not mean increased consumption, and that if any locality

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n787/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

did not want liquor shops, he would be the last man to thrust them upon it. All this is mere camouflage, and the Dewan might have plainly told the Council that considerations of revenue and not considerations of the moral and material welfare of the people were what really mattered. The Dewan Sahib also went out of his way to suggest that prohibition in America is a failure. But, surely, the Baroda Excise policy has not been a great success. Prohibition, even if it does not totally succeed, affords far less incentive to drinking than the Baroda which is also the British Indian policy.

Missionary Activities in India: While we have always deprecated the proselytising activities of Christian Missionaries in India, we have seldom failed to give them their due meed of praise in their splendid work in the social, educational and medical spheres. In fact, as we have often said, organised social service work in India can be said to date only from the advent of the Christian Missionaries. In an interesting address delivered recently before the East India Association, London, the Rev. C E. Wilson of the Baptist Missionary Society took a long survey of the work done by the Society. Practically one-tenth or twelve thousand of the foreigners in this country are Missionaries, 6,000 belonging to the European and American Protestant Church, 3,000 Catholics, and about the same number owning allegiance to other religious orders. In the linguistic sphere, Missionaries have been pioneers in giving literary form to numerous Indian languages, notably those of the Hill Tribes. Missionaries have also been first in newspaper enterprise and the starting of newspapers goes so far back as the year 1818. The fact that among the Indian Christians now numbering 5,000,000, there are 353 per thousand literates among men and 210 per thousand among women as compared with 139 per thousand and 21 per thousand among men and women throughout India, speaks much for the quality of education imparted in Missionary institutions. As regards medical relief, the Missionaries have to their credit the establishment of 224 hospitals with 5,000 beds and numerous dispensaries and leper asylums. In the social and humanitarian sphere, their temperance and prohibition propaganda alone entitles them to the lasting gratitude of the Indian people. This is no mean record of work of which any Society can be proud, and it is to be hoped that Christian Missionaries will long continue their beneficent work in India.

What is Proselytism? The Rev. D. A. McGavran whose letter we publish elsewhere asks us to say what the proselytism is which we and others deprecate from time to time. The question has been answered nearly every time the deprecation was made, and we can not go into it at length again now. It is sufficient to say that proselytism is the method of recruiting non-Christians to Christianity much in the same way as labourers are recruited to colonies or soldiers to regiments by prospects of social and economic amelioration, better food, better clothing, better housing and, above all, a protected life. The Salvation Army, for whose social work we have nothing but appreciation, is the avowed exponent of this method, while other missions follow it more or less under names not so suggestive of Army methods.

A Right Move: That the newspapers, especially the vernacular papers which are in direct touch with the masses and which are notorious for their sensation-mongering, can do much to increase or allay communal tension, is a fact which cannot be disputed. The Karachi journalists have taken the right move in deciding to draw up a code of ethics for the conduct of newspapers during periods of communal tension. The principal articles of the code will be that all news of communal ill-feeling or disturbance shall be verified before publication, that all news bearing a tinge of communal bias shall be rigorously censored, that all comments upon such news shall be fair, that no views or articles shall be published which are likely to cause a state of communal tension, and that every effort shall be made to discredit communal agitators of either community by the combined action of all the newspapers concerned. But, it is one thing to put down noble ideas and sentiments on paper and quite another thing to translate them into practice. We hope, however, the Karachi journalists are men of action and not of words.

"Prohibition": We have to congratulate the Prohibition League of India upon the excellent organ it has brought out under the editorship of the Rev. Herbert Anderson, Hony. Gen. Secretary of the League. Our readers may remember that the Prohibition Supplement which we had been publishing for nearly two years with the first issue every month of the Reformer was discontinued from March last owing to the decision of the Prohibition League of India, which was founded in Delhi on Jan. 30th of this year, to start an official organ of its own. The quarterly Prohibition has been started in accordance with that decision. The first number contains a Foreword from Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao, M.L.A., President of the League, and news and notes about the Prohibition movement, and we daresay the journal will do much towards co-ordinating the scattered prohibition forces in the country. We cordially support the proposal of the Executive of the League to approach every candidate at the ensuing Council elections with a set of questions as to whether he will make total prohibition the chief plank in his electioneering and Council programme, and the electors will be well-advised to give their votes only to those who have pledged themselves to total prohibition.

Professor Radhakrishnan at Oxford: Professor Radhakrishnan of the Calcutta University delivered the Upton lectures at Oxford from the 17th May to 7th June. In moving a vote of thanks at the end of the course, Dr. Jacks, Editor of the Hibbert Journal, paid a warm tribute to the lecturer and said: "He has brought before us a wonderful picture of the vast hospitality of the Hindu Mind. Hospitality is the word which came to my mind a number of times as I listened to his talks; Catholicity I would have called it, but hospitality, to my mind, means all that catholicity means and a good deal more. It means depth of feeling and breadth of outlook, characteristics of Hinduism as he has presented it to us. Not mere hospitality—that which offers a bare bed and a casual ward for every religious tramp; the hospitality of the Hindu mind is that which educates and enlightens the mind which accepts the Hindu faith without forcing anything on it, if it be unwilling. You will agree with me that this hospitality characterizes Hinduism. As I have heard him, the words that came to my mind are those of the New Testament 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' A new meaning of Spiritual Charity dawned on my mind, there were moments when I was tempted very much to say 'Almost thou persuadest me to become a Hindu.' But I felt that the very points that tempted me to turn Hindu were also the very points that I hope will some day make me bold enough to say that I am a Christian."

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n788/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JULY 3, 1926.

"AVARUDDHA STREE."

Some ancient texts of the Hindu legis's enjoin that an "Avaruddha Stree" is entitled to maintenance from the property of a deceased man to whom she belonged. In a recent Bombay case, the issue was whether a woman, who was the kept mistress of a man, was entitled to maintenance under these texts. Mr. Justice Kanga who tried the case stated the law as follows:

"According to the authorities, a Hindu is not bound to maintain his kept mistress in his life-time. He can discard her at any moment and she cannot compel him to continue her in his keeping or to provide for her future maintenance. But where a Hindu woman has been kept by a Hindu until his death his estate is liable for her maintenance in the hands of those who take it even though the connection with her was an adulterous one. Her right to maintenance is conditional upon her continued chastity."

The Judge decided in favour of the claim, holding that the claimant's position in relation to the person on whose property the claim was made, satisfied these conditions. The case went on appeal before a bench of two Judges, and they overruled his decision. Sir Lallubhai Shah accepted the facts as found by Mr. Justice Kanga, but he differed from the latter in his opinion regarding their sufficiency to bring the case within the scope of the rule of Hindu law which entitles "a continuously-kept concubine" to maintenance. His lordship observed:

"I may mention that the English expression "continuously-kept concubine" is the nearest approach to the meaning of "avaruddha stree." It connotes an open residence and avowed connection with the man, both of which I think can be fairly said to be absent in the present case. I should have been glad to see my way to allow the plaintiff's claim; but it cannot be done without unduly enlarging the scope of the Hindu rule of Law which we have no right to do."

Mr. Justice Crump, in agreeing with Sir Lallubhai Shah, pointed out that in all previous cases where maintenance had been allowed, "the woman was living openly with the man as his concubine under his immediate protection and control." In the present case, there was no evidence that they ever openly lived together. Mr. Justice Crump said:

"The case seems to be a common one enough—a rich man on bad terms with his family who has a kept mistress whom he visits from time to time. The connection was not precisely secret; but on the evidence it cannot be said that she lived with him openly as a member of his family."

An appeal against this decision was carried to the Privy Council in London, and that body upheld the decree of the Court which tried the case. In doing so, their Lordships observed:

"Both Judges (of the Appellate Bench) lay much stress on the fact that the appellant was not kept in the house of the deceased's family but in a separate house, as was the fact. And so the real question would appear to be whether to be of the family the concubine otherwise entitled to maintenance, must reside in the same house with the deceased, together with his wife and the regular members of his family. Their lordships are of opinion that such common residence is now unnecessary, whatever may have been the case when the concubine was a slave of the household."

The Privy Council begs the question when it says that the point of residence with the deceased's family is unimportant in the case of a concubine "otherwise entitled to maintenance." The view of the Appellate Court was that such residence is of the essence of the status of avaruddha stree to whom the Hindu texts assign a title to maintenance. Without such residence, the mere fact of having been a deceased man's exclusive mistress up to the time of his death does not create the status. And without the status, the title to maintenance cannot arise.

The Privy Council has, by a stroke of the pen, carried the Hindu society back by ten or twelve centuries and transferred the incidents attached to a relation of status to a relation of contract. That seems, to our mind, the point where it has gone wrong. We wish to discuss the question purely on its bearings on the evolution of Hindu society. And we regret to say that the Privy Council's decision is likely to have a very disruptive influence upon it. The ancient texts make a clear distinction between an avaruddha stree and a kept mistress who is termed Bhujishya. The former was in some sort a member of the family, recognised as such by other members, and living with them in a relation not considered incompatible with the normal relations between a man and his legitimate wife or wives and children. Disagreement with one's legitimate wife was not involved as cause or consequence in a man's relations with his avaruddha stree. The Old Testament often throws valuable light on ancient Hindu institutions, and avaruddha stree corresponded to the "hand-maiden" in the sense of Hagar in relation to Abraham. "Deputy or Assistant wife" rather than concubine would be the appropriate rendering in English for avaruddha stree. Residence with the family is the conclusive proof of the relation because it is the best proof that the status was openly enjoyed by a woman not alone by the appointment of the man but by the approval of his family and friends. Our contention is that this particular status which was normal in a state of society when the marriage and family had not crystallised into their present definiteness, is no longer normal, and the provisions of ancient Hindu Law applicable to it must be held to have lapsed with the lapse of the institution itself. The deceased man on whose property the claim was made, was himself conscious of its irregularity as he told the claimant before his death that he could not provide for her in his will, which he made in her house, because, his property being ancestral property, it might be held to be invalid. If the Privy Council's judgment is sound law, any woman who happens to be associated with a man at the time of his death as his mistress, will be able to obtain a maintenance from his widow and other heirs to his property.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n789/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

FIGHTING COMMUNISM IN CHINA.

( Contributed. )

Whatever may be the case with other countries, there can be no doubt whatever that the Bolshevik menace in China is a very real one. Behind all the anti-foreign demonstrations that we now and then come across in China, we can see as much the traditional hatred of the Chinese to the foreigners as the hidden hand of the Bolshevik. The revolutionary doctrines preached by the Russian emissaries are no doubt largely responsible for such murderous attacks upon innocent foreigners as that which Shanghai witnessed a few days before. Baffled in their attempts in Europe, the Bolsheviks turned to more congenial surroundings, and what more easy than to stir up trouble in China which, in its disorganised state, presented an admirable field for the exploitation of industrial troubles? It is interesting to follow the various stages through which Bolshevism gained hold of China. Even as early as 1917, the Bolsheviks had established societies of Chinese for the conversion of China. Addressing the students of the University for Oriental Nationalities in Moscow in 1919, Stalin said: "You must create in China a yearning for national inspirations. You must use this and every other power you can enlist to break the existing order of governments and bring about a world revolution." This was only a sample of the unscrupulous propaganda which the Bolsheviks used to further their ends. Throughout Peking, Canton and other places in China, there were established hundreds of Communist schools, and even girls' normal schools were made centres of Communistic propaganda. The next step was to obtain the recognition of the Chinese Government. Chicherin, the renowned Foreign Minister of the Soviet Government, deluded the Chinese into a sense of false security by posing as the friend of China, but all the while taking care to push forth his propaganda. As if to show his sincerity of intentions, he offered to surrender the extra-territorial concessions and the unequal treaties which Russia enjoyed, but retained, however, the most favoured nation clause, by which Russia gained the most cherished of her ambitions. It was thus only a sop to get recognition of the Soviet by China and, having gained that, the Bolsheviks then sought, by using the nationalistic aspirations of the students, by representing to the Chinese that foreigners were all capitalists and, as such, enemies of society, and by other despicable devices, to foment industrial unrest in order to upset the existing order of things and prepare the country for the propagation of the doctrines of direct action. It is now established beyond doubt that the Bolsheviks have to share a good deal of responsibility for the catastrophic riots which broke out in Shanghai in May 1925, though it is a moot point whether they were directly concerned in the affair. To fight out the grave menace with which China is confronted, a League known as the Constitutional Defence League has been formed at Shanghai in which as many as 14 nationalities, including a number of very prominent Chinese, are represented. The objects of the League are to organise and promote international and universal opposition to the propagation of the theories and principles of the Third International and to the practice and policy of Communism as associated therewith, to defend and uphold constitutional conditions of progress in contradistinction to subversive, reactionary and revolutionary methods practised by Communists, to foster and promote unity and good-will amongst all classes and nations, to perpetuate what is best in the heritage of constitutional development and civilization, to defend and extend the principles of justice and liberty of thought, of speech and of enterprise, to educate public opinion and to diffuse information to ensure social, economic, and industrial progress on sound constitutional principles. The first number of the Constitutionalist, a monthly organ published by the League, contains the proceedings of the mass meeting held at Shanghai in March last at which Mr. T. R. Jones, the principal speaker on the occasion, made a fighting speech against what he called the "organised assault on the ancient civilizations with a view to their overthrow and the setting up of another world-power on their ruins". Whatever one may think about the extra-territorial privileges, the unequal treaties and other unjust concessions enjoyed by foreigners in China, one cannot but sympathise with them in their struggle to rid the country of a menace which, if not nipped in the bud, is bound to have disastrous repercussions in the rest of the world.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF AMERICAN GOVERNMENT.

(By the Rev. Earle M. Rugg)

[ The American Nation of forty-eight federated States is this year celebrating the Sesqui-Centennial of its Declaration of Independence. A great international exposition is being held in Philadelphia from June 1st to December 1st.

Representatives of the original thirteen States signed this Declaration on July 4th, 1776, and on this 150th Anniversary we do well to ask ourselves the significance of this philosophy of Government.]

The significance of the Fourth of July to intelligent Americans lies not in an historic quarrel but rather in an Epochal experiment in self-government under circumstances that were new in world history and that were "consciously and concretely creative." The writer has no intention of making comparisons with other Governments and will not take time to enumerate the inheritances from European countries and peoples who contributed to the ideas and ideals of American Government in indirect ways.

The Authors of the Constitution of the United States believed "in liberty and they believed in law; and they never dreamed that these are incompatible." The philosophy of American Government is founded upon human rights and upon personality. Whatever may be the importance of righteous social organization and whatever may be the ends of social develop-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n790/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com ment the rights of the individual are fundamental and pre-eminent and upon those rights are grounded the rights of groups and majorities. The Founders of the American Republic "sought from government nothing but the protection of their rights under equal laws."

Of the two outstanding conceptions of liberty in our time, in one Government is in no way limited in its power; in the other Government is definitely limited by a written Constitution.

The American Colonists began to have, long before 1776, a definite conception of the purpose of Government. The Declaration of Independence was not a set of arguments but conclusions concerning the creation of a Government to protect inalienable rights already possessed and not to seek rights.

The Declaration of Independence was a manifesto of "self-evident truths." "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness, that to secure these rights, Governments are instituted by men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Is this true that "all men are created equal"? Multitudes have been born unequal in knowledge, unequal in physical and mental health, unequal in ability, unequal in potential ability. Abraham Lincoln answered this question quite satisfactorily in his reply to Stephen A. Douglass in that memorable debate when Mr. Douglass said: "No man can vindicate the character, motives, and conduct of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, except upon the hypothesis that they referred to the white race alone, and not to the African, when they declared all men to have been created equal; that they were speaking of British subjects on this Continent being equal to British subjects born and residing in Great Britain; that they were entitled to the same inalienable rights and among them were enumerated life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The Declaration was adopted for the purpose of justifying the colonists in the eyes of the civilized world in withdrawing their allegiance from the British Crown, and dissolving their connection with the mother country."

To this Mr. Lincoln replied ironically :—

"I had thought the Declaration contemplated the progressive improvement in the condition of men everywhere; but no, it merely was adopted for the purpose of justifying the colonists in the eyes of the civilized world in withdrawing their allegiance to the British Crown!"

Mr. Lincoln then gave his real convictions. "I think the authors of that notable instrument intended to include all men, but they did not intend to declare all men equal in all respects. They did not mean to say all were equal in colour, size, intellect, moral development or social capacity. They defined with tolerable distinctness in what respect they did consider all men created equal—equal with "certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

This they said, and this they meant. They did not mean to assert the obvious untruth that all were then actually enjoying that equality, nor yet that they were about to confer it immediately upon them. In fact, they had no power to confer such a boon. They meant simply to declare the right, so that enforcement of it might follow as fast as circumstances should permit.

May we say that the philosophy of American Government rests on natural or inherent rights which are a standard to be considered in laying down and in determining laws? Moral personality gives men the power to judge between right and wrong apart from all law and government. The true foundation of law and government rests upon a recognition of such natural rights as the equality of all men in regard to the protection of their lives, their liberty, and the pursuit of moral happiness. "Human rights are not the gifts of governments, but governments should be created on the basis of human rights." This was the philosophy of the Founders of American Government.

The framing and adopting of the Constitution of the United States was an attempt to secure the inalienable rights of all citizens in the very structure of the government so that government itself or any majorities could never take them away or abridge them.

George Washington made only one speech during the four months of deliberations, over which he presided, in the Constitutional Convention. He said: "If, to please the people, we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterwards defend our work? Let us raise a standard to which the wise and just can repair. The event is in the hand of God." They raised such a standard and God gave it blessing.

The Hon. David Jayne Hill says: "The vital part of the Constitution of the United States is this: There are in the very nature of every human being certain claims to equitable treatment which we may call "rights"; and these rights, upon which the existence of Government should be based, must be placed beyond the power of Government ever to destroy." These rights are given in detail in the text of our Constitution and in the first ten Amendments which the people demanded as a condition of adopting the original draft.

What is original and a distinctive American idea in the American philosophy of Government is that the rights enumerated in the Constitution and the Amendments becomes a part of the fundamental law by which government itself is created and under judicial protection.

The attacks on the Constitution and the working of the Supreme Court, and the accusation that there is no real philosophy of American Government, seem to overlook the facts, so ably put before those who desire to read them by men like the Hon. James M. Davis and Hon. David Jayne Hill and a score of other loyal and far-seeing leading citizens of judicial and international experience and influence. Of this philosophy of Government the Hon. Dr. Hill writes in 1924: "For a hundred and thirty-five years this

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n791/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

philosophy has piloted us through many storms. All our growth and prosperity as a nation can be traced to the application of it; and most of our present complications and social misfortunes as a people can be referred to departures from it." The American Constitution was finally adopted by the 13 original States on September 17th, 1787.

CHILD-MARRIAGE TRAGEDIES.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

Commenting editorially on the Madras child-wife tragedy, in your last issue of the Indian Social Reformer, you have rightly diagnosed this disease as due to the great disparity in the ages of men and women who enter into holy wedlock. Crabbed age allying itself with youth is a lamentable feature of our social life. Apparently the parents have no compunction to sell their daughters to these dotards. You can imagine what a miserable life it must be for the girl-wives, and would you blame them if they wish their husbands at the bottom of the well? Coming close on the heels of your para, here is what I have culled from a Nagpur paper:

"On Tuesday the 15th June, a strange marriage ceremony took place in Nagpur when a girl of 13 was married to an old man of 55. It is regrettable that in these days of social reform such marriages still take place. It is said that the bride-groom is marrying for the third time having a number of children from his first two marriages."

The old bride-groom has a fastidious taste, indeed! Could he not have contented himself by marrying a middle-aged widow who would be more of a companion to him than the girl whose life he has rendered joyless by his insensate action? Sir, our Hindu Society should recognise that if ever a widower wishes to remarry, be it for the second, third or even the fourth time, he must consider it his bounden duty to limit his choice to widows only. This remedy will have the advantage of hitting two birds with one stone: the girls will be saved and the widow marriage problem will also be solved.

Bombay, 1st July 1926. Yours etc., N. K. Akshi.

SIDDHA SAMAJ, BADAGARA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The Samaj was first started on the 1st of April 1921 by Swami Sivananda Paramahamsa, the great exponent of Advaitic Philosophy, whom the Siddha Samajists consider to be a Jagatguru or World-teacher. His book Siddha Veda is being translated into English. The basis of action for the Samaj is Siddha Vidya or Pranayama which is the most scientific and religious process of lengthening the life of a human being and giving salvation to him.

The Swami's disciples number more than a lakh, but the most earnest and sincere of them alone can join the Samaj. The Samaj has 12 Asrams in Malabar and a few others in South Canara, Coimbatore, Travancore, Cochin, Karachi and Bombay. They all live in Asrams as happily as the Rishis of old did. In addition, it carries on its silent activities all over the world through the aid of its honorary missionaries. All the workers in the Samaj are honorary.

A Samaj member devotes 6 hours a day for prayer (practising Siddha Vidya), abstains from taking meat or fish or the use of intoxicants, keeps a strict moral character, advances materially, socially and educationally in all world-weal activities and views all religions as one, the truth of all being Salvation through the living of Jiva in Brahmarandhra. Last year it has recorded 19,278 interdinings and 15 intermarriages in Malabar, a thing not attained hitherto by any organization or Mahatma in this orthodox land.

As all the members live in Asrams no individual member holds private properties. When a member joins he surrenders all his properties to the Samaj and gets his maintenance from the Samaj. Marriage is allowed when a member feels it difficult to take entire Brahmacharya, but he or she can marry only from the Samaj.

Its General President is Mr. K. Manavikraman Raja B A., a member of the Zamorine's Royal Family; its General Secretary is Mr. C. Sankunni, Calicut, its General Treasurer is Mr. V. V. Erady, Bombay, and its General Representative is Mr. M. N. Kunhiraman, Badagara. The activities of the Samaj are carried in consultation by all the four.

Camp, Kalpatta, Wynaad, 19-6-1926. Yours etc., C. Sankunni, General Secretary.

PROSELYTING BY CHRISTIAN MISSIONARIES.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I have noted from time to time some rather pointed remarks concerning the proselyting by Christian Missionaries, which you aver is carried on here and there. The word "proselyte" meaning to win over to a different religion is used with a derogatory meaning in many cases. It connotes the idea of a useless change. When one Christian denomination tries to win over members of other Christian denominations to their way of thinking, it is termed proselyting, because it is considered that the man already being a Christian and in vital relationship with Jesus Christ, it is foolish to spend effort in attempting to enrol him with a different denomination, when there are so many men both in the so-called Christian countries and in non-Christian countries who are out of vital connection with God-in-Christ.

Now you use the word in one of two senses. Either you say "You proselyte" (win over to a different religion, which is wrong for it is always wrong for a man to change his religion), or you say "You proselyte" (change a man from this compartment of religion to the other, an insignificant change unworthy of those who bear the name of Christ and who should be devoting themselves to good works.)

Would you be good enough to indicate which is the sense in which you use the word? To you, does proselyte mean to win over to a different religion, in which case where is the wrong in it, or to win over to a different compartment of religion, in which the wrong is self-evident?

Thanking you as one who comes under your condemnation and who desires to know for what he is condemned.

Harda, C. P. Yours etc., D. A. McGavran.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n792/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

KANIYARA SATYAGRAHA.

Messrs, Tagadur Ramachandra Rao, Puttiah, Nanjeevar Doss, Ramanujya Doss, Yelandur Kaniyya and Pandit Rangiah, write to us from Mysore under date 18th June, 1926:

The interpellations and answers in the Assembly on the 14th instant are a clean evidence of the fact that our benevolent Government is not hostile to the aspirations of the Kaniars in the matter of entry into the temple of Sri Gunja Narasimhaswamy. They are a clear proof of the fact that Government is sympathetic towards the cause. It is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Assembly in general and some members in particular evidenced hearty sympathy to the cause.

The progress of the movement so far, the self-sacrificing efforts made by the Kaniars, the obstructions put in their way by the local officials, the several difficulties and harassments that they were subjected to by the local officials, have all been published in the two books Kaniara Satyagrahada Charitre and Jaitra Yathre, written by Mr. Tagadur Ramachandra Rao. Besides from time to time handbills have been widely circulated and accounts published in all the papers widely read in the province: and also these two books, notices and handbills, have been sent to the Amildar, Sub-division Officer, Deputy Commissioner, Chief Secretary to the Government, Muzarai Commissioner, and Dewan. Copies of these have been sent also to His Highness the Maharaja himself. Over and above this on 16-4-1926 the detective Police Inspector took away all the records of Mr. Tagadur Ramachandra Rao and an enquiry was also held by the T. Narasipur Police Inspector on 13-5-1926 Under these circumstances it is incomprehensible, it is strange, that Government should deny any movement excepting what has been given in the Government reply to the interpellations. We are amazed and grieved at this. It may de that the local officials might have concealed many facts which were damaging to them and replied to Goverpment only those things that were convenient for them. These things are not impossible under the present system. But yet this is no excuse for Government to plead ignorance of the facts which have all been published in newspapers. The harassments of the local officials directly and indirectly in working against the movements by abolishing their power, influence and prestige, may be briefly catalogued. Chronologically the facts are as follows:

On 14-10-25 the Amildar of the Taluk created a panic in the town by beat of drums terrifying the people that the Kaniars would force their entry into the temple. He asked them to be prepared for the occasion, if need there be. The Government servants were made to do propaganda against Mr. Ramachandra Rao and the Kaniar leaders. The Sub-division Officer, himself at the time of Jamabandi, abused his power, prestige, influence, friendship and kinship to do propaganda against the movement. On 24-1-26 Mr. Tagadur Ramachandra Rao and the Kaniars were for sometime prohibited from entering the limits of T Narasipur town. On 16-5-26 about 200 Kaniars who had assembled at Nilasoge were practically interned by being prohibited from going out of the village. A police guard had been kept round the village. On the same day, the Kaniars, coming from Sosale and Narasipur on their way to Nilasoge were obstructed and sent back. On the same date four Satyagrahis who started from Nilasoge to T. Narasipur to offer Satyagraha before the temple were ill-treated, the police constable No. 177 trying to use his shoes against them. On the same date the Jamadar got the Satyagraha flag pulled down, the Amildar tore off the board from its place and threw it away. Besides on this very date the Amildar made attempts to drive out by force Kaniars assembled at Nilasoge. Again on 7-6-1926 a gentleman who had given shelter to Mr. Ramachandra Rao in T. Narasipur was compelled to shut his door against him. The same day at midnight, when Mr. Ramachandra Rao and four Satyagrahis had taken shelter in a ruined Mantapa in the tota, the Sub-division Officer, the Amildar and others mercilessly drove them out. Even dogs and cats are given shelter, but not the Satyagrahis. These are all the facts. These are known to all the people in T. Narasipur. Impartial people who had gone to this sport and seen the things with their own eyes have given statements to that effect. However, we do not grieve now for what has already passed. We cherish no hatred or ill-will to anybody. Even local officials are our friends. We blame our own fate. Nobody can help us except Lord Gunja Narasimha. We know He has put us into a trial, we willingly and cheerfully suffer any difficulties that we may have to face in our peaceful fight for our rights. We have faith in truth and non-violence. It is far from our desire to gain our ends by inflicting sufferings on others. We declare once again that by Satyagraha we do not mean to force our entry into the temple, unless public opinion is for it and Government approves of it. What we mean by Satyagraha is, we stand in front of the temple in a place selected by the Government and the leaders of the public doing Bhajana and spinning on Charkha until the hearts of the higher communities melt and melt profusely, transferring itself into an embracing love which takes us into their fold and makes them recognise that we are unjustly withheld our rights and that it is their duty to gracefully concede them. The mamool allows us up to the front of the temple. We stand there. Our request, a humble request, our respectful request, to the local officials is to permit us a select number to stand before the temple and demonstrate our protest to other communities who withhold our rights. We assure every one, the public and the Government that we do not do violence to anybody. Let not the local officials get panic-stricken at the very word Satyagraha and injure our cause. We sincerely hope that this sad chapter will end here.

We are highly thankful to the Government for its sympathetic assurance that it will do what all it can do to further our cause. Before closing we offer our sincere and heartfelt thanks to the members of the Assembly in general and Messrs. Hosakoppa Krishna Rao, J. Shama Jois, Honniah Heggade, B. N. Subba Rao, B. L. Byanna, Nelgari Sanjeeviah, Mona kalmur Narasinga Rao and M. C. Mallegowda in particular for having shown sympathy to the cause of Kaniars and interpellated Government on the matter. Our heartfelt thanks go also to the Dewan Sahib and the Second Member of the Council. May Sri Gunja Narasimhaswamy shower his blessings on all friends and sympathisers of Kanniars.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n793/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PROP. RADHAKRISHNAN IN ENGLAND.

Mr. V. V. Chowdary, M.A., B.L., writes to the Swarajya, Madras, from Oxford :—

At last in the person of Prof. Radhakrishnan, India, nay, the East, is showing what great contribution it has still to make to the West. After all man does not live by bread alone. Western civilisation has done much to uplift our material prosperity. But that is not the be-all and end-all of life. When the bodily wants are satisfied there is still something more which craves for fulfilment. The East has got its contribution to make to the world in satisfying this higher spiritual longing. India, the seat of philosophy in the East, with its Ramanujas and Sankaras, with its Dwaitic, Advaitic and Visishtadvaitic views of the world, with its Hinduism, Buddhism and Jainism, has still to supplement and enlighten the realism of a Russell or the idealism of Bradley or Ward. To-day the Calcutta University has really honoured itself in picking up a genius like Prof. Radhakrishnan who has been sent as a delegate to the Congress of the Universities of British Empire.

At Oxford.

When he came here in that capacity, Oxford, the oldest and the best of the Universities, has availed itself of the opportunity in choosing Prof. Radhakrishnan and broke a tradition by calling an Indian for the first time to deliver the Upton lectures at Manchester College. Mr. Jacks, the Principal of that College and the editor of the famous philosophical journal, Hibbert Journal, said : "You have honoured us by delivering your first lectures outside India in our University." It is really surprising to hear in what high estimate he is held by all the great philosophers in the West, and how every University here invites him to have a talk with that great man whom they know only through his monumental works. Owing to his retired temperament, but more perhaps owing to his short stay here, he could not comply with their requests.

At Cambridge.

The other day Cambridge gave a reception to him. All the philosophers, logicians and metaphysicians of that famous University attended. He had to deal off-hand with the subject of Bradley and Samkara. They were simply surprised at the excellent way in which he tackled the subject and especially the admirable exposition of the difficult problem of 'maya' so much so that Mr. Sorley at last burst out saying that no Englishman or Indian had so clearly spoken on Hindu philosophy within the walls of Cambridge in a manner which appealed to a Western audience.

His Upton lectures unfortunately came off during the Eights Week at Oxford—a very exciting time when both the Professor and the student, the lecturer and the pupil, the Dons and the graduates are wholly absorbed in the intercollegiate boat races. In spite of these adverse circumstances his lectures commanded a very big audience. For four days continually the Professor held them in a spell by his lucidity of exposition, fineness of delivery, and by a clear analysis of the subject driving home to them the important elementary principles of Hindu philosophy. Realising the importance of the lectures the printers and publishers have already beseiged him for permission to get them printed. Thus the Professor has maintained the past intellectual and spiritual greatness of India not to speak of his own self and made the Westerners revise their opinion of the capacities of the Indian intellect.

From here he is proceeding to London and Paris and from thence to America. Judging by the successes he won in Oxford and Cambridge it is not difficult for one to predict what new laurels of victory would be awaiting him in the New World.

---

WOMEN'S WELFARE AND BIRTH CONTROL.

Dr. Charles Lucas's reply in acknowledgment of a card of invitation to the meeting of the Cambridge Women's Welfare Association, on the subject of Birth Control, published in the Cambridge Daily News and sent to us by a valued friend, cannot but be of interest. It runs as follows :

I believe I am indebted to you for the invitation to the Cambridge Women's Welfare Association meeting on Saturday, May 8th, 1926. Therefore a reply and acknowledgment is due. I am interested in and have done some work for women's welfare, well the speech of Lord Dawson of Penn, etc. etc., is the damnation of it!!! As a doctor and student of Nature you know perfectly well that reproduction of the species is the foundation and bedrock of animal life, and if you weaken or undermine your foundations your superstructure must inevitably fall into ruin. This you will allow is sound and undeniable argument.

I was in practice as a doctor for 40 years, and it was my lot to come in contact, etc., with cases where birth control had been exercised, and in almost all instances shattered health and happiness and ruined home, and family comradeship and bliss were destroyed. Lord Dawson of Penn exulted in the modern girls and young women who throw away all modesty and reserve and mix on equal terms with boys. These poor deluded creatures become more or less a band of hermaphrodites. I should like to introduce you to a Miss W—(the real thing physically). I am sure you would fall in love with her. Doctor Dawson's remarks that mothers of large families were mere breeding machines were particularly offensive to me. I am number 10; my mother was one of the very best: the life and soul of all that was going forward and had a kind thought for everyone. Dawson of Penn's philosophy on married life, that the man and woman should determine whether their offspring should be one or two, and after that they should massacre the innocent indefinitely, is fiendish indeed. I left the meeting with a feeling of shame and disgust, that the large number of young people present who should naturally hope to become happy wives and mothers, should have their minds vitiated with such a pernicious doctrine, and even now I cannot quite shake off the disgust; it haunts me like a bad and disagreeable smell, so that I will peg away in my garden where I can see the skylark soaring up to the heavens singing its joyous song to its mate of love for the life that is to be. I shall be only too glad for it to be generally known what my sentiments are on the subject, which I will repeat with emphasis—that birth control is damnation to women's welfare. The statement still holds good that "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Well, if you knock the bottom out of the cradle you destroy women's kingdom.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n794/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

I consider if Lord Dawson of Penn, holding as he does such an exalted and powerful position, would benefit the human race, he should rather devote his time, energies and great influence to stamp out tuberculosis, than advocate such erroneous and pernicious doctoring and tinkering.

THE PIONEER OF WOMEN'S MOVEMENT.

The world is the poorer for the loss of Ellen Key, who died on April 25th at her home in Sweden. She was born in 1849, and the three quarters of a century over which her life extended, saw greater changes in the position and especially in the outlook of women than any similar period since the world began. And in this changed outlook Ellen Key had her part. Perhaps it would be a misnomer to call her a leader, for she headed no popular movement; she identified herself with no organized agitation for change or progress. She raised her voice against the suffrage fight. She warned the eager feminists of the early twentieth century that they were on the wrong path when they sought equal rights with men in education and in industrial and professional opportunity. It was her fate to shock the sensibilities and the moral ideals of her contemporaries, and yet to be considered a conservative and even a reactionary by the women who were pushing out so earnestly into the life of the great world. Yet it may be that in some respects her vision was clearer and more far-seeing than that of the women who had thrown themselves into the struggle for education, for the vote, for the right to a career, and to freedom to control their own lives. It may be that when all these lesser rights have been secured, women will find that the greatest right of all is the right to their own special function—the right to responsible, freely-chosen maternity. The great service rendered by Ellen Key was that she sounded a clarion cry—a cry that was harsh and discordant in the ears of many who heard it first, but a cry that woke up the woman-hood of the world and forced women everywhere to think and to revalue their accepted ideas and traditions. When "The Century of the Child" appeared in 1909, it marked the beginning of a new era, an era which is slow in being fully realized, for it requires an upheaval of thoughts of men which cannot be accomplished in less than a generation. Ellen Key herself never seemed fully conscious of the importance of Birth Control for the accomplishment of her aim of true motherhood, but Birth Control is the necessary corollary to her insistence on the right of every woman to choose motherhood. The essence of her teaching was that women must develop themselves as women—as mothers. They could not reach their full stature by forcing themselves into the moulds of life created by men. It was not desirable for the world that they should follow the example of men in education, in industry, in business, in the professions, in government, if the world were to be made fit for little children. The men had not succeeded in doing this. The world, from the point of view of the child, was a failure. It remained for the women to recreate it, and they must do this through the development of their own unique qualities as mothers—through freely-chosen responsible motherhood.—The Birth Control Review, America.

INDIAN REPRESENTATIVE AT THE INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE ALLIANCE CONGRESS, PARIS.

Mrs. A. B. Lakshmi Pathi, B.A., an Indian representative at the International Women's Suffrage Alliance Congress, writes from Paris :—

The Congress held its sessions here between 26th May and 10th June. The United States of America, Egypt, Peru, Brazil, Australia, Japan, India and all the countries of Europe were represented in the Congress.

The Indian delegates were eight in number, seven ladies and one gentleman from Bombay. Among them were Mrs. Muthulakshmi Ammal, myself, Mrs. Swaminadhan, Mrs. N. Sen, whose husband is in the India Office, Mrs. Drysdale and Mrs Barrie and a French lady from Pondicherry.

The Congress was a very great success. The President of the Congress, Mrs. Dorbet Ashbey, is a very able woman indeed, and she is, I may say, equal to our Congress Presidents. I am struck with the energy and the efficiency of the women here.

Receptions were given to us by the important people of Paris. On 1st June there was a very grand reception by the Mayor of Paris. You cannot imagine the grandeur of the entertainment. There was a beautiful orchestra in attendance and the halls were lit up with very handsome Venetian chandiliars. The halls, with gold work in the ceiling and lovely paintings on the walls, were simply amazing. Paris is so very artistic and beautiful in its buildings that one gets enchanted with them.

On 2nd June, I was invited to a tea party given by the wife of the Ex-Minister of Public Health. There I met the wife of the Minister of Finance. If I had come independent of the Congress, I would not have seen all these lovely things of Paris and its great people.

I had been to Fontainebleu and saw the lovely palace in which the ancient Kings of France lived and which was afterwards occupied by Napoleon. At Malmaison, I saw the house of Josephine, who, divorced by Napoleon, lived there until she died.

Versailles which is familiar in the history of the French Revolution is full of lovely tapestry and paintings. All the belongings of the old Kings are preserved there.

I went into the Church of Notre Dame on Sunday, 30th May, when service was going on. It was a wonderful sight. The height of the ceiling is something like the height of the domes at Bijapur.

The delegates from Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Germany and Austria have asked me to come to their countries. One lady from Berlin said that she would take me to the Parliament, and at Vienna they are arranging a great reception for me.—Justice, Madras.

BOMBAY WOMEN'S MEETING.

The women of Bombay are forging ahead in their ideas and ideals. Having won the suffrage in the local legislature and the right of returning their own representatives on the Municipal Corporation, they are now eager to sit side by side with men on the local and the central legislatures and play their part in the administration of the country. This desire was eloquently voiced at a public meeting of women held at Marwari Vidyalaya on Monday evening, in which representative European, Hin-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n795/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Mussalman and Parsi ladies took part. Mrs. Sheru F. Vakil occupied the chair and among those who ressed the gathering were Mrs. Hirabai Tata, Mrs. rgaret Cousins of Madras, who is the first woman gistrate in India, Mrs. Raiji, Mrs. Shafi Tyebji, Miss rajbai D. Contractor, Miss Krishnabai Jhaveri and i. Ratanbai Pavri.

MEN WHO TALK A LOT.

The speakers maintained that there were certain nches of administration for the control of which men re not fitted and that unless women were admitted the Councils it was impossible to expect efficiency hose departments. They recalled the achievements Ahalya Bai of Indore, Nur Jehan of Delhi, Tara Bai Satara and Chand Bibi of Ahmednagar who had left ark in Indian history by demonstrating what women ld do "Unless and until men become unselfish and t to their women, Swaraj will be inaccessible and r cry will be in the wilderness," was the warning of fair speaker to the Congresswallas. "They say nen talk a lot, but our own experience is that it is men who talk a lot and do little," said Mrs. Cousins l wound up by expressing the hope that the members the local legislature, when they met at Poona next nth, would give the lead to all India by not indulging oo much talk but granting to the women folk the t of representation.

The meeting passed the following resolutions unanisly :—

'That this meeting of the women of Bombay requests members of the Bombay Legislative Council to nove the sex disqualification as regards the eligibility women to stand as candidates for the Local Council. further urges the members of the Legislative Assembly l the Council of State to pass the necessary resolution noving a similar disqualification as regards the gibility of women to be elected or nominated as mbers of those bodies."

'That this meeting authorises the President to send ies of the Resolution to the Secretaries of the mbay Legislative Council, the Legislative Assembly l the Council of State, and to Dr. Sir Harisingh ur."—The Times of India, Bombay.

---

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Late Mr. Chiraranjan Das: We deeply ret to record the death of Mr Chiraranjan Das, the y son of the late Mr. C. R. Das, which took place t Sunday. We wish to convey our deep condolences Mrs. Das and other members of the bereaved family.

First Sindh Lady to Study Law: Miss Jamai Shahani, daughter of Principal Shahani of the D. Sind College, who graduated in Arts this year, has ned the newly opened Law College at Karachi and is first Sindh girl to take up the law course.

A Princely Donation: To promote extensive d intensive studies in different branches of Sanskrit rning, Seth Gourishanker Goenka of Khurja has given ay five and a half lakhs of rupees ear-marking a porn of the donation for awarding handsome "dakshis" annually to eminent Sanskrit scholars all over dia.

A Malayali Lady Doctor: A Cannanore correspondent writes to the Hindu, Madras: Miss P. C. Madhavi of this place has come out successful in the B. H. S. in Homeopathic medicine and surgery held at the Edward Medical College of Calcutta. She was a student of the Islamia Medical College of Hyderabad and is the first Malayali lady to take this degree.

Agricultural Education in Madras Presidency: The Madras Government has drawn up a scheme for the expansion of agricultural study in middle schools in rural areas. In addition to the usual curriculum, certain subjects of rural interest such as nature-study, the elementary principles of agriculture, carpentry and smithy work will be introduced.

Adi-Dravida Meeting in Mysore: A correspondent writes to the Hindu, Madras: Under the auspices of the Adi-Dravida Jana Sabha, Kolar Gold Field, on the evening of the 19th instant, there was a huge meeting of Adi-Dravidas held at P. Block, Oorgaum, under the presidentship of Rev. D. David, Mr. C. Varatharajulu Bagavathar impressed on the audience the value of cleanliness and devotion and quoted from Shastras to prove that all were equal before God.

Canadian National Exhibition: Sir T. Vijiaraghava Achariar, K.B.E., Director of Industries and Acting Director of Fisheries, Madras, has been invited by the authorities of the Canadian National Exhibition to open the Exhibition which commences at Toronto on August, 28. The invitation has the cordial support of the Prime Minister of Ontario. It is understood he has accepted the invitation and will sail from India about the middle of July. He will return to India on October 1 in time to join the Public Services Commission of which he is a member.

Communalism in Education: The first annual Conference of the Hyderabad State Teachers' Association was held on the 24th June. Nawab Hyder Nawaz Jung Bahadur, Finance Minister, presided. Referring to the communal riots he asserted that if the canker of communalism had not entered into educational institutions, this problem would not have been presented in such an acute form. For years past they had been watching the starting of schools, scholarships, libraries and even tournaments exclusively for particular communities with particular aims and pupils instead of starting life in an atmosphere absolutely free from communalism.

Visvabharati: Dr James H. Cousins, Principal of the Brahmavidya Ashram, Adyar, Madras, will deliver a special course of lectures at Visvabharati, Rabindranath Tagore's University at Shantiniketan, Bolpur, this summer term, commencing in July. The subject of Dr. Cousins' lectures will be "The Unity of Asian Culture," "The Growth of Irish Culure," "The Evolution of Civilisation" and "Studies in English Poetry." Dr. Cousins will also give lectures on various aspects of Western Art, including special studies of works of some of the great living painters. He will reside at the Visvabharati Ashram from July 1 to August 10.

Sir Jagadish Honoured: Sir Jagadish Chandra Bose and Lady Bose have just returned to England from Belgium. Sir J. C Bose had had high honours shown him at Belgium. He was dubbed with the Order of Leopold, the highest title of distinction there, by His Majesty the King of Belgium. Sir Jagadish received a letter from Lord Balfour congratulating him on a recent work of his "The nervous mechanism of Plants": "I offer you my warmest congratulations on the additions you have made to our knowledge of the vital phenomena in the vegetable world."

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n796/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Resolutions of the Tinnevelly Adi-Dravida Conference: The most important of the resolutions passed by the above Conference held recently were: That Rule No. 92 of the Madras Educational Rules be so amended as to demand and collect only ½ of the fees charged ordinarily in all Government, Mission and non-Mission institutions. That the power of recommending darkast lands to Adi-Dravidas be vested in Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars instead of in Maniagars and Karnams. This Conference urges on the Government the immediate cancellation of the Government Order on the Kalpathy affair. A resolution was also passed demanding the extension of grant of stipends to Adi-Dravida girls reading in 4th standard as now given to Mapilla girls.

Reform of Juvenile Offenders:— Following a method adopted by the Salvation Army in England for moulding the character of youthful offenders, Colonel Colledge of the Salvation Army has appointed 4 experienced officers of the local Army as Probation Officers for Colombo. Their chief duty will be to keep in frequent touch with the juvenile offenders, who will be released on probation for a certain period. Two of the officers will attend the Police and Municipal Courts every sitting day to take a note of offenders who will be let out on probation, while the other 2 will be on their rounds, visiting probationers. Their endeavour will be to convert the lads from their evil ways and train and educate them to lead better lives. But whenever any one of the lads repeats an offence during his probationary period, he will be promptly reported to the Court. This kind of work is carred on extensively in England.

A Prohibition Meeting: At a public meeting, held at Ooty on the 16th June a proposition that prohibition was not possible in India was voted down. Dr. Ferguson, a Missionary and a temperance worker, deplored the increase in drink revenue which had mounted from 15 to 40 per cent. of the total revenue and said that India deserved the advantages which America had derived from prohibition. He also referred to Indian sentiment, social as well as religious, which was overwhelmingly prohibitionist. Mr. Davis, M.L.C., and planter, referred to the concrete results which the prohibition experiment had achieved in Nilgiris and paid a tribute to the work of the Swarajists in the Council in this direction. The Badagas of Nilgiris, he said, were richer, happier and healthier as a result of prohibition. An American visitor who was present said that the reports about failure of prohibition in America were all false and that America was all the better for her bold reform.

Mr. Ramanand Chatterjee invited to Geneva: The Associated Press understands that the League of Nations has officially sent an invitation to Mr. Ramanand Chatterjee, Editor of Prabasi and the Modern Review to come to Geneva for the purpose of undertaking a study of the "League" and that Mr. Chatterjee has accepted the invitation. The object of the invitation is stated in the following paragraph of the letter addressed to Mr. Chatterjee by the Secretary-General, League of Nations: "It is of course obvious that there is no intention of interfering with your independent judgment. The policy of the Secretariat is to try to secure responsible representative journalists more especially from distant countries, with whom contact is necessarily more difficult, to spend sometime in Geneva in order to become acquainted with the League's work and constitution and thus be in a position, on their return home, to follow its proceedings with understanding."

Scientific Society's Girls' High School:— The opening ceremony of the new buildings of the Students' Literary and Scientific Society's Girls' High School, in Nowroji Lane, Bombay, was performed recently by Sir L. A. Shah in the presence of a very large gathering. The Society was founded about 75 years ago, and among its founders were men like Dadabhai Naoroji, Jagannath Shankershett, Dr. Bhau Daji etc. Sir Lallubhai said the schools of the Society were hitherto located in another building which the Society was under legal obligation to vacate and this new building had become an absolute necessity to the Society. It was a matter of genuine satisfaction to those connected with the institute that the Society had been able to put up the building which would mark an important stage in the progress of the Society and in the secondary education of girls. He said the cost of the building was over a lakh of rupees, and they had been able to collect about Rs. 53,000 leaving a balance of about Rs. 30,000 and the speaker appealed to all those present to help the institution liberally. He praised the work done by Mr. B. G. Padhye and Dr. Nerurker for the school by giving their very valuable services to it. The School building was erected with the help of a Bank and the amount owning to that Bank had to be paid by the end of the year, and he hoped it would be made up within that time. He prayed God that the institution might flourish and that the girls might receive such education as would make them ideal wives and mothers and ideal members of Society. Dr. J. S Nerurker then proposed a vote of thanks for the President and said he had helped the institution in a great many ways.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Salary Rs. 60 to 200. Study my simplest light-line Shorthand at home. Commended by Press and Public. Textbook, Dictionary, Reading Books, Rs. 3/6 Post Free. Certificate granted. Agents Wanted.—S. D. Sharma, Egerton Road, Delhi.

NEW BOOKS. Two Books of JUST PUBLISHED.

GREAT VALUE.

TALKS ON THE PATH OF OCCULTISM

is a companion volume to The Masters and the Path, and is intended for the daily use of aspirants. It consists of a commentary by Dr. Besant and Bishop Leadbeater jointly on At the Feet of the Master, The Voice of the Silence and Light on the Path, and is full of detailed explanation, advice and instruction.

Pages 969 with full index.
Price: Cloth and Gold Rs. 12.
Boards... Rs. 10.

THE GOLDEN BOOK OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY 1875—1925.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

Issued in Commemoration of the Jubilee of the Theosophical Society by its General Council.

Edited by C. Jinarajadasa, M. A., Vice-President of the T. S.

334 Illustrations and Index.
Cloth and Gold in Art Paper, pp. 421,
Price Rs. 12-8.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n797/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Social Reform Directory.

Under this heading we propose to publish rom time to time a list and short accounts f Institutions of Social Reform, as we are eceiving enquiries regarding them. Secre- aries or other officials connected with such nstitutions are requested to send us, free of harge, in brief, accounts of their institutions n the model of those given below. We articularly request information regarding nstitutions for girls and young women such s Orphanages, Widows' Homes, Hostels for omen-students and Rescue Homes.

The Calcutta Protestant Home for Fallen Women.

The Calcutta Protestant Home for fallen women, 3, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home r Christian women and girls. It was founded in 78 by Miss Lavinia Fendall and has accommodation r 25 girls and 15 babies or children. The girls remain the Home for periods of 2 years or longer during nich they receive vocational education enabling em to make a new start in life. The Home is in- rdenominational; is maintained by voluntary con- ibutions, and managed by a Committee of ladies presenting various Christian Communions. Each girl paid a percentage on the work done by her. The ome is for Europeans and Anglo-Indians only. Its st is about Rs. 15,000 per annum. The present idy Superintendent is Sister Eleanor to whom com- unications should be addressed. The property of e Home which stands in a fine compound in the orth of Calcutta is in the custody of a Board of ustees also representing different Christian Com- unions. The Convener of the Trustees is the Rev. erbert Anderson, 59, King's Road, Howrah.

The Children's Rescue Home, Calcutta.

The Children's Rescue Home, No. 22, Dum Dum oad, Calcutta, is a Rescue Home for Hindu and ahomedan girls mainly rescued from the haunts vice in Calcutta. It is under the auspices and ntrol of the Calcutta Vigilance Society who collect- the funds for its opening and have undertaken to n it for 3 years as a social experiment. The Home s only just been started. Its Superintendent is Miss nsell. Matrons and teachers have been appointed d the girls who vary in age from 4 to 10 will have eir religious susceptibilities respected and, it is ped, will be so brought up that they shall find it pos- ble to return to respectability in their own commu- ities. The Home will be independent of Police con- ol or connection but will work in helpful co-opera- n with the Police who under the Children's Act are w in a position to prevent the exploitation of child e in the brothels of this City.

Sir Ganga Ram's Widow Re-marriage Society.

The Society has extended its activities throughout dia. It publishes three monthly journals named dhva Sahark in Urdu, Vidhva Bandhu in Hindi and idows' Cause in English. The Society conducts an hram for invalid old men and women. It had ior to this a Widows' Home and a High hool for Girls. 9 paid workers of the Society sit 521 stations, mostly in the Punjab, several nes in the year. The Sabha has three Vidhwa hrams, in Lahore, Hardwar and Muttra and besides allowing contributions to several Ashrams in U. P. d other provinces to encourage this movement. he Society has its headquarters at Lahore and has ade several efforts to enlist the co-operation of milar institutions in other parts of India. The onorary Secretary of the Society is Lala Lajpat ai Sahani.

Kanya Mahavidyalaya, Jullunder City.

The avowed object of this institution is to give useful and practical training to women so as to fit them for domestic life. The courses of studies pres- cribed have this object in view and students are not prepared for University Examinations. The Vidyalaya maintains also a Widows' Home and an Ashram or Orphanage. Mr. Dev Raj is the President of the Vidyalaya which has done much to improve the position of women in Northern India.

Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

This excellent institution is still in its infancy and owes its existence to the indefatigable efforts of Ya- mini Purna Tilakamma. It is a Rescue Home for the uplift of the Devadasi community. Propaganda work on behalf of this institution is carried on both in Madras and the mofussil by the Kalavantula Sabha.

The Pandharpur Orphanage and Foundling Asylum.

This institution is maintained at Pandharpur by the Bombay Prarthana Samaj. The Foundling Home is the only institution of the kind founded and maintained under non-Christian auspices. During the half a century the institution has been in existence, it has been the means of saving hundreds of Hindu widows from sin and crime. All communi- cations should be directed to the Secretary.

Training for Social Work.

A course of training for Social Work is given for women students at the University Settlement, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay. The aim of the course is to provide opportunities by which women of all communities, who have finished their general educa- tion, may prepare for a life of usefulness and service. The course, which extends over a period of one year, includes both theoretical and practical training. During the monsoon, students may prepare for the Social Diploma given by the Social Service League in October. Special training is given to any students who look forward to making Social Service one of their definite interests and activities in later life. The course of training begins in June. Further informa- tion may be had from Mrs. Maclean, Wilson College, Bombay 7.

The Salvation Army Womens' Rescue Home, Matunga.

This Institution was opened by His Excellency, the Governor of Bombay, in March 1925, and is situated on the Sion-Matunga main road, some 10 minutes' walk beyond King's Circle, Matunga. The purpose of the Home is the reclamation of fallen women and girls irrespective of creed, colour or caste. It is also a Refuge and Home for women and girls who are in moral danger. The Home is fully equipped for its purpose, and includes a complete Maternity Ward. The Matron-in-Charge, Adjutant (Miss) Bassett, is a Certified Nurse, and is a Member of the Bombay Presidency Nursing Association. There is no inter- ference with the religion of those who enter the Home, and each inmate is free to maintain her own religious inclinations. Every effort is made to teach the highest possible moral standards, and to guide the inmates of the Home in the direction of higher ideals of living. Domestic industries are taught, including sewing, all kinds of needlework, and also household duties. There is also a Day School conducted.

University Settlement, Bombay.

The University Settlement provides a Hostel for about 30 Women Students attending any College in Bombay and also supplies a place of residence for a few Indian professional women. The staff of the Settlement, who are usually British University Women, are prepared to take pupils in English and other subjects. For particulars apply to Miss E. C. Gedge, Vatchagandhi Road, Bombay 7.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n798/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed ... ... ... Rs. 3,36,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... „ 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ... „ 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar. (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jaffaris, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Nasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Sansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

:—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co. New York.

Berlin Agents —The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2% from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5% per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)

Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... „ 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... „ 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed or daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

ALL NERVE COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C, J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( „ „ ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( „ „ ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( „ „ ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, of the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily, balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n799/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Jagjivan H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE INDIAN WITNESS.

[ Founded 1870 ].

Largest Circulation among Christian Weeklies in India.

Special attention to Temperance and Public Morals.

Rapidly Growing Subscription List.

Rs. 8/- per annum in India.

Rs. 9/- in foreign countries.

EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Address—INDIAN WITNESS,
HAZRAT GANJ, LUCKNOW.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... Rs. | 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED " ... | ... " | 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP " ... | ... " | 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS " ... | ... " | 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A.:—Summer Ballard.

Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc.

P. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n800/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Are you in need of a

Tonic?

IF SO

use only the world renowned

"Atank Nigrah Pills."

Because they lead the tonics of the day, and are a safe and sure cure defying competition for the past 45 years for all sorts of physical and mental weakness, digestive troubles and similar complaints.

Price Re. 1 for a tin with 32 pills.

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar.)

Bombay Branch

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 150 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT;

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n801/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY No. 4.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE, THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 14 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship." The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yesnwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n802/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

With Overseas Supplement. THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1926. No. 46

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Bombay Police Administration.
Bombay Provincial Co-operative Bank.
Women's Right to Sit in the Legislatures.
State Official's Beneficent Act
Relief to Discharged Prisoners
Future of Christianity in India.
Village Baby Scheme.
Prohibition in Bombay.
A Social Canker.
Johannine Conception of the Logos.
Welfare Work in Currimbhoy Mills.
Prof. Radhakrishnan at Oxford.
Health and Baby Week in Simla.
The Bombay Presidency Released Prisoners' Aid Society.
Women's Right to sit in the Legislatures.
The Gurkha League.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Bombay Police Administration: The Annual Report on the Police of the City of Bombay for the year 1925 records a decrease in crime. There was a substantial decrease in every class of offence, rioting, dacoity, robbery, house-breaking and theft. Though the total figure of cognizable crime for 1925, viz., 100,629, shows an increase of 977 compared with 1924 and 9,987 compared with 1923, the number of Indian Penal Code cases in 1925 was the lowest recorded since the year 1917, while the number of Local Act cases was the highest ever recorded. In fact, it is said, the best indication of the efficiency of the Police is a substantial decrease in Indian Penal Code cases and a substantial increase in Local Act cases. During the year, there were 1,832 motor accidents or 191 more than in the previous year and American cars have a substantial hold of the motor market. Mr. Kelly's administration as Commissioner of Police is remarkable for the strong measures he has taken to put down bribery and corruption in the Police Department. During the year 525 officers and men were punished as compared with 349 in 1924 and 428 in 1923, and it has been brought home to all ranks that slackness, indifference and dishonesty will not pay in the long run. Discussing the common complaint that the public give little or no assistance to the Police, Mr. Kelly writes: "The complaint is true. But the fault is not all on the side of the public. Co-operation in full measure cannot be hoped for till the Police win public confidence in full measure. It is unfortunately true that they have not won it yet. The public at present do not trust in the honesty of the Police and they resent the incivility and the discourtesy with which not infrequently the Police discharge their official duties." It is not usual to come across such plain speaking in official reports. For the first time for some years there was no Pathan scare in 1925 and the Commissioner has kept himself in touch with the Pathan leaders and enlisted their help to keep away undesirable characters from the City. But the daring highway robbery which was committed only a few days back, shows the necessity for the adoption of more severe measures against the Pathans. The Commissioner regards the presence in the city of habitual criminals whose main occupation is the commission of crime as a greater menace than the Pathan menace, and we have no doubt that he will take adequate measures to deal with it. We are sorry to find not even a passing reference in the Report to the Prevention of Prostitution Act passed in 1923.

Bombay Provincial Co-operative Bank: Starting originally as a small concern consisting almost wholly of individual shareholders, this Bank which is so to speak the apex of Co-operative Banking in the Presidency, has gradually extended its activities until to-day it practically finances the whole of the Presidency. Credit for this is in no small measure due to the energy and enterprise of the Chairman and the Managing Director. The fifteenth annual report of the Bank for the year 1925-26 gives detailed information regarding the working of the Bank, its relations with shareholders, societies and banks dealing with it. The total working capital during the year increased by nearly a quarter of a crore, and despite an increase in expenditure on supervision, inspection etc., it has been found possible to declare a dividend of 8 per cent for the year, an increase of half a per cent over the dividend rates for the previous five years. There was an increase of 16 lakhs under the head of fixed deposits and of 5 lakhs under current and savings deposits, the increase being mainly due to deposits of societies and banks. Every attempt is being made to bring about closer relations between the Central Banks and the Provincial Bank. The Directors of Central Banks have an opportunity of meeting the Board of this Bank on various occasions including the annual conferences of Central Banks and, in addition to this, training is given to managers and inspectors of Central Banks at this Bank. The system of tagavi loans through the Bank is gaining in popularity, though the demand is confined only to a few districts. During the year, the Thana District Central Co-operative Bank was amalgamated with this Bank, owing to the inability of that Bank to expand its business with the limited resources at its disposal. One important event of the year was the organization of a Conference of Provincial Co-operative Banks from various States and Provinces of India, which was a striking success, mainly through the efforts of the Bombay Bank. Such an organisation is a long-felt want and will no doubt tend to establish closer relations between the Provincial Banks of the various Provinces. The Bank, in spite of its vast scope, is handicapped in its work by undue restrictions such as in respect of the investment of surplus funds in banks other than those approved by the Registrar and the financing of small traders, and with these removed, its utility will be felt throughout the length and breadth of the Presidency.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n803/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Women's Right to sit in the Legislatures: Thanks to the Women's Indian Association, women are beginning to assert their political rights. An influential and largely attended meeting was held in Madras on the 9th instant, under the auspices of the Madras Branch, which called upon the members of the local Legislative Council to unanimously pass the resolution that has been tabled for discussion in the current session, removing the ban on women becoming members of the Council. It is necessary that the resolution should be passed in this very session so that women may exercise the right at the ensuing General Elections, and it is gratifying to note that notwithstanding the time allotted for non-official business being exhausted, H. E. the Governor has allotted special time for the discussion of the resolution. We have no doubt that the resolution will be unanimously passed, but, as Lady Sadasiva Iyer pointed out, that alone will not do, and educated men will have to allow and induce their educated women relatives to be nominated or to stand for election to the Council. We also print in this issue the appeal which the Poona Branch of the Women's Indian Association has addressed to the Bombay M. L. C's. urging their unanimous support to the resolution which Dr. Paranjpye has given notice of, to remove the sex-disqualification on women becoming members of the Council. We trust the M. L. C.'s will do their duty by the women. Women members, too, must interest themselves actively in social legislation and not be content to sit silent listeners to the eloquence of their men colleagues.

State Official's Beneficent Act: The following was contained in a recent issue of the Hindustan Times, Delhi: "A Jain of Kota-Gaota in Bundi State engaged his 10 year old girl with a 50 year old man of Anjangaon, C. P. and the marriage was to be performed on the 22nd June. The old bridegroom with a few of his relatives reached the girl's village long before the appointed day and all the preparations for the marriage were complete when, fortunately, the members of the Vaishya Sudharak Mandal, Kotah, coming to know of the coming marriage petitioned to the Dewan of the Bundi State, Munshi Dhannalal, to stop it and issue orders to ensure the protection of the girl. The Dewan very kindly issued an urgent injunction to the Nazim and Sub-Inspector of Police of the district to stop the marriage and send the parties concerned under custody to the capital for his personal inspection under the State law passed during the reign of the late Rao Raja prohibiting such incongruous marriages. The facts of the petition proving correct the previous orders were confirmed, and the Nazim was ordered to keep the girl under safe custody till further orders, while the girl's father was warned not to perform the proposed marriage and to select a young boy and celebrate the marriage in due course with permission and was handed over to the police to be kept under custody. The girl was saved from the grips of the old man and is now proposed to be married to a young boy of 18 of Lakheri." This is an old-world method which we cannot recommend as a practicable remedy in these days. But it is well that an Indian Minister should use his powers to put a stop to a social transaction which can only prove disastrous to the girl in ninety cases out of a hundred.

Relief to Discharged Prisoners: Elsewhere in this issue we publish the report of the work done by the Bombay Presidency Released Prisoners' Aid society during the six months ending 30th June 1926. The work for the most part consists of visits to jails and provision of help and employment to discharged prisoners. The Society also conducts a Home for such of the released prisoners as have neither home nor friends. We bespeak the earnest support of the public to the humanitarian work the Society is doing. It need hardly be pointed out that real prison reform begins only with the release of prisoners. It is the public that has to give a chance to a fallen man by starting him on his life and helping to remove the stigma that attaches to his name. The consequences of neglect of this duty on the part of the public will only be to make the released offender a confirmed criminal. Much credit is due to Mr. R. M. Salvi, J. P., who has consented to engage persons recommended by the Agent of the Society on his building and other construction work.

Future of Christianity in India: Writing on the future of Christianity in India and the work done by Christian Missionaries in this country, Dean Inge says in the Manchester Guardian: "Missionaries were accused of showing airs of superiority, of general sympathy with their own countrymen, the ruling race, and of great ignorance of the old Eastern religions. These three faults had existed in the past and existed now, but were much less than they were". Concluding he says: "What we need above all is real saints who will go out full of love and sympathy, without any racial prejudices, who will try to study the lives and beliefs of the people to whom they go, seeing on the whole what is best in them". How we wish the Christian Missionaries in this country take to heart the wise advice of the venerable Dean! Though Christian Missionaries cannot all be saints, they can do immense service to the country by appreciating and sympathising with the difficulties of the people. His Holiness the Pope has issued an admonition to Roman Catholic Missionaries in China to the same effect.

Village Baby Scheme: We are glad to note that gratifying progress is being made with what is known as the Lady Wilson's "Village Baby Scheme," initiated and organised by Dr. Da Gama, Asst. Director of Public Health, Poona. The scheme, shortly, is to bring batches of village dais or untrained midwives to undergo an intensive training in the elements of maternity and sanitation so that they may use the knowledge which they have acquired in the hospitals while attending delivery cases in the villages, thereby helping to reduce the appalling mortality among mothers and babies Poona District has taken the initiative in the matter and a large number of dais from the various talukas representing the various castes and communities have been successfully trained. The scheme has proved so successful that the District Local Board of Sholapur has already voted Rs. 1400 for the training of dais in their district, and it is to be hoped other districts will follow suit.

Prohibition in Bombay: The resolution which the Bombay Improvement Trust Board, at its meeting held on the 14th instant, adopted on the motion of Dr. Viegas that in future no shops should be allowed to be located on any property or part of the property belonging to the Board or any building or part of a building constructed or to be constructed thereon, is a welcome step towards prohibition in the city of Bombay. Far from ruining the labouring classes in the city as Mr. P. J. Murzban contended, it will be the means of saving many a labourer from the evil of intemperance which often consumes a large portion of his pay.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n804/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JULY 17, 1926.

A SOCIAL CANKER.

Dr. Marie Stopes is known to the Indian public as a leading protagonist of the birth control movement. It is not so well known that she is a talented author and a keen student of the drama in all lands. This side of her life has come recently before the public by the banning of a play written by her by the Lord Chamberlain. The Lord Chamberlain in England has the power to veto the performance of a play which he considers objectionable on the stage, but he has no power to prevent its publication in the form of a book. Dr. Stopes has published her play "Vectia" and in an introduction she gives an account of her interest in the drama. "For years past," she writes, "the theatre has been my chief interest and delight, the complement to the hard intellectual grind of academic science on the one hand, and on the other to the torturing personal sacrifice involved in my sociological work for the community. Seeing, reading, studying, dissecting, writing and producing plays for years past has sharpened the edge of my enjoyment of dramatic creations of every type." Her facility in producing plays, is shown by what happened when "Vectia" was banned by the censor. She had arranged at considerable expense for the production of the play little expecting that it would meet with the disapproval of the Lord Chamberlain. When at the last moment that functionary refused permission for the play to be performed, she dictated another play entitled "Our Ostriches" to an expert short-hand reporter in about six hours. This substitute play was produced on the day appointed for "Vectia" and, according to her own account, it had a magnificent reception. It ran for three months and, when it was published, it had a large sale.

"Vectia," it may be supposed, was a propaganda play in the interests of birth-control and was, therefore, banned by the Lord Chamberlain. "Our Ostriches" which was permitted by him and put on the stage, was a propaganda play of that description, but "Vectia" was not. In her preface to the latter play, Dr. Stopes bitterly assails the arbitrary and irrational way in which the censorship over plays is exercised in England. She writes:

> The Lord Chamberlain approves or at any rate officially sanctions (whatever he may feel in his heart) the protrayal on the stage of men's illicit amours and intensity of lust. The man who plays with mistresses, whose wife is driven by his sex excesses to subterfuge, to degradation, to other men, to suicide, all are shown publicly. Our 'moral code' causes our Lord Chamberlain to approve (as in "The Vortex") of the portrayal of a mother who openly and flagrantly carries on a series of liaisons in the midst of her home. When, however, as in "Vectia," instead of a frail, worthless woman, a seriously beautiful girl is portrayed, who, desiring in a simple home life to fulfil her nature by the creation of her child by her husband, in her pure innocence cannot understand why she is childless—when, in short, you have a plot which depends not on the over-sexuality, but on the under-sexuality of a man (her husband), the play is considered improper and is banned.

The above passage gives a sufficient idea of the play. Dr. Stopes says that in writing the play she was voicing the dumb feelings of thousands of women in Britain "whose code is immensely in advance of our present surface social code, whose life stories are poignantly similar to that of "Vectia"; who are suffering to-day not from man's simple lust and over-developed and excessive virility, as do many of their sisters, but from his weakness, due to youthful ignorance and corruption, and his consequent marital impotence." Dr. Stopes avers that in the course of her sociological work cases more or less like that of "Vectia" have been constantly brought to her notice by sufferers pleading for help.

In Dr. Stopes' play, "Vectia" gets relief by the discovery at the critical moment that the English law holds marriages like hers to be null and void. In Hindu India the law seems to be inexorable. The writer vividly remembers a young woman some years ago calling on a number of eminent lawyers in Bombay begging for assistance, whose husband was not only impotent but utterly unscrupulous in his attempts to prevent her from trying to get the marriage annulled. All those whom she consulted, and there were leaders of social reform among them, told her that nothing could be done for her. There is a text of Hindu law—the same which sanctions the remarriage of widows—which also sanctions remarriage in the case of wives whose husbands are "paronoic". But this is not evidently recognised as authoritative by the British Courts. It is assumed that every childless marriage is due to a defect in the wife and the husband marries a second or even a third wife in the hope, often vain, of getting a son and heir. It is never thought that the defect may be in the husband and not in the wife. This is one of the reforms in Hindu law which is urgently needed. A few years ago, a case came before the Bombay High Court in which a woman belonging to a wealthy and reputable family resorted to questionable means with the object of getting a male child who would take his share in her husband's property. The Hindu law of succession makes the position of the wife in such a case specially hard. Western civilisation has many glaring faults but it has one saving virtue. No evil is long allowed to remain sheltered from exposure, criticism and reform. The stagnation of Asia is chiefly due to the absence of this corrective in her culture and civilisation. In this respect, more than in any other, we have to learn much from the West. Dr. Stopes' play should open our eyes to the social canker not less prevalent in India than in England. It would be well to translate Dr. Stopes' play into the vernacular languages so that the criticism which it embodies of our one-sided marriage laws, may be brought home to the Indian people. Instances of unhappy marriages resulting in the "kidnapping" or suicide of young wives, have of late been becoming alarmingly frequent. Hindu society cannot afford to follow the policy of "Our Ostriches" and hide its head in the sand. It must boldly examine its social institutions and firmly cut out of them whatever has become useless, injurious and hurtful to the self-respect of men and women.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n805/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

JOHANNINE CONCEPTION OF THE LOGOS.

(By Mr. G. Y. Chitnis.)

(Continued from the last issue.)

The writer looked upon Jesus as the Divine Logos not simply because he was an intermediary between a transcendent unknown God and the errant humanity, not also because he was the cosmic principle of creation, but because—and here he definitely parts company with the Hellenised Jewish thought of Alexandria—he looked upon him as the Redeemer of man; his very first reference to Jesus as the Lamb of God taking away the sins of mankind is an indication of this. To him the life of Jesus appeared as the supreme tragedy, not the tragedy of the man who is the innocent victim of circumstances, but the tragedy of a perfectly holy and sinless divine being who willingly sacrificed himself for the love of humanity; and the tense dramatic interest is centred on this single theme. It is foreshadowed in the verse, "He came into the world and the world knew him not" and after this, every line we read seems to be leading to the great central fact—the fact of the redeeming and the self-giving love of a God-like man who was crucified. We from the vantage-ground of nearly nineteen centuries are not in a position to appreciate much of St. John's theology. It is very difficult for us to believe what he believed about Jesus, and yet in so far as we are able as by a kind of intuitive sympathy to enter into the mind of the writer and try to understand its varying moods, its moments of exaltation and depression, its sense of sin and the consequent experience of redemption, are we able to interpret in any intelligible way what he meant when he called Jesus the Divine Logos. He was not interested in the historical Jesus except so far as his death on the cross showed him, as nothing else could, that his death could not be accounted for except on the assumption that he gave his own life willingly for the sins of humanity; that he was pure, affectionate and loving; although his love sometimes expressed itself in fiercer form than hatred could, there is not a shadow of doubt, and his death, therefore, could not have been willed by any one except himself. It was self-willed, the motive being the redemption of man. Beyond this St. John does not show the slightest interest in the historical Jesus. He does not care whether Jesus was born at Nazareth or at Bethlehem, whether Joseph was his real father or a nominal one. All these details have not the least value for St. John. He is mainly concerned with interpreting to himself and others what he felt in his soul about this extraordinary man, how he was beset by a sense of sin and how he felt redeemed by the self-sacrificial act of this mysterious being who embodied in himself the character of God so completely, that he could only express his conviction of it by calling him the Word of God. Not that we can discover all this in the gospel, not at least in any explicit form. It needs an effort of imagination to understand this which seems to be the underlying prevailing note of this curious document.

There is a recent writer who agrees with St. John that the death of Jesus was self-willed; but he thinks that this act of willing his own death was due to certain apocalyptic illusions which Jesus cherished about his own life. Those illusions were shattered to pieces as soon as he was put on the cross; and he, therefore, died the death not of a divine Redeemer as St. John conceived, but that of a despairing, broken-hearted fanatical enthusiast. Now if there is one thing that srikes any impartial reader of the gospels, it is the amazing sanity of the man whose life they have portrayed. In none of his utterances or doings do we find the slightest trace of an unbalanced mind nor do we discover any fitful outbursts of religious enthusiasm that are so characteristic of a fanatic. It would indeed be extraordinarily difficult to find anything fanatical about Jesus but for the scholarly researches of Dr. Schweitzer. The more deeply we think of the matter, the more it becomes apparent to us how the modern school of eschatology has given an altogether wrong lead in the way of a systematic and critical and yet true appreciation of the life and person of Jesus.

Are we then to assume that St. John's conception of Jesus as the Logos and the Redeemer who gave himself for the love of mankind is true and valid? It is difficult to answer this question; but we cannot help feeling that the Johannine way of looking at the matter provides us with a much better insight into an otherwise mysterious life than the Schweitzerian way. The first is the way of a mystic, a poet and an artist; the second is that of a critic scholar and a historian. The one seeks to represent faithfully, devoutly, we might say lovingly, the life which redeemed and uplifted, transformed and transfigured millions of lives that came in touch with it; the other puts that life in a contemporary setting and examines it historically with the cool judgment of a critic. The one is concerned with the representation of a living experience, and the other with an interpretation of dead history. If, therefore, these two ways were offered us as alternatives, we would unhesitatingly choose the former; but who can say that a third way may not be found that will do justice to the claims of both and reconcile them in a higher synthesis?

(Concluded)

Welfare Work in Currimbhoy Mills: The Currimbhoy Ebrahim Workmen's Institute which has been in existence since 1918, continues to do much useful welfare work among the operatives of the eight mills of Messrs. Currimbhoy Ebrahim and Sons Ltd. The sixth annual report of its working, a copy of which we have received, records a further improvement in its activities. The Institute, during the brief period of its existence, has in no small measure striven to improve the lot of workmen in educational, economic and social matters. Among welfare activities may be mentioned schools and education classes, co-operative credit societies, sports and excursions. The Institute is conducting a creche and the proposal for a second one is under consideration. The Institute has also paid particular attention to women workers and the Association of Women Workers started in 1921 is doing much to interest them in educational, co-operative, maternity and child welfare work. The Institute has taken a commendable step in the establishment of co-operation between capital and labour by the organisation of Workers' Committees at which representatives of the workers and the Management are enabled to come together and understand their mutual views and difficulties.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n806/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PROF. RADHAKRISHNAN AT OXFORD.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In your issue of 3rd July on page 686 is the editorial "Professor Radhakrishnan at Oxford". I was interested in this and am delighted that our Indian Professor has given such a good account of himself at Oxford. I hope he will have a wide hearing in America.

But I could not quite understand the last sentence in the quotation from Dr. Jacks. It runs: "I hope will some day make me bold enough to say that I am a Christian." If that is what Dr. Jacks said it would seem to need some explanation. Can you throw any light on the mystery?

I agree with your editorial "Avaruddha Stree." But I think there should be a Hindu "Council of Trent" called to pass on what teachings are applicable to modern life and conditions Such a move would of course be opposed but it would help India to get on.

Balia U. P. Yours etc.,
6th July, 1926. P. M. Perrill.

[We understood Dr. Jacks to mean that he hoped to find in Christianity the same Spiritual Charity which, from Professor Radhakrishnan's presentation, he found in Hinduism. We think ourselves that Jesus Christ's attitude to other religions was the same as the Hindu's.—Ed., I. S. R.]

HEALTH AND BABY WEEK IN SIMLA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

Her Excellency Lady Irwin, at the conclusion of the Baby and Health week, on Monday the 28th June, graciously distributed prizes to successful babies and mothers. It may be mentioned that less than a month ago, the Simla Municipality decided to celebrate a Baby and Health Week from the 25th to the 28th June. This celebration was the first attempt which had been made at Simla and it was decided to keep it on a miniature scale, because of the difficulty in selecting at Simla a sufficiently central and large building with spacious grounds, together with the limited time available for the successful organisation of a large exhibition before the approaching rains. The organisation was left in the hands of Major J. R. D. Webb, O. B. E., I. M. S., Medical Officer of Health, and the staff of the Maternity and Infant Welfare Centre.

The objects of a Baby and Health Week, i. e., to improve the state of maternity and child welfare work and to spread knowledge in relation to public health, were kept well in view. The Exhibition was arranged in eleven sections. Special feature was made of "Respiratory Diseases" which are responsible for half the mortality rate at Simla. Small-Pox, Cholera, Plague and Malaria were also dealt with by means of models, photographs and apparati. A typical labour room and a typical maternity ward was included among the exhibits.

The maternal section showed the advantages of employing trained dais as compared with untrained dais. At Simla 46 dais work in the town, 22 are fully trained and certified by the Punjab Government, 12 are under training, while 12 still remain untrained. Indeed, it is understood that no other town in India can claim such a record in regard to the training of indigenous dais of which Simla may be well proud.

Great interest was aroused, and indeed it amused many to find that their usual habits had been so closely studied in a special exhibit consisting of a dirty room, to illustrate the ways in which some of the uneducated Indians often reside. Arranged true to life, it included the usual goat and dog occupying the dirty dwelling room. In contrast was the exhibition of a clean room, showing how, quite simply, and by the use of similar furniture. and equipment as shown in the dirty room the ideal workman's home could be made sanitary and habitable.

From the day the celebration was declared open by the Hon. Major General T. H. Symons, Director General, Indian Medical Services, large crowds patronised the exhibition. Lectures were delivered in Urdu on maternity and child welfare work, and cinema films in connection with this subject were screened.

Her Excellency on the prize distribution day was met by the members of the Simla Municipal Committee and viewed all the exhibits with keen interest. Indeed Simla is to be congratulated for the successful organisation of the Baby and Health Week Exhibition.

Lahore, Yours etc.,
July 9, 1926. Observer.

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY RELEASED PRISONERS' AID SOCIETY.

The following is the report of the work done by the Society during the six months ending 30th June 1926.

Visiting of Jails.

The Society's Agent visits the two Jails in Bombay, viz., the House of Correction, Byculla, and the Arthur Road Jail every morning and sees all the persons to be released each day. He ascertains from them their future plans, their financial position and their needs and does all in his power to give the necessary help so far as funds permit.

Help to Released Prisoners.

After a careful enquiry the Agent sorts out the persons requiring immediate relief. Those who require shelter are sent to the Society's Home opened in January last by His Excellency the Governor of Bombay. Those in need of food are given food tickets and are asked to see the Agent from time to time. In addition to this, prisoners are given clothing or railway tickets as required in individual cases. An attempt is also made to find employment in some cases. The Society is much obliged to Mr. R. M. Salvi, J. P., who has consented to engage persons recommended by the Agent on his building and other construction work.

During the period under review, the Society's Agent helped 328 released prisoners. This number includes 3 women. In the cases of 200 of these, steps were taken to supply them with food till they could arrange for themselves. Fourteen of the released were practically in rags and were provided with suitable clothing to enable them to approach employers for work.

In 12 cases it was found advisable to send away the persons to their native places to their friends and relatives and thus keep them aloof from the influences of city life. One Gujerati who was sent to his home in Baroda possessed absolutely nothing except the dhotee and shirt that he wore. This is only a typical instance which serves to show the useful work that the Society carries out. The number of persons helped by the Society includes 141 Hindus, 134 Mohammedans, 51 Christians, one Parsi and one Chinese.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n807/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

EMPLOYMENT FOR RELEASED PRISONERS.

The Society's Agent was able to secure employment for 30 persons; 8 of whom were employed by Mr. Salvi on construction work and 4 were found work in local mills. Others were employed as motor cleaners, electric firemen, typists and in similar other ways. In the case of one habitual offender, the Agent got him appointed as a watchman in a Mustafhar Khana where he has been found to work satisfactorily. For a certain first offender employment was secured as a general clerk on Rs. 130 p. m. at Baharein (Persian Gulf).

SOCIETY'S HOME.

Those of the released prisoners who have neither home nor friends whom they can approach are taken to the Society's Home. If they have no money they are supplied with food tickets till they can make some convenient shift. During the 6 months 54 persons were admitted in the Home and they stayed there for 2 or 3 days on an average. They are generally out in search of employment during the day and return at night for shelter.

During the past six months the Society has spent Rs. 300 in giving monetary help and with the assistance of the generous public the Society hopes to be able to extend relief to a still larger number.

WORK IN THE POLICE COURTS.

The Society's Agent attends the Esplanade Police Court every day and personally interviews the first offenders who are given the benefit of section 562 of the Indian Penal Code and who are bound over for a certain period. During the 6 months ending 30th June 1926 the Agent interviewed 130 first offenders and took the opportunity of talking to them and advising them. The friendly conversation is much appreciated by them at that psychological moment. It has been found that the first offenders at the Police Courts are not generally in need of money, clothing or food and the sympathy shown by the Society's Agent at the right moment cheers them up and fills them with hope. Out of the 130 persons approached 50 were homeless and their abodes were footpaths in the vicinity of the places where they work. Help is much required in this direction.

The offences were mostly under Sections 379 and 380 of the Indian Penal Code. Other cases under other sections were also found but these were very few.

Of the 130 persons bound over at the Courts of the 1st and 3rd Presidency Magistrates, 13 were women, 14 boys and the rest 103 adult males. This number includes 84 Hindus, 42 Mohammedans, 3 Christians and 1 Parsee. Their ages varied from 9 to 45. In the cases of 16, near relatives or guardians were approached and advised to extend sympathetic treatment especially in the cases of young boys. In the cases of 3 persons the Society offered help if the persons concerned were prepared to leave Bombay but they did not turn up.

WOMEN'S RIGHT TO SIT IN THE LEGISLATURES.

The President and Secretary of the Women's Indian Association, Poona Branch, have addressed the following letter to the members of the local Legislative Council:—You are of course aware that, merely because of their sex, women cannot offer themselves for election to the local Council, or get themselves nominated as its members. The new amendments to the electoral rules, as you most probably have observed, considerably facilitate the removal of this sex disqualification. What is necessary is that the Legislative Council should carry a resolution demanding such removal.

This Association has always stood for the removal of this and similar artificial restrictions on woman's right to take her proper place in the public life of the country. And when the Reforms Inquiry Committee was sitting, the Association pressed upon it the desirability of withdrawing the ban upon women sitting in the Legislatures of the country as elected or nominated members. Recently it gave its careful consideration to the situation created by the amended electoral rules, and decided to enlist the support of all members of the Bombay Legislative Council, if a resolution should come up for discussion. You will agree that in view of the approach of the general elections, it is necessary that such a resolution should be discussed at the next session of the Council.

The Association learns with pleasure that Dr. R. P. Paranjpye and a few other members of the Bombay Legislative Council have already sent in notice of their intention to move the required resolution at the next session of the Council which commences in Poona on July 26th. In order that it may survive the ballot, it is essential not only that it should be sponsored by as many members as possible, but that many of them should express their readiness to make the same their first choice, should they get a chance of moving a resolution.

The justice and fairness of women's demand for equality with men, so far as membership of the Legislatures is concerned, is too patent to need demonstration here. We hope therefore that, when the required resolution comes up for consideration in the Bombay Council, the Association may count upon your whole-hearted support. The Bombay Council was the first in the whole of India to remove the sex disqualification in the matter of voting at Council elections. The Association trusts it will give a correct lead to the rest of India, carrying by an overwhelming majority, if not unanimously, the resolution conferring upon women the right to stand for elections to the local Council.

THE GURKHA LEAGUE.

We have much pleasure in giving publicity to the following Appeal issued by the above League:

In pursuance of a resolution passed on the occasion of the second Anniversary of the Gurkha League, held at Dehra Dun, on the 6th June 1926, it is proposed to open as early as possible an Industrial and Technological Institute for the education, training, and subsequent employment of thousands of Gurkhas whose position, owing to lack of education and employment, is causing very grave concern to all well-wishers of this valiant and heroic section of the great Hindu nation. The Gurkhas are renowned throughout the whole world for their valour and warlike qualities. The Gurkhas are the only people who represent the independent sovereignty in the name of the Hindus. They number nearly twelve millions, and inhabit besides Nepal proper the entire vicinities of the Himalayan Mountains from Kashmir to Burmah and from Tibet to the Gangetic plains of British India. For the benefit of Gurkhas residing in British India, whose number is estimated to amount to about one million souls, this Industrial and

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n808/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIANS OVERSEAS

SUPPLEMENT TO The Indian Social Reformer.

No. 17. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1926. Price One Anna

RACIAL SEGREGATION IN KENYA.

News from Kenya is rather disheartening. The infection of South Africa is spreading to Kenya also. It may be remembered that when the Highlands of Kenya were reserved exclusively for European occupation in spite of vigorous Indian protests, it was clearly understood that there shall be no segregation in the rest of Kenya. But assurances and agreements never trouble the White settlers. They are treated as nothing more than scraps of paper whenever it suits their purpose. No wonder, therefore, that attempts are now being made to go back upon that inequitable document, the White Paper of 1923, and the Colonial office has been forced to bow down to the power and influence of the White settlers in Kenya. Twenty-one plots of ground round about the Mombasa Light House—an area included in the Mombasa Township area and a place for health resort—were recently auctioned, but the right of bidding was confined to Europeans with the result that the Indian and Arab landowners were permanently excluded from that area. The Indian and Arab landowners have lodged a vigorous protest to Sir Edward Grigg, the Governor of Kenya, against the unjust action of the Government, the text of which we publish in this issue. His Excellency, while sympathising with the protest, pleaded helplessness against the mandate of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, who, it is said, has discovered a legal obligation for this particular procedure. His Excellency's sympathies are, however, scarcely genuine, for ever since he landed in Kenya, Sir Edward Grigg has taken an attitude favourable to White settlers and repugnant to Indian interests. It also appears that it was the Kenya Government which first made representations to the Colonial Office to confirm the sales of these plots to Europeans, but they were turned down. So, further representations were made, and this time the Colonial Office had to kneel down.

Once the principle of segregation has been recognised, the Kenya Government will undoubtedly extend it to other parts of the Colony. In the face of this calculated insult to Indians, we do not know what the Government of India is doing. Apparently, it is afraid to make strong representations, and hence the case of Indians will have to go by default for want of proper championing. Already the White Paper of 1923 has been condemned by Indian opinion in unmeasured terms and any extension of the principle of segregation to township areas will only further exasperate Indians. It is hardly necessary to point out that there is a fundamental difference between the position of South Africa and Kenya. While the former is a fully self-governing dominion, the latter is a Crown Colony, for the government of which the Colonial Office is responsible to Parliament and in which every class of his Majesty's subjects should have equal rights. The Kenya Government should therefore see its way to realise the folly of its action. Impartial observers who have visited Kenya have borne testimony to the important position held by the Indian settlers there. Only the other day, Sir James Wilcocks, who was formerly in India, in describing his experiences in Kenya in the course of an article contributed to the London Evening News said: "To put the position shortly, as far as the past is concerned, the Indian has been resident in British East Africa for a much longer period of time than the Brition himself and has great claims to consideration; and has been an absolute necessity both to the Government and to the modern settler." He further says that the Indian is more far-sighted than the European shop-keeper, that he has no false pride and that he is always most obliging and sometimes long suffering. Sir James, however, has many points against the Indian. According to him, the Indians "have neither the education nor the physical will-power necessary to govern and guide the African races," and on this ground alone he claims the Highlands of Kenya for the White population. Another point which Sir James Wilcocks urges against the Indians is that the Indian population of Kenya is not truly representative of India, "as it is drawn mainly from Cutch and Kathiawar and contains a Mahomedan majority." How it will be possible to secure a population exactly representative of the various classes and communities inhabiting India, Sir James only knows. In spite of all this, Sir James is forced to admit "that the Indian trader is not only most useful, but in many cases is an indispensable person." The White settlers, however, are determined to make the position of the Indian in Kenya equally hot as in South Africa.

A TRIBUTE TO INDIANS IN EAST AFRICA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

It is with feelings of no inconsiderable satisfaction that one reads that at least in one part of East Africa the Indian is regarded as not only important, but positively indispensable. H. E. the Governor of the Uganda Protectorate welcomed, in the following words, the first representative of the Indian community to take his seat in the Legislative Council since the days of non-co-operation :—

"The first and agreeable task which falls to my lot on this occasion is to extend a cordial welcome to the new member who has taken the oath and his seat for the first time.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n809/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

It gives me, as I feel sure it gives all Honourable Members, much pleasure to see a representative of the Indian community on the Legislative Council of this Protectorate, in the activities and development of which that community has played, and is playing such a considerable part. Indeed I may say that the role of the Indian Community in Uganda's development has been not merely important, but positively indispensable. I refer not only to the larger commercial enterprises for which it is responsible, but also for its provision of the personnel necessary for many essential functions of Government. And I have been greatly impressed in my journeys throughout the Protectorate by the initiative and perseverance which has been shown by Indians in penetrating and establishing themselves in the most out of the way places, and thereby bringing about the extension of trade and commerce to a degree that could not have been achieved otherwise.

I am glad to take this opportunity of paying tribute to the valuable services rendered to Uganda by that enterprising and law-abiding community. I have observed with great satisfaction the cordial relations which subsist between the European and the Indian communities here and I feel that the presence on this Council of the Hon'ble Member is a step in the direction of still closer co-operation in the furtherance of the interests of the Protectorate as a whole."

This speech was made at the opening of the Legislative Council of Uganda and should be taken to heart not only in Uganda, but also in Tanganyika, Kenya and South Africa. It should lead to a wider recognition of the importance, the usefulness and value of Indians, in all these territories within the Empire.

Is it too much to hope that this generous tribute to the value of the Indian community, in Uganda at least, will be followed by a practical recognition of their importance in the body politic by increasing association of Indians in the Legislative Council? There are a hundred and one places where a little better spirit on the part of the Government and their officials would ameliorate the life and condition of the Indian. But why spoil the picture by a recital of same? What is needed is a change of heart.

Bombay, 28-6-1926. Yours etc., R. G. Saraiva.

TRANSVAAL IMMIGRANTS' APPEAL BOARD.

An Important Decision.

The following is the text of an important judgment delivered by the Transvaal Immigrants' Appeal Board in the case of an appeal heard before Mr. S. A. McCormick, Chairman, and Mr. P. J. H. Hofmeyr and Mr. B. W. Sprawson at Pretoria on the 6th May 1926:—

This is an appeal by an Indian woman named Hawa against an order by the Principal Immigration Officer declaring her to be a prohibited immigrant. She claims that she is entitled to remain in this country. Prohibition Notices were also served on her minor children Essop Adam and Mahomed Adam. The history of this matter is briefly this. Hawa was married in India by Mahomedan rites to one Adam Raja. Adam Raja has resided in the Transvaal for a number of years and is an exempted person. Hawa came to the Transvaal in 1920, being admitted by the Immigration Authorities on the ground that she was the lawful wife of Adam Raja, and she has lived here ever since. In 1924 a Cape coloured woman named Selina Smith sued Adam Raja in the Witwatersrand Local Division for damages for seduction and for the maintenance of a child born to her in 1918 and of which she alleged Adam Raja is the father. The action was decided by Justice Stratford in her favour. At this stage I may say that Mr. Ritch, who appeared for the appellant, stated that Adam Raja denied at the trial and still denies that he is the father of Selina Smith's child. As, however, that fact was definitely decided against him on trial and he was ordered to pay for the maintenance of the child I think this Board must regard that point as settled. When the Principal Immigration Officer became aware, in 1924, of the facts brought out at the trial he served a prohibition notice on appellant in December 1924. The appeal came on for hearing in September, 1925, but was postponed and in October 1925 Adam Raja married Hawa before the Magistrate of Johannesburg under the civil law of the Transvaal. The two children Essop Adam and Mahomed Adam were born in the Transvaal to Adam Raja and Hawa between 1918 and 1925.

The Immigration Officer bases his prohibition notice against Hawa and her two children on Section 3 (2) of Act 22 of 1914, which amended Section 5 (g) of the Immigrants Regulation Act No. 22 of 1913. It is true the notice purports to be issued under Section 4 (1) (b) of the latter Act, but this point was waived at the hearing of the appeal. It is because in 1920, when Hawa entered the Transvaal, her husband, an exempted person, had, in the Transvaal, offspring by another woman who is still living, that the Immigration Officer declares her to be a prohibited immigrant. The facts in regard to this offspring only came to light in 1924, and any argument based on the fact that Hawa was allowed to enter the country by the Immigration Officer in 1920 falls away when the provisions of Section 10 of Act 22 of 1913 are referred to. This Section says that no prohibited immigrant shall be deemed to have acquired a domicile in this country if he has been allowed to enter or remain owing to the fact having been undiscovered that he was such a prohibited immigrant. We have, then, to look at the position as it stood at the time Hawa entered the country. She could only enter at that time by virtue of the fact that she was the lawful wife of Adam Raja. "Wife" is defined in Section 3 (2) of Act 22 of 1914, which states in the proviso that no woman shall be deemed to be the wife of such exempted person if such exempted person has in any Province offspring by any other woman who is still living. Now ex facie that seems to conclude the matter because in 1920 he had in the Transvaal offspring by Selina Smith who was then still living, and who was alive in 1924. But Mr. Ritch argues that the words "any other woman" must be given a restricted meaning. He says the same meaning must be given to them as is given in the preceding paragraph i.e., a woman with whom there exists a union recognised as a marriage. If that were so then the only woman to whom subsection 2 (b) could apply would be one who had been divorced from an exempted person. The language of subsection 2 (b) is plain and its terms are very wide. It would have been easy for the Legislature to say that it was intended to apply to a divorced wife

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n810/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

of an Indian, but in the absence of any qualifying words it is difficult to see how the plain language of the sub-section can be whittled down as Mr. Ritch suggests. But the point is concluded by authority, and therefore it is unnecessary to speculate upon the reasons of the Legislature for inserting this provision. If the ordinary rules as to the interpretation of statutes are applied there does not seem to be any difficulty in deciding upon the meaning of the words used. In the case of Nagan Gunpat vs. the Principal Immigration Officer (1925) T. P. D., it was held that if an Indian had children in this country by a woman still living, even if it were a purely promiscuous union, his lawful wife could not enter this country because she is a prohibited immigrant, and the same applied to her children. This case followed the decision in Nandkor vs. Principal Immigration Officer (1917) C. P. D. 309. That case dealt with a divorce, but the reasoning applies equally well to the present case, and was adopted in the case of Nagan Gunpat which dealt with a case of promiscuous union. Applying the law in this way it is clear that Hawa is a prohibited immigrant, because, by reason of the exception in Section 3 (1) (b) of Act 22 of 1914, she is not a wife within the meaning of that Act. And it seems clear that the decision must also involve her children. "Child" is defined as the offspring of the exempted person and of a "wife" as defined by the Act, and if Hawa is not a "wife" as defined by the Act, then Mahomed Adam and Essop Adam are not "children" as defined by it, and are therefore prohibited immigrants. This decision may seem extremely harsh but we are bound by the provisions of the Act, which we have to administer.

That the decision presses very hardly on the innocent wife and children is unquestioned, but cannot influence our decision. Any relief sought for must be obtained from the Minister, who has a discretion in these cases.

The three appeals are dismissed. The two members concurred in this judgment.—Indian Opinion, Durban.

SAD PLIGHT OF IMMIGRANTS.

Last week an Associated Press message from Calcutta was received to the effect that about 100 Fiji immigrants who returned to India last year, were stranded in Calcutta and that these immigrants who hailed from the districts in the Punjab and the United Provinces, returned from Fiji last year and proceeded to their native places where they were subjected to social ostracism. It was also stated that they desired to go back to Fiji and had arrived in Calcutta, but were not in a position to pay their passage, having run through all they had earned during their sojourn in their native places. The Government and the Calcutta Port Police were, it was said, finding it difficult to help them beyond affording them shelter.

Immediately on receipt of this telegram Mr. J. B Petit, Hon. Secretary of the Imperial Indian Citizenship Association, telegraphed to Mr. S. K. Dutta in Calcutta for particulars regarding these immigrants. In reply Mr. Dutta telegraphed and wrote to the following effect:—

"I wish to say that I have got into touch with the Protector of Emigrants at last; he informs me that those persons desiring repatriation to the Colonies have passed out of his control and that recently an enquiry was made by the Magistrate of Alipore in whose jurisdiction Metiaburuz lies. A report has been sent to Government that conditions are not particularly bad, but most of the persons now at Metiaburuz are actually at work. But apparently there is some distress."

On receiving the telegram Mr. Waiz, Secretary of the Imperial Indian Citizenship Association, was sent to Calcutta to make enquiries personally and to help those who were in urgent need of help. Mr. Waiz telegraphs from Calcutta on the 13th instant:

"Just finished preliminary investigations. Problem much bigger than anticipated. Shall decide to-morrow. Probably will not recommend any one to be sent out at our expense. Have helped deserving indigent cases."

In an interview with the Associated Press Mr. Waiz said that there were about two thousand returned immigrants scattered all over Calcutta. Most of them were colonial born and came out to visit their motherland. Nothing would induce them to leave Calcutta. For one thing they had the bitter experience of social ostracism by their own people, and secondly they hoped that one day Government of India would send them out and if they were not in Calcutta they would be left behind. They were living a precarious life. If the Government of India were unable to help these unfortunate people the different colonial governments should be approached for securing free passages for them. They were all British subjects and their rights must be protected by the Government of the colony in which they were born and had spent the major portion of their lives.

The special Correspondent the India Daily Mail telegraphing to that paper gives some more information about the stranded immigrants from the Colonies: There are over 2,000 returned Indian emigrants scattered all over Calcutta. About 700 are living round about a district known as Garden Reach. They are from Fiji, Trinidad, Surinam and British Guiana. The desire to visit the motherland and the rumour that India had attained self-government were the two chief reasons which led them to leave their birth place, where they were certainly very happy. Their own people have ostracised them. So they are in Calcutta in the hope that one day somehow or other they will be sent out to those Colonies. Anywhere, Fiji or British Guiana, but out of India is their one cry and hope. Some of them have been in Calcutta in that hope for over five years. They all look famished. They have suffered very much, but the fortitude and cheerfulness with which they have borne it are remarkable. Their lot is at the lowest ebb of human misery. Most of them are living a precarious life by earning eight annas to a rupee a day. Their complaint is that the petty contractors under whom they work as labourers either do not pay them according to agreement or disappear without payment. It is very pathetic to see them begging to be sent out of India. The majority are colonial born and many of them do not know any Indian language. They are good-natured, hard-working and have esprit de corps which binds them together. None of them has so far been implicated in any theft case. If the Government of India for some reasons are unable to help them, different colonial governments have to be approached for securing free passages for them. They are British subjects and their rights must be protected. It is unfortunate that Kunwar Maharaj Singh does not include returned

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n811/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

emigrants in his scheme of emigration of five hundred families to British Guiana. The Government of India must intervene and take the initiative in helping these very unfortunate people.

RACIAL SEGREGATION IN KENYA.

Mombasa, May 15.

To

His Excellency, Sir Edward Grigg,

K.C.V.O.C.V.O., D.S O.

May it please Your Excellency,

On behalf of the India Association, Mombasa and the Coast Arab Association, Mombasa jointly, we the following signatories, respectfully beg to make the following representation to Your Excellency in regard to the proposed sale by the Government of 21 residential plots situated in areas bounded by Salim Road and Cliffe Avenues, Mombasa.

We understand that the sale of the said plots will be restricted to Europeans only and the non-Europeans will legally be prohibited from bidding for the said plots and from living in the buildings erected thereon.

We believe that there is no enactment in this country either directory or mandatory to the Land Department to restrict the sale of the said plots to Europeans only and we also believe that in view of the Non-Segregation Policy in Township areas decided upon by His Majesty's Government in July, 1923, the Land Department has no discretionary authority to adopt such a course. Even assuming the Land Department has such discretionary authority under the local Law to restrict the sale there are no grounds or justification, is our submission, for using the said authority in such arbitrary and inequitable manner.

We submit it will be highly inequitable and unjustifiable to debar Indian and Arab-landowners from buying and owning the said plots when these very landowners are shortly expected by the Government to part with their 20 per cent. land without compensation and to pay heavy taxes for the town planning of this island. We feel very strongly that there is no moral justification to prevent the non-European section of His Majesty's subjects from enjoying all proprietary rights in any area of this town.

We most respectfully beg to draw Your Excellency's attention to the fact that under the proposed policy of sale, we, who are British subjects, will be prohibited from taking part in the sales while some non-British subjects will enjoy all rights of sale under the directions of our own Government.

Lastly, the proposed restrictions on the sale, is our submission, will mean upsetting the emphatic decision of the Imperial Government regarding Non-Segregation in Townships. The Arabs and Indians resent very strongly this breach of the Non-Segregation Policy and consider that the proposed action is unfair, inequitable and unjustifiable.

We trust and earnestly hope that our submissions will favourably be considered by Your Excellency and the unjust and inequitable restrictions on sales will be abandoned.

We beg to remain,

Your Excellency's Most Obedient Servants,

(Sd.) 1. T. M. Jiwanjee (Indian landowner). 2. Rahid bin Sud (Arab landowner). 3. P. E. Jiwanjee (Indian landowner). 4. J. B. Pandya (Indian landowner and member of Kenya Legislative Council). 5. A. B. Patel (Indian barrister). 6. R. S. Nehra (Indian barrister and landowner, member on the Kenya Legislative Council) and 7. Hame bih Mahomed bin Issa.

Death of Kenya Indian Leader: The Bombay Chronicle correspondent wires from Mombasa that the Hon. Mr. M. A. Desai, the veteran leader of the Indian community there died on the 15th inst., at Bukoba of heart failure. Mombasa, Nairobi and other places observed complete hartal. Mr. M. A. Desai was a prominent leader of the Indian community in East Africa. He was one of the leading members of the Kenya Indian deputation that visited India and England in 1923.

The Colour Bar Bill: In the House of Commons Mr. Thurtle asked whether the representations made by the Indian Government to the South African Government as regards the effect of the Colour Bar Bill upon the settlement of questions would be discussed at the Conference of the two Governments. Lord Stanley replied that the Government of India would, doubtless, make every representation that they considered relevant, adding that Earl Winterton thought it would be more appropriate that any public statement should be made in the first instance by the Indian Government or by the South African Government.

Round Table Conference : A South African correspondent writes to the The Times of India on the authority of the Ministerial organ Die Burger that the Indian Government has accepted the Union Government's invitation to hold an Asiatic Conference in the Union and it will probably meet in December next. "To show its good faith" the Indian Government has invited the Union Government to send a delegation to India in order to enquire personally into the feeling there. The Union Government has not yet come to a decision in the matter but, the invitation having been given, it is absolutely essential that it should be accepted at the earliest moment. This view is strongly advocated by the Rand Daily Mail.

Crimes Against White Women in Kenya: Governor Grigg announced in the legislature on May 31st following a number of recent crimes of violence against white women by natives, that Government intended to tighten the law relating to the punishment of crimes, thus giving greater sense of security, and also enlist assistance of the Chiefs and headmen who themselves did not countenance such acts. A Reuter's message from Nairobi dated July 1st says that a special meeting of the Legislative Assembly passed that day an amending bill to the present Criminal Ordinance providing for the maximum sentence of death and a minimum of three years for rape, imprisonment for life for attempted rape and imprisonment for 14 years for assault and outrage of a woman's modesty. The power is also given to the courts to impose whipping in addition to the sentence. This amendment follows the South African and Rhodesian law brought in owing to the anxiety arising from a number of recent cases, but it will not be retrospective. Thus it will not affect one outstanding case which is now sub judice in which rape was committed on a poor old lady of 70 years of age. It remains to be seen, however, whether the law will equally apply to outrages against non-White women.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n812/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Technological Institute shall be opened. We appeal to the noble and generous people of India, the Hindus, the Parsees, the Sikhs, the Europeans, as well as all others to contribute liberally for the uplift of a race whose heroism, loyalty and truthfulness have won the admiration of the whole world.

All contributions may be remitted either to the General Secretary of the Gurkha League, Head-quarters, Dehra Dun, or to the Allahabad Bank Ltd., Dehra Dun, or the Branch Treasurers of the League which shall be most gratefully and publicly acknowledged. Total contributions up to and including the 30th June 1926 amount to Rs. 3169.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Das Anniversary: Glowing tributes were paid to the memory of the late Mr. C. R. Das on the occasion of the first anniversary of his death on Sunday last in several parts of the country. Bombay also held a representative meeting to commemorate in a fitting manner the memory of the departed leader.

Widow Re-marriage: A widow re-marriage took place on the 7th inst. at 7 p.m. at 116/1, Harrison Road, Madho Bhavan, Calcutta, under the auspices of the local Vidhava Vivaha Sahayak Sabha The bride and bridegroom belong to a respectable family of Bengal.

Widow Marriage at Ellore: At the public meeting of the Vysya Sangam of Ellore held in the Kanyakaparameswari Choultry at 5 p. m. on the 5th instant under the presidentship of Mr. Mothey Narayanarao, zamindar, it was resolved as follows: "We congratulate heartily those Vysyas of Ellore who in accordance with the 11th Vysya Conference at Vizagapatam have taken part in the Vysya widow re-marriage at Ellore on the 4th instant and have conducted it most successfully and we request them to extend their help hereafter in the same manner in such functions which are going to take place soon."—Swarajya, Madras.

Racial Arrogance: An interesting case of racial arrogance came up recently before a Bombay Magistrate. Three members of the crew of a steamer, all white men, made a row when a negro was appointed fireman, and refused to join the vessel. "We refuse to work with a negro," they said, "and we resent his appointment as fireman while heaps of white-men were unemployed." The Magistrate sentenced the crew to two weeks' rigorous imprisonment for disobedience of the Captain's order, but refrained from making any comment about the temper of the men which caused the disobedience.

A Devadasi's Gift: The Coimbatore correspondent of the Hindu writes:—The ceremony of inaugurating the Kausalya's charities was performed on the 6th instant at 8 a. m. at the residence of Srimati Kausalaya Ammal by Sir T. Sadasiva Aiyar. Among those present were Mr. R S. Sankara Aiyar, Sub-Judge, Rao Bahadur C. S. Rathnasabapathi Mudaliar and Mr. C. K. Subramania Mudaliar, B. A., F. M. U. Mr. M. Sambandha Mudaliar, B. A., B. L., read out the trust deed by which Srimati Kausalya Ammal had set apart two immovable properties worth Rs. 9,000 for charitable purposes. In inaugurating the charities for the Gita class and other purposes, Sir T. Sadasiva Aiyar said that the attitude of the "Avatars" such as Krishna and Christ towards the fallen sisters had been one of mercy, the only standard of acceptance being the presence of God consciousness and the desire to lead a pure life after due repentance. He then gave a lucid exposition from the Gita and the function came to a close with the distribution of pansupari.

Law and Social Reform: Thus the New India of Madras; That social reform is expedited and rendered effective in practice by law is borne out by the latest instance from the Punjab. In a village there, the orthodox Hindus would not allow the submerged classes—whom, however, they claimed to have "reclaimed"—to take water from the wells used by themselves. Naturally, the former resented this, and wished to assert their rights. The Magistrate of the place feared that this might result in a "breach of the peace," and consequently bound them over "to preserve peace and order". In appeal, Mr. Justice Harrison of the High Court quashed the order, on the ground that once the community had been reclaimed by the Hindus, it had automatically gained the right to use the same wells with the latter. The judgment ought to assist the movement, all over the country, among the submerged classes to enjoy the right of using public places. It would, also, we hope, help the conservative section of our countrymen who oppose the idea of our Legislatures composed of elected majorities, enacting laws for the reform of various social evils in the country, to revise its views.

Saharanpore Social Conference: The following were among the resolutions passed by the Saharanpore Social Conference held recently: (1) Condolence with Srimati Basanti Devi on the death of Syt. Chittaranjan Das and with the families of Lala Murli Lal Bhagat and Lala Jai Bhagwan Sarup, raises of Saharanpore; (2) the minimum marriageable age of Hindu boys and girls to be 21 and 14 years respectively; (3) widows to be remarried and, as far as possible, widowers to marry widows (An amendment to this resolution was proposed to the effect that a widower should marry none but a widow. A warm discussion followed and the amendment was lost); (4) the reform of the depressed classes by throwing open to them public wells, schools, societies and clubs; (5) women to have equal civil rights with men; (6) proper use of religious endowments and temple properties; (7) superstitious worship of non-Hindu gods and saints to be given up at mosques and tombs by Hindus; (8) establishment of a civic guard for service on public occasions and protection of people on emergencies; (9) readmission into Hindu society of such non-Hindus as had been outcasted or voluntarily desire joining Hindu society; and (10) discouragement of beggary and of Sadhus who live on Hindu charity, but render no service to Hindu society.

The Late Seth Maganlal Thakoradas Mody, C. I E.: In the death of Seth Maganlal Thakoredas Mody, C.I.E., who passed away on the 13th inst., at the age of 74 after a short illness the cotton trade of Bombay has lost one of its oldest and most respected members. Seth Maganlal Thakoredas Mody was a partner of Messrs. Narandas Rajaram and Co., the well-known cotton firm of which Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas is the Senior Partner. The passing of Mr. Mody will be a great personal loss to Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, who found in him not only a business partner, but a personal friend. Born in 1852, Mr. Mody passed the L. C. E. examination in 1882. But his taste led him from Engineering to business and he joined the firm of Messrs. Narandas Rajaram and Co., a year or two later. Here by dint of hard work and perseverance he rose steadily, till he was invited to be a partner in the firm. In his active years Mr. Mody was a well-known figure not only in the Cotton Trade, but also in the seed and grain Exchanges It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that the Surat Arts College, which is named after him, owed its very existence to Mr. Maganlal's princely munificence of Rs 2 lacs. It will be recalled that on February 1st, 1926, His Excellency Sir Leslie Wilson, the Governor of Bombay, unveiled the portrait of Seth Maganlal Thakoredas, and in doing so paid a high tribute to his generosity and public spirit. The deceased leaves behind him his younger brother Mr. Chhaganlal Thakoredas and two nephews Mr. M C. Modi and Dhirajlal Chhaganlal and a daughter.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n813/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

NEW BOOKS. Two Books of JUST PUBLISHED.

GREAT VALUE.

TALKS ON THE PATH OF OCCULTISM

is a companion volume to The Masters and the Path, and is intended for the daily use of aspirants. It consists of a commentary by Dr. Besant and Bishop Leadbeater jointly on At the Feet of the Master, The Voice of the Silence and Light on the Path, and is full of detailed explanation, advice and instruction.

Pages 969 with full index.
Price: Cloth and Gold Rs. 12.
Boards... Rs. 10.

THE GOLDEN BOOK OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY 1875—1925.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

Issued in Commemoration of the Jubilee of the Theosophical Society by its General Council.

Edited by C. Jinarajadasa, M. A., Vice-President of the T. S.

334 Illustrations and Index.
Cloth and Gold in Art Paper, pp. 421,
Price Rs. 12-8.
THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6/—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33/1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

Remain Up-to-date on Indian and World Affairs by reading

THE PEOPLE

A high class English Weekly Review
OF
Politics, Sociology, Science, Art and Letters edited by

LALA LAJPAT RAI.

Subscription Rates.

| | Inland. | Foreign. |
|---|---|---|
| Annual | Rs. 6-8 | Rs. 10. |
| Half Yearly | „ 3-8 | „ 6. |
| Quarterly | „ 2-0 | |

Mr. C. F. Andrews recently wrote:—

"I am so delighted to see how well The People keeps up its high standard and how deeply interesting it has always been to read while I was away. It is certainly now one of the very best weekly papers in the country. I have got my news from it, while I have been in South Africa, in a concentrated form."

For FREE Specimen copies apply to:—

The Manager, THE "PEOPLE",
Post Box 116, LAHORE.

BELL & CO. LTD.

Tel. Add. "PFAFF." } SOLE AGENTS FOR { Estd. 1921.

SEWING MACHINES.

STRONG: DURABLE: LIGHT:
Class 11 Family Hand Machine Rs. 90.
Class 31 Tailor Treadle Machine Rs. 140.
BRANCHES ALL OVER INDIA.
Same Price Everywhere.
V. V. THAKUR,
Managing Director,
CARNAC ROAD, DHOBI TALAO,
BOMBAY 2.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n814/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,86,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2032, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.
Branches : CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.
BRANCHES :—Baramati (District Poona).
Islampur (District Satara).
Kopergaon (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia (District West Khandesh).
Shirpur ( ,, ,, ).
Dohad (Panch Mahals).
Kalol ( ,, ,, ).
Malegaon (Dist. Nasik).
Dhondacha ( District West Khandesh ).
Parola ( District West Khandesh ).
Nira ( District Poona ).
AGENCY :—Kolhapur.
SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 9,50,950
Paid up ... Rs. 9,49,860

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTHA L. METHA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n815/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Lalubhai Samaldas, Esq., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B., (Chief Justice, Bhavnagar.)
Jaganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Major R. S. Parab, (Khangi Karbhari, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM: An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0. Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE: Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI: A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT: By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION? A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to Manager, The Indian Social Reformer, Navsar. Chambers, Fort, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, ... | ... | ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS , ... | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n816/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend 80 cts., and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

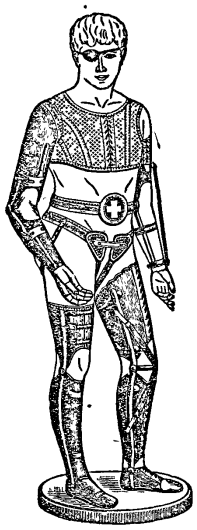
https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n817/mode/1up

realpatidar.com



RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY No. 4.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

( ONLY A FEW COPIES LEFT. )

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE, THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 14 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship." The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n818/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1926. No. 47

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice. I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Campaign against Leprosy.
World Migration Congress.
The Himalayan Custom of Rest.
Reforming Criminals in the Punjab.
Wise Advice to Viceroys.
The S. African Conference.
Lord Irwin on "Communal Conflicts."
The Social Evil in Bombay.
The Monks of India.
Kindness to Animals.
Random Jottings.
The Salvation Army.
Reform among Devadasis.
International Woman's Suffrage Alliance Congress, Paris.
Will Asia become Christian?
A Juvenile Court for Bombay City.
Tuberculosis and Purdah.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Campaign against Leprosy: The British Empire Leprosy Relief Association deserves the earnest support of all in its ruthless campaign against leprosy. Undoubtedly, leprosy is the most terrible of all the diseases which afflict humanity. There are at the lowest computation 300,000 lepers in India and other British possessions, but the real number is probably greater. The Census returns do not accurately represent the number of lepers, owing to the fact that many who are in fact lepers try to conceal their disease from public notice. Leprosy was long regarded as incurable, but recent researches have led to the discovery of methods of treatment which, if given at a sufficiently early stage, cause the disappearance of all signs of the disease. The British Empire Leprosy Relief Association has been formed with the avowed object of stamping out leprosy from all countries over which the British flag flies, and it is gratifying to see that it has received support from the highest quarters. The Prince of Wales, the Patron of the Association, is taking the greatest interest in the campaign against leprosy. During the year 1925, detailed information has been collected regarding the prevalence of leprosy in all parts of the Empire and the best way of dealing with it, having regard to varying local conditions. In addition, pamphlets and books on the subject have been published. Feeling encouraged by favourable reports from America where as nearly as 50 per cent of the cases admitted to the Asylums have been discharged recovered, the Association hopes to launch the campaign in right earnest as soon as funds permit. The Association is doing all in its power to encourage the formation of local branches in all parts of the Empire where leprosy is prevalent. Mr. Oldrieve was deputed to India to assist in the formation of the Indian branch and it is encouraging to find that a sum of over £40,000 has been collected for the work in India.

World Migration Congress: The World Migration Congress which held its sittings in London from June 22-25 was the first of its kind. It was convened by the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Socialist International. 17 European and 6 overseas countries were represented in it. India was represented by Lala Lajpat Rai and two others. Owing largely to the fact that the Congress was not held under Government auspices, it has not attracted much notice, but it has drawn attention to some outstanding problems relating to emigration. The questions which the Congress had to consider were of momentous importance. The great War produced on its wake great unemployment and millions of workers were compelled to emigrate in search of work. But difficulties were placed in the way of immigrants. The United States of America, for instance, closed its doors to Europe with the result that Italy and Poland found it difficult to dispose of their surplus population. Then, again, there were differences of opinion, status and customs between the local and immigrant workers and, in the interests of labour, it was advisable to bring about the mingling of various workers in every country. There was further the danger of groups emigrating to new countries adhering rigidly to their own forms of living and refusing to mingle with the native population, often ending in bitter racial antagonism and wars. To these and other problems the Migration Congress had to offer solutions. Under ideal conditions, the population of the world will be distributed on a scientific basis. Thus, providing the climate, soil and other conditions favoured, the country which is congested will send its surplus population to the country which is sparsely populated. But this is very far from being the case at present. Countries which can afford to take in some more population are closing their doors against other countries on purely political grounds. The action of the United States of America, Canada and Australia in slamming their doors on the overflowing population of Japan, India and China, is fraught with the gravest danger to the peace of the world. Lala Lajpat Rai rightly pointed out at the Congress that the migration policy now pursued by the European nations would inevitably lead to a split between the white and coloured races. Lala Lajpat Rai also gave a well-merited warning to the European delegates that the Asiatic peoples demanded as much freedom to move about in the world as the people of Western countries and that the policy of segregation and exclusion of coloured races, which the Whites are attempting in South Africa, would strike direct at the international solidarity of labour which they professed to be seeking. Judged by its practical results, however, the Congress cannot be pronounced a success. It has failed to come to grips with the racial and colour factors governing emigration. It has passed a number of resolutions chief among which was one demanding a study of the emigration problem with reference to social, economic, racial and colour factors affecting it. The resolution that purely political reasons should not interfere with freedom of migration, that economic conditions alone should weigh when decisions are being made, and that only in exceptional circumstances other factors should influence the decisions, did not even

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n819/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

find favour with the Congress. But, it is something that the majority of the delegates present (with the exception of those from Australia and Canada) favoured the principle of free emigration from one country to another without any distinction of race or colour. South Africa was not represented at the Congress, but we have no doubt that the South African delegates would have taken the same view as their Canadian and Australian colleagues.

The Himalayan Custom of Reet: We publish in our news columns the proceedings of the Conference of Chiefs of Simla Hill States which recently met at Simla under the presidentship of Col. Coldstream, the Deputy Commissioner of Simla, who is also the Superintendent of the Hill States. It is a significant sign of the times that the Hill States are realising the need for the abolition of absurd social customs prevailing in their midst, and it is gratifying to note that Government is also in sympathy with it. The abolition of the curious custom of Reet was one of the subjects discussed at the Conference. We have referred in the past to this cruel custom which is nothing more than a form of "contract marriage." No ritual or ceremony attaches to it, and it is contracted by the mere payment of a mony-price, varying from Rs. 100 to Rs. 2,000, to the parent or guardian of a girl, if unmarried, and to the husband, if married. In the latter case the contract also functions as a divorce from the former husband. Where marriage ties are so very loose, it is no wonder that domestic felicity and peace is sadly lacking. Several attempts have been made by social workers to bring home to the people the vices and evil effects of this custom. The Himalayan Vidiya Parabhandani Sabha has been working much in this direction by organising meetings etc. But the evil shows no signs of abating. The Conference finally appointed a sub-committee of Chiefs and representatives of the States to go into the question fully and chalk out a scheme for the gradual abolition of the practice. While we appreciate the efficacy of propaganda for educating public opinion against the evil, we would urge that nothing but a radical legislation abolishing the evil can put an end to it. We are glad to see that the Conference at its next meeting is also to consider the question of forced labour which prevails in many States from time immemorial.

Reforming Criminals in the Punjab: No less than 150,000 persons in the Punjab Province are classed as belonging to criminal tribes. The term "criminal tribe" means tribes or gangs who make their livelihood by the commission of systematic offences against society. Economic reasons are principally responsible for these tribes becoming criminal. In some cases persons who were made outcasts owing to social and moral crimes adopted a nomadic and more or less criminal life, and gradually the descendants of these people developed into wandering criminal tribes. As early as 1856, the Punjab Government tried to check the activities of the criminal tribes who had become a pest to the Province. But it was not until 1913-14 that thorough investigations were completed and a definite and strong policy laid down by the Criminal Tribe Act of 1911. A general round-up was arranged and resulted in the registration and subsequent restriction of 33,000 male adults belonging to these tribes, including 12,000 members of the wandering tribes. Definite schemes for the reformation and reclamation of these tribes were inaugurated at an initial outlay of 3½ lakhs and a recurring expenditure of 2½ lakhs. The following account from a correspondent of the Sunday Times, Lahore, of the work done by the Salvation Army in the reclamation and reformation of the tribes in the Settlements under its charge will be read with much interest: "The first and most important part of the institutional programme is to teach the people a means of honest livelihood. For this purpose farming, poultry keeping, spinning, weaving, forestry, carpentry, etc., are taught in the Settlements. With a view to imposing habits of thrift and economy, Co-operative Supply and Credit Societies have been established, and have achieved marked success, the net savings of men, who shortly before lived by theft and dacoities alone, now totalling approximately Rs. 75,000. Naturally the greatest success in the Reclamation Settlements is achieved among children. But even among the adults a few months' residence makes a great change for the better. The results of ten years of reclamation work show that the wandering criminal tribes have ceased to exist as such, and there has been a remarkable decrease in crime in the Punjab. The life of the inmates of the Settlements has been completely revolutionised. They settle down peacefully, enjoy sports and holidays and celebrate their marriages and religious festivals in the orthodox manner."

Wise Advice to Viceroys: We cordially endorse the wise advice which Mrs. I. J. Pitt, who understands India as only a devoted woman can, offers to Viceroys and Governors in her article on "Kindness to Animals" which we publish to-day. It should be brought home, she writes, to Viceroys and Royal Visitors to India that "it is not a sine qua non to attainment of popularity and the country's good-will, that they must invariably spend some of their time in killing something. Yet I believe that in more than one case this is the reason they do it, misguided as they are by thinking it a customary pastime of the Ruling Princes and not having comprehended that it would be better to conciliate the sentiment of the greater part of the people of India to which the wanton destruction of life for mere pastime is extremely abhorrent" In the programme of Lord Irwin's short stay in Poona, two mornings are given up for "hunting" and one afternoon to attending the horse races "in State." We think that they could be utilised to better purpose.

The South African Conference: It has been announced that the Round Table Conference is to meet at Pretoria in December next. It is also understood that a Union Deputation is to visit India before the Conference meets to acquaint itself with the state of feeling in India. The Deputation, we have no doubt, will find how Indians feel strongly over the unjust treatment meted out to their country-men overseas. Meanwhile, however, the indiscreet utterance of one of the responsible Ministers of the Union makes us sceptical about the results of the Conference. Mr. Boydell, Minister for Labour, is reported to have said at a meeting of the Labour Party "that it has been made plain to the Indian Government that the Union Government has no intention of departing from its expressed principles on the Asiatic question, but that it will be willing to consider any suggestions from the Indian Government which might ameliorate details in the application of those principles." If this is really the case, we do not see what useful purpose will be served by the Government of India wasting its time, energy and money over a fruitless Conference. It would be also interesting to know whether the Government of India has accepted the humiliating condition imposed by the Union Government.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n820/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JULY 24, 1926.

LORD IRWIN ON COMMUNAL CONFLICTS.

On the eve of starting on his first tour since assuming charge of the Viceroyalty, Lord Irwin, in responding to the toast of his health at a banquet given in his honour by the Chelmsford Club, made an important speech. In it, His Excellency dwelt on the seriousness of the situation created by the tension in Hindu-Mahomedan relations and exhorted the leaders of both communities for the good name of religion to exert themselves to the utmost in order to promote harmonious co-operation between the two communities. Earnestness and sincerity marked every sentence in this remarkable speech which has created a profound impression in the country. Lord Irwin made it clear that he does not intend to be content with the passive role of a giver of good advice, much less that of a critical spectator of our struggles, but that he means to take the lead himself in bringing about a better state of feeling between the two communities. He referred to the Unity Conference held at Delhi in October 1923 and observed that its failure was due to the lack of sufficient previous preparation of the mental atmosphere favourable to unity. The bitter results of strife have since then amply showed themselves and, it may be, that if Lord Irwin calls another Conference, as he said he might, he will find the ground more ready to receive the seeds of union and friendship between Hindus and Mussalmans. His Excellency based his faith in the achievement of this desirable and much-desired result on the fact that India in the past has shown herself capable of assimilating very varied elements among her people. Has this power of assimilation become weaker or stronger under British rule? Lord Irwin indignantly repudiated the charge that British officials viewed, if not with favour at least with indifference, the growth of antagonism between the two communities and that they had not always exerted themselves energetically to put down outbreaks of violence. We fully believe that officials have not consciously failed in their duty in either of these respects. At the same time, we are not able to adduce any evidence of their having actively attempted anything by way of promoting intercommunal unity. This, indeed, is the natural consequence of a conception of government in which the maintenance of peace and order plays a more important place than the creation in the people of the qualities which by increasing their capacity for self-government correspondingly reduce their tendencies to disunion and communal conflict.

Lord Irwin referred to the complaint that the introduction of communal electorates has led to the accentuation of communal differences and were responsible for the communal conflicts. His Excellency did not contest this charge, but pointed out that these electorates were incorporated in the recent Reform scheme with the unanimous support of all political parties in the country. This is quite true, but there has been a complete change of opinion even among those who were principals or parties to the Lucknow Compact, which they now publicly condemn as a great mistake. Lord Irwin said that the statutory Royal Commission which will sit in a year or two to consider the future of constitutional reforms will have to decide upon the question of communal representation, but declared on behalf of his Government that they would not allow the principle to be extended beyond the point where it rested at present pending the report of that Commission. This can only mean that the communal considerations will not be allowed to enter into the composition of and recruitment for the Services under the Government of India. This, we think, will be no easy matter, because the largest number of appointments to the Public Services is made by Provincial Governments which, under the influence of the communally recruited Legislative Councils, are being pressed hard to lay down communal preferences and restrictions not only in making appointments but even in making promotions in the Services. And several of them have more or less frankly yielded to the pressure. In fact, it is difficult to see how they can do otherwise, as they have to carry on the administration with the help of a majority in the Legislative Councils and they can secure it in most of the Councils only by satisfying the communal claims of members who have been sent to the Council with the object of putting forward these claims with most effect. The original mistake of recognising communities as electoral units, was made by Lord Minto and, we are afraid, it will have to work out its worst consequences before the communities which enjoy a separate suffrage voluntarily agree to relinquish it. The time for this is perhaps not so far distant as may be thought from appearances. The Sikhs have already publicly expressed their opinions formed from their experience of the past six years, of the futility of communal electorates, and another six years may bring the same truth home to Indian Mahomedans also. At present, the latter are deeply attached to communal electorates which they regard as the palladium of their communal interests. Violent attacks upon them only rouse them to greater belief in them. There is no doubt that communal electorates are largely responsible for giving undue prominence in the Legislatures and outside to the communal aspect of public questions. Even when there is naturally no such aspect, the communal representative has to invent one to every question to justify his existence. In the pre-Minto-Morley Reform days, a Hindu or Mahomedan representative would be almost ashamed to stress the communal aspect of any public question. Nowadays, one has to apologise for calling attention to the national as superior to the sectional view. This is the direct result of basing the franchise on communities. It was a great mistake, but it will be a greater mistake still to think of rectifying it now by a stroke of the pen. We must let the mistake be, meanwhile creating the impulses which will by their natural operation undermine the belief in them.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n821/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE SOCIAL EVIL IN BOMBAY.

To anyone who is truly concerned about the progress of mankind, it cannot but be a matter of grave regret that so large a portion of the intelligent classes regard the most important questions of the day as matters with which they have absolutely no interest. The problem of social evil in Bombay demands all the attention that the public can bestow on it. And yet there are people who either deliberately refuse to think about the matter for fear of disturbing their equanimity or imagine that the problem will cease to press for solution if it is persistently ignored. The only bodies that feel it incumbent on them to do their bit towards fighting this crying evil in the heart of the City are the League of Mercy and the Bombay Vigilance Association. Ceaseless in her efforts to awaken the conscience of the people to the needs of this evil, Miss Katherine M. Davis of the League of Mercy has been delivering lectures to bring home to them the extent of this disease eating into the vitals of society. In a recent lecture, at the very outset, she emphasised the need for a radical change in the angle of vision of the citizens of Bombay if they were to tackle the problem successfully. She indicated the lines on which those who aimed at social purity and social hygiene should work and pointed out that they should not merely be content to scotch the evil but kill it outright, which can only be done by discovering the causes of the evil and seeking remedies to eradicate them. All the efforts made to rid society of this vice will be of no avail unless, as Miss Davis said, a new standard of morality is set up, which would be the same for men and women.

Prostitution as a social institution involves for the women who are forced into it the most unspeakable degradation. One cannot help echoing the words of a great writer on this subject who says that as long as it is possible to purchase the use of women's bodies by the payment of certain wretched coins of gold, silver or even copper, our much-vaunted civilisation is, in sexual matters, no better than a beautiful painted scene, behind which are concealed foulness and crime.

It behoves the State which represents this civilisation to see that none of its subjects sells her soul for material gain. Miss Davis enumerates the various ways in which the State could effectively help, but she has nothing but condemnation for the system of segregated toleration adopted by the Government of Bombay, as being based on the wrong principle that vice of this nature could be prevented by concentrating it in particular localities. There is much force in her objection to this system. Social workers in England and on the Continent have tried this system and found it wanting. They discovered that to adopt segregation was to establish a prostitution market. "It requires no profound study or prolonged consideration to ascertain that segregation, whether of sheep in a market or of prostitutes in their allotted pens, stimulates the trade and leads to increased business; and when the market is scattered, the traders will seek incessantly to establish another, but it will usually be a less advantageous one, and it will always have the disadvantage that belongs to a market, that being in its essence public, either sectionally or to all, its existence cannot long remain unknown." Persistent scattering tends to make it descend to a more and more obscure level where bereft of its glamour and reduced to the mean and contemptible, the vicious traffic in humanity will altogether disappear.

A superficial glance at the figures shows that Bombay if left to itself threatens to surpass some of the most notorious cities in Europe so far as this vice is concerned. Those engaged in private prostitution are said by far to outnumber those openly professing it. When it is an open secret that Turkish baths and pleasure haunts exist for nefarious purposes, it stands to reason that they should not be allowed to ply their trade with impunity.

Social work among these classes of women should assume the form of social therapeutics. It is not enough to try to reform them, they must be made to realise what is good for them and thus their co-operation must be secured. This is the method adopted in some parts of Madras with much success.

THE MONKS OF INDIA.

( By Mr. S. K. Jain. )

How the monks serve humanity, is a question which engages our thoughtful attention. Some say they are malingerers and parasites. Some contend that great services have been rendered to mankind only by them, and that the community cannot live exclusively without their help and guide. While great thinkers like Mrs. Rhys Davids, D. Litt., call these bruised and emaciated bodies as so many parasites on the working community, it rouses man from his deep slumber and sets his thinking faculties in motion. Her remark is pretty just if we see things as they stand. We have no quarrel with the monks or ascetics, but the fact cannot be denied. The editor of the Jaina Gazette disagrees with her in her views about the ascetics. This disagreement is due purely to a misunderstanding of her opinion. His analogy of Mahavira and Gautama Buddha, though it is on all fours, is contradictory to what she means. Her remark applies to the world of monks as it is and not as it was or as we imagine it to be. I cannot conceive of any man who would employ such wild terms as parasites and malingerers to great teachers like Lord Mahavira, Buddha, Christ and Mahommed to whom the great religions of India owe their origin. How happy the world would be, and how non-injury would have gained supremacy over this world, if these homeless monks of to-day would follow the right path chalked out by these prophets! But it is not so. The world of these folk-fed monks is topsy-turvey. The institution of monks has fallen into degradation. It admits all. It needs no qualifications save a piece of yellow loin cloth and bald head. The aim of these homeless wanderers is nothing but the worship of the belly-god and not service to humanity as monks of yore did. It requires a thorough overhauling. Instead of bringing amity between the diverse religions, these monks, in several instances, create discord and disunion. Why then think of their service to humanity!

Why is this battalion of sanyasins and fakirs in India? The causes are not far to seek. The dumping poverty, the misplaced generosity of the people, the misconception of the institution of ascetics and the peculiar influence of the religions of India on the people are the sources. Though it pains me on the one hand to mention the above causes which have led many people in India to take the life of an ascetic, there is pleasure and hope on the other hand to see many whose aim is not only to attain salvation but to elevate the ignorant and to establish the religion of Ahimsa on earth.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n822/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

We know many naked Munis do penance even to-day in the jungles and mountains of India. Their aim is self-realisation. They know that humanity suffers from the karmic bondage and that bliss lies in the annihilation of this bondage. Knowing as they do the sufferings of humanity, how do they help their brothermen and sub-human beings to free themselves from the sufferings? They are a living example of the Practical Path to salvation. We cannot call these noble souls a burden to community, for they rarely come and mingle with the people. But however severe and pure might be their penance and however quick their salvation might be, they must not be indifferent to the ignorant brotherman who falls down in the ditch of sin every day for want of light and to the innumerable animals that are being slaughtered without anybody to save them from the butcher's knife.

What about the monks of the Mutt? They are like the Popes of Rome in mediaeval times. They are autocratic. They live in palatial buildings and enjoy a life enviable even to Princes and Maharajas. To them the miseries of humanity and the sub-human beings are unknown. If the taxes of Government are heavy, those of the monks are no less heavy. They are so painstaking in the sense that they least take steps to settle even petty disputes, religious or otherwise, among the people. They waste people's money in building temples—an institution which has fallen into decadence and degradation. The Scheme suits, Government intervention even in matters religious, and the appointment of Receivers, reflect in all their nakedness the cardinal blunder of these monks of the Mutt and the criminal mismanagement of these institutions. Malingerers and parasites are terms which are too mild for them.

Then there are the threatening faquirs! About them words are too poor a medium to discuss with the readers. They ask for alms and, if we do not give for very good reasons or if we cannot afford to pay, they threaten us with disease and death. They make the air sulphurous, injure their hands and feet with knife and break their heads with the result that blood flows from every part of their body. A spectacle too horrible and revolting to look at!

There is another class of sanyasis who play upon the avarice of man. They boast themselves to be possessed of miraculous powers of converting iron into gold, of granting children to the childless, of curing incurable diseases by mere look and of various other nonsenses which man, it is regrettable, believes and falls in the deceptive net prepared for them by these sycophants. They must be shunned as something unworthy to breathe nature's atmosphere. It is an unpardonable sin to help these white liars.

As if the idlers in India are not enough, there is a type of sanyasis whose only work is to eat and sleep. It is a fact that these sadhus who are expected to be teatotallers and pure vegetarians, in this later and more civilised age, love the smell of the burnt flesh. The savoury odours of meat are a balm to their gastral appetites.

This is the position of the various types of sanyasis in India. How can they serve humanity and what methods have we to suggest to be worked out? They must be organised after the model of Ramakrishna Paramahamsa's Mutt. They must equip themselves with sound knowledge in the religion of 'Non-injury.' Knowledge of medicine is imperative even as the Buddhist monks of yore were moving physicians and doctors. Service to brothermen and sub-human beings must be their sole aim.

It is wrong to believe that salvation lies only in doing penance in secluded places in forests and caves, leaving man and other lower beings to suffer. Non-injury is the highest religion, and those who practise it, therefore, are alone entitled to obtain Nirvana, for they shall speedily acquire the divine grace that shall put an end to their transmigration.

They must go about, town after town, village after village, preaching to man the doctrine of Ahimsa and drawing his attention to the truth that man breaks the laws of nature by eating flesh-food and thus brings ruin not only to his physical well-being but buries himself into the unfathomable depths of horrible hell. Wherever there is human suffering such as plague and pestilence, floods and famine, these good samaritans must run to the spot and bring relief to the suffering humanity.

Killing must be completely stopped, for there is neither Divine warrant nor God's command to slay. Killing is only a mandate of stomach lust but never a God's command.

Every slaughter house must be visited in season and out of season by these messengers of peace in order to wean the buyers and the butchers away from their hellish practice.

Then there is the 'Drink Crave'. The inflammatory nature of flesh-meat is now generally recognised by the medical profession; and the close connection between its use and the drink habit has been unmistakably traced and exposed. It is imperative, therefore, to stop the drink evil, and the sanyasis must preach to the drinkers and the dealers the evils of drink and flesh-eating.

If such be the noble service of every monk or ascetic, sanyasi or faquir, man would be subject to very few evils, vice would yield place to virtue, Non-injury would reign supreme, and the world would acclaim the jubilant victory of these good samaritans who would be crowned with divine grace.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

(By Mrs. I. J. Pitt.)

Under this heading appeared an article in your edition of June 5th by Mr. S. K. Jain. This was a plea for recognition of the "rights" of animals—a condemnation of cruel practices of barbarity masquerading under the term "sport", ending

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n823/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

with the hope that there is an awakening to the necessity of putting an end to these iniquities. So strongly am I at one with him, that I am constrained to add some further remarks on the subject.

The lover of animals, those to whom the animal's helplessness and innocence make so powerful an appeal, and especially those who have been blessed with the friendship of animals, who know how love can bring out the most divine qualities in these "our little brothers," as St. Francis of Assisi called them, will not easily consent to name them the "lower creation," and towards such, cruelty appears even among the most heinous of crimes, for which humanity will have to pay "to the uttermost farthing."

That true Mahatma, King Asoka, realized this, and animals had "rights" in his day, but, alas, his great influence died away, and there seems to have been no awakening since in India to a sense of duty towards these lowly creatures of God.

But let us thank the Father Who takes cognizance of "every sparrow that falleth to the ground," that noble souls are now "up and doing," such as members of the Deccan Humanitarian League (and others as referred to lately in an article on the same subject in your paper) of which I happen to know individual workers, and which has a large part of its activities devoted to Animal Protection. These are giving not only their money, but their life and strength, to save animals from all kinds of cruelty, especially in the wholesale and simply ghastly slaughter which still goes on at some religious, (save the mark!) festivals and animal sacrifices to village goddesses, as investigated by Bishop Whitehead in his book on the "Worship of village goddesses in South India."

Those whose hearts are wrung in face of cruelty by their feeling of powerlessness to do anything, can set to reflect that they may surely do a great deal by speaking and teaching on the subject amongst those around them, who allow cruel acts, and especially neglect of animals, to pass unnoticed, or are guilty themselves, not from innate hardness or depravity, but only from the blindness of ignorance. And indeed it should be easy to bring light to those who have inherent in them, though it may be lying dormant, a conviction of the sacredness of all life, and the doctrine of ahimsa.

Much more could be done also if it were generally known that even in places where there is no R. S. P. C. A. branch, a perpetrator of cruelty to animals can be reported to the Police, by anyone with a witness, and prosecuted before a Magistrate. I have known advantage taken of this successfully, the Indian and English Magistrates taking up the case with alacrity, glad of the opportunity to bring home the lesson.

Is it not that the first thing is to educate the public opinion, which would receive its training and find its voice in the Press? In this way, too, by a strong Press representation, it might be brought home to our Viceroys and Royal visitors, that it is not a 'sine qua non" to attainment of popularity and the country's good will, that they must invariably spend some of their time in killing something. Yet I believe that in more than one case this is the reason they do it, misguided as they are by thinking it a customary pastime of the Ruling Princes and not having comprehended that it would be better to conciliate the sentiment of the greater part of the people of India to which the wanton destruction of life for mere pastime is extremely abhorrent.

If people "in high places" discontinued this relic of barbarism it would no doubt discourage the desire of emulation or "going one better" which would seem to be, from Mr. Jain's account, lamentably prevalent amongst some Maharajahs and Rajahs.

RANDOM JOTTINGS.

(By Mr. K. T. Dange).

During their leisure, the lower classes of people take pleasure in visiting nautch and tamasha theatres, haunting the quarters of low class of prostitutes and drinking. Some of the men of the labouring classes have no houses to sleep in and spend their time at night in wandering or in lying down on the corners of streets or on the verandhas of houses or shops. At day-break they get up and purchase some bread at the bread-shop and go to work. Those who are a bit well-to-do and economical, hire a room and bring their families and stay in the small and ill-ventilated places like huddled animals. Naturally the home life of the village from which they come is lost and forces of love and morality dwindle. All the members of the family work and all earn money, but nothing is left with them on the next day. Pathan money-lenders, Marwadis, Tamashas, nautches, races, gambling, prostitutes and hundreds of other enemies which the city life has created do not allow them sufficient food or clothes or any other necessaries of life. Government is always keen on proscribing seditious publications, lectures, or actions; but they never take care of the well-being and preservation of the morality of the lower classes. The objectionable songs and actions which are played and acted upon in Tamasha and nautch theatres are more harmful than the propaganda of Bolsheviks. They defile the conscience of the masses and the soundness of society. Many women of the lower classes are trained for becoming good nautch girls or prostitutes and upon their earnings hundreds of people who are the dregs of the society live. Legal restrictions are therefore urgently required to put a stop to tamasha plays and nautches and any approach to the abuse should be severely punished.

* * * *

Cinema pictures are constantly seen by the masses and the scenes of daring robberies, love intrigues and cunning thefts make a permanent impression on the audience. Dramas are at present very much badly written. Many third class writers without any originality or high ideals write dramas for the sake of money, but they do not know what responsibility they take upon themselves by writing vicious thoughts, spreading them like infectious germs in the society. The taste of the society has lost its purity and the manners of life are being changed by the dramas and cinemas. People talk nowadays in a dramatic politeness without any stuff. The poor imitate the rich, the lower classes

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n824/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

imitate the higher classes and a careful observer will not fail to observe that Hindu society is day by day losing ground.

* * * * *

Our public institutions like Municipalities and Local Boards are filled up with men seeking their own interest. Generally masses are never truly represented. Naturally, therefore, the gullies and by-lanes in which the poor people reside are the worst in sanitation. They are ill-lighted, ill-dusted, and ill-ventilated. Conservancy arrangements are not generally good and the poor people suffer always from cholera and other fevers. Our Indian doctors are far behind the European medical men. They lack sympathy and are stone-hearted, looking more to their fees than to their patients. They can scarcely be approached by the poor people owing to their exorbitant fees and chilly touch-me-not behaviour. So the masses in the city die groaning, under sickness, debt and poverty.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In the editorial notes in your issue of the 10th inst., under the heading, "The Salvation Army," you state, in the last sentence, that you think that the Salvation Army has, in its methods, avoided some of the mistakes of other Missions.

Being a great admirer not only of the Salvation Army but of other Missions as well, I would like to know what you consider to be the "mistakes of the Missions," so that your charge might be examined.

Jamshedpur, Yours etc.,
13.7.26. C. SUNDRIER.

[ The "denationalising" tendencies of other Missions have been avoided at least in externals by the Salvation Army—Ed. I. S. R. ]

REFORM AMONG DEVADASIS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I am a subscriber of the Indian Social Reformer. I have read in the paper about the Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras.

I should be very thankful to you if you could kindly give me some informations (or inform me about some literature) about 1. Devadasis, the origin of this custom and to what time it dates back. 2. Has something been done (besides Hindu Yuvati Saranalayam, Madras,) to save such girls? 3. Is there a movement amongst the Devadasis to escape from this kind of life?

In Mayavaram, the caste in which prostitution is permitted is called "Melakarer," because the men are the musicians (Melam=drum in Tamil).

This caste held some years ago in a village 3 miles off from Mayavaram a meeting, in which the resolution was taken not to let their girls live a bad life in future, but to give them a good education. Female Secretaries were travelling about, giving lectures and trying to enlist members. Now, I should like to know if such a movement is going on also in other parts of India.

I should be very thankful to get some informations according to your convenience.

Swedish Mission, Mayavaram, Yours etc.,
(Madras Presy). MISS E. VON GERNET.
12th July, 1926.

[ Devadasis originally were "nuns" who dedicated themselves to the service of the Deity. As in other countries, the monastic ideal came to be lost sight of. There are movements in several places for reclaiming this class, but no single organised attempt as yet—Ed. I. S. R. ]

INTERNATIONAL WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE ALLIANCE CONGRESS, PARIS.

The tenth session of the Congress fixed to take place from 30th May to 6th June, was held in the buildings of the Sorbonne University, Paris. The arrangements for the delegates, who came from no less than 25 different countries all over the world, were excellent.

The Congress was opened by the President of France, Monsr. Herriot. Mrs. Corbett Ashby of England was the President.

The following are the Indian delegates :—Mrs. Monet, Dr. Mrs. Muthulakshmi, Mrs. Swaminathan, Mrs. Lakshmi Pathi, Mrs. Sen and Mrs. Bari.

The following were the main subjects that were considered :

An equal moral standard and the fight against traffic in women. Like conditions of work for men and women, Family Endowment, Nationality of married women, Position of the unmarried mother and her child, Women in the Diplomatic Services, Women Police, The methods of work of the woman voter, Methods of work in countries where women have not yet got the Franchise, Women and the League of Nations.

The subjects were divided into five groups, each of which was handled by a Committee, having a President. Judged by a perusal of the printed Report with which is appended a questionnaire and replies thereto, of one of these Committees, one is struck with the high standard of culture, the thorough grasp of the subject and the keen interest the office-bearers took in arriving at the means for the amelioration of the condition of women at large. The publications which reveal a systematic search after truth are highly useful to all interested in the emancipation of women.

The following are among the resolutions that were passed in connection with the subject of equal moral standards and against the traffic in women.

(1) That all laws, measures, or regulations dealing with public morals shall be so framed as not to differentiate between the sexes either in wording or in enforcement. (2) That public health measures for combatting venereal diseases shall be the same for men and women, in wording and in enforcement. (3) That there shall be no special laws or regulations against prostitutes as such. (4) That the International Suffrage Alliance condemns all systems of State regementation of prostitution under which prostitutes are licensed or registered and subjected to periodic compulsory medical examination. It further condemns the system of maisons tolerees and declares all these measures to be morally indefensible, medically useless, and socially pernicious, leading to the corruption of youth and the traffic of women. (5) That morals police shall be abolished. (6) That in all questions of public morals the functions of the police and the functions of the health authorities shall be absolutely separate. (7) That stricter measures, national or international, shall be taken by every country for the repression of procuring to include measures against brothel-keepers and souteneurs. (8) That the age of consent shall be eighteen years inclusive. (9) That the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance being deeply concerned with the health and welfare of the race, urges all National Governments to promote and give financial support to such vigorous medical, social and educative mea-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n825/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

sures against venereal maladies as are compatible with freedom and equal justice. That it is, however, strongly of the opinion that systems of compulsory notification, treatment and detention of persons suffering from venereal maladies tend to deter infected persons from seeking medical treatment in the early and more curable stages of these maladies and also lead to impartial and inequitable administration resolutions—equal morals which not infrequently discriminates rich and poor, and men and women, to the disadvantage of women and of the poor. That the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance asks that the campaign against venereal maladies be dealt with by the diffusion of information and by the provision of ample facilities for free, confidential treatment in General Hospitals and Clinics, without any deterrent compulsory conditions being imposed on the patients. That the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance points to the excellent results achieved in Great Britain and Holland by voluntary method, and urges the Governments to adopt them. (10) That biological instruction based on knowledge of Natural Science and on the principle of moral and social responsibility of every individual of either sex should be available in all systems of public instruction in every country—New India, Madras.

---

Interview with an Indian Delegate.

A representative of Madras Press Bureau called on Dr. Muthulakshmi Ammal, M. B. & C. M., one of the six Indian ladies who represented India at the tenth International Woman's Suffrage Alliance Congress held at Paris during the early part of June. Mrs. Muthulakshmi Ammal, it will be remembered, was sent to England on a Government Scholarship to make special studies of the system prevalent in the Women's and Children's Hospital in London. During the interview she gave an impressive account of the equipment and modern treatment and care exhibited by the doctors towards children in the London Hospitals. She said there are about 100 hospitals specially intended for women and children where free medical aid is rendered to the patient. All hospitals are being supported by public donations and the house surgeons work honorarily while the Resident Medical Officer gets a small sum hardly enough to make both ends meet. She said she received special training in the Great Ormond Street Children's Hospital. Women render very valuable work towards the welfare of children and especially rich people do not sit idly at home. Most of the hospitals are being maintained by public funds and the State looks after the venereal disease hospitals where excellent treatment is meted out to the patients. She finally observed that almost all the hospitals in London have been fitted with the latest equipments including the X-Ray.

The Paris Congress.

After finishing her training in London she proceeded to Paris as a delegate representing India. There she met five other delegates from India, viz., Mrs. Swaminathan, Mrs. Rukmani Lakshmipathi, Mrs. Sen, Mrs. Bary and Dr. (Mrs.) Monnet. In the Congress she spoke on behalf of India and the following are extracts from the speech:—

"The Women's Indian Association which I have the pleasure to represent in this great Assembly of learned Women has been in existence since 1917, has now 61 branches and over three thousand members all over India, and has been doing very good and useful work in promoting the social, political and educational advancement of our women. Considerable progress has been made during the last three years in the gaining of political rights. First with regard to Parliamentary franchise owing to the efforts and agitation of this Association the vote has been granted to women also. Madras was the first province to secure it. Further I feel glad to carry you the happy news that the Central Government has asked the local Government to remove the sex disqualification in their election to the Legislative bodies. I may tell you also that in most of the Indian States, as Cochin and Travancore, women members are sitting in the Council. Some of our women have been appointed as Honorary Magistrates in Madras and we have been also returning members to the Senate. I must admit in this connection that the majority of our women are favourable to women taking part in the affairs of the country and do not oppose the demand on our part for our equality of rights. This Association also agitated for the inclusion of girls in all schemes of free or compulsory primary education, as the result of which, in certain areas in Madras, the scheme is in actual operation. It has also been the organiser of the "Girl Guide Movement" in Madras. At the same time we have not been blind to the social and moral welfare of our sex. The most important step has been the passing of the "Age of Consent Bill" last year. This Association did much by holding meetings all over India to support the Bill which was first introduced into the Assembly by Sir Hari Singh Gour. The W. I. A. has been interesting itself in the Child Welfare Movement in all its aspects as the result of which we have now in Madras a "Children's Aid Society" and the appointment of Women Honorary Magistrates in the Juvenile Courts. We Indian students who have had the peculiar fortune of visiting Great Britain and other Western countries cannot but admire, not unmingled with a feeling of envy, the numerous hospitals conducted on the volunteer system, the health organisations and other associations which exist to prevent and to fight out diseases to produce useful and healthy citizens for the country, and our attention cannot but be drawn to the fact that in carrying out the measures for the well-being of the nation both the State and the people move with one mind and with only one common interest before them."—The Hindu, Madras.

---

WILL ASIA BECOME CHRISTIAN?

Speaking at St. Anne's, Gresham Street, the Dean of St. Paul's said it was a mistake to suppose that Asia was calling to Europe for more light. On the whole, the settled opinion of the East was that the less they had to do with Western ideas, thought and policy the better for the East. It did not follow that we ought to abstain from sending to them what we had to give. Missionaries were accused of showing airs of superiority, of general sympathy with their own countrymen, the ruling race, and of great ignorance of the old Eastern religions. Those three faults had existed in the past and existed now, but were much less than they were.

Having given impressions of Christianity by members of the Asiatic religions—Judaism, Buddhism, and Maho-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n826/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

medanism—Dean Inge said: What are we to make of these testimonies? There is a common ethical and religious ideal influencing the whole civilised world, and each people tries to find it in its own religion, and does find it there. Uncongenial elements are quietly dropped. Judaism drops its fierce anti-social racialism, Islam drops its militant propaganda, its sensual heaven, its contempt for women. Buddhism modifies its mystical quietism and takes to itself a personal saviour. Hinduism is ashamed of its obscene rites and various other customs like infant marriage and suttee, the sacrifice of widows, and tries to acquire the alien virtue of helpfulness and charity. Christianity itself may no longer emphasise some things that seemed to be integral to Catholic faith and practice of former days. All the other religions agree in veneration for the character of Jesus Christ, although they think that myths have gathered around his name, and yet none is quite satisfied with Christianity even apart from what they call the myths. The Jew thinks that his own religion has something precious which is not given with the same emphasis in Christianity. I am afraid that all fail to see in the European nations as they find them true followers of the gospel which they profess to believe in. They condemn our religion as ineffective.

CHRISTIANISING THEIR OWN RELIGIONS.

The question is: Is it likely that Asia will become nominally Christian or will Christianity modify still further the old religion but without destroying it? I think it quite certain that the Asiatics will never become Anglicans, Romanists or Scots Presbyterians. If they become Christians they will develop a Christianity of their own, and although some may think that we have the divine promise that Christianity will ultimately be victorious everywhere, I think on the whole that it is likely that they will prefer to Christianise their own religion. After all, is not that mainly a matter for them? Supposing they worship a being with the same attributes, it does not very much matter whether they call him Buddha or Christ. We must look to things rather than words.

What we most need in all our missionary work is a few saints, a few men who are really living such a life as apostles of Christ ought to live, whose lives are a living testimony not only that they believe what they teach, but that what they teach is the most holy and beautiful creed that could be believed and professed. That, surely, is the way in which from the very first Our Lord both taught himself and wished his religion to be propagated, not by any mass movement, but by personal influence—like the ancient torch race in which the tired bearer handed on the lighted torch to another. That is the only way, I believe, in which Christianity can really be transmitted, and, as I say, what we need above all is real saints who will go out, full of love and sympathy, without any racial prejudices, who will try to study the lives and beliefs of the people to whom they go, seeing on the whole what is best in them, and so try to bring them to the foot of the Cross.—The Manchester Guardian.

A JUVENILE COURT FOR BOMBAY CITY.

The following memorandum has been sent by the Women's Indian Association (Bombay Branch) to the Law Member of the Government of Bombay on the establishment of a Juvenile Court for the City and Presidency of Bombay:

The Bombay Branch of Women's Indian Association requests the Government of Bombay to make provisions for the establishment of a Juvenile Court in the City of Bombay for the following reasons.

(1) The Bombay Children's Act No. XIII of 1924 contains provisions for the establishment of Juvenile Courts but the Act remains almost a dead letter for want of such Children's Courts and Detention Homes or places of safety.

(2) The public conscience has wakened up to the value of child life, and to its responsibility for looking after children, whose circumstances force them to become beggars or vagrants or delinquents. It is urgent that these children be removed from the streets for moral, health and humanitarian reasons.

(3) Institutions are available in Bombay to which such children can be sent.

(4) A Juvenile Court has been working in Calcutta for some time and lately in Madras but not yet in Bombay, although the provisions for Juvenile Courts have been made in the Bombay Children's Act.

(5) The present seems an opportune time for starting these Courts in the City and the Presidency of Bombay, as interest in child welfare is ripe for welcoming the new step.

(6) The appointment of Women Justices of the Peace recently in the Presidency can call the assistance of women with legal powers to the helping of Juvenile Courts and we press for the appointment of Women Magistrates in Bombay in this connection.

(7) We request that rooms in the law courts be set apart to be used as a Children's Court, that a Magistrate (or a woman or man Magistrate together) shall be appointed to preside over this Court assisted by a lady probationer officer, special plain clothes constables, and such other officers as may be necessary; that orders be given that cases connected with children and young persons shall be remitted from the ordinary courts to these Juvenile Courts, and that the Juvenile Courts be established as soon as possible.

Women welcome the establishment of Juvenile Courts and will co-operate, we believe, in making them effective for the rescue and protection of the child life in the City.

We, therefore, appeal to you as the Member of Law to provide for the immediate establishment of the first Juvenile Court in Bombay as provided for in the Bombay Children's Act of 1924.

TUBERCULOSIS AND PURDAH.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times of India writes:—Remarkable figures on the prevalence of tuberculosis in Calcutta are contained in the annual report of Dr. H. M. Clarke, Medical Officer of Health. Dr. Clarke states that in Calcutta almost the whole of mortality from tuberculosis is from a pulmonary type. The disease runs a very rapid course. This is, apparently, related to the fact that signs of old tuberculosis infection are comparatively rare among Indians. In European countries where 85 per cent. of the post-mortem examinations reveal old tuberculosis, the proportion of the so-called galloping phthisis is small.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n827/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Commenting on what he describes as terrible mortaty amongst girls and young women Dr. Clarke points ut that between the age of 15 and 20 years for every oy that dies of tuberculosis six girls die. "What is e reason for this appalling state of affairs?" asks the ledical Officer, and proceeds: "I am convinced that is the retention of the purdah system in the densely opulated gullies of the congested city that dooms so any young girls to early death from tuberculosis. In ss densely populated areas, where detached houses ith compounds are possible, purdah system could be lhered to without seriously affecting the health of the mates of the zenana. In a great city it is difficult secure absolute privacy without shutting out light d air, as houses in narrow lanes and gullies are almost rtain to be overlooked. Consequently the zenana is ually situated in an inner portion of the house, ill-hted and ill-ventilated, but effectually screened from servation."

"I would again draw attention to many thousands of ses of tuberculosis always present in Calcutta. This apt to be overlooked. At a very modest estimate suming that there are four or five living cases for ch death registered, there are probably about 10,000 ses of tuberculosis in the city at any given time. In e great majority of cases no precautions are taken ainst the spread of infection. To speak plainly, thouds of consumptives are constantly spitting all over e place. Now can any one wonder at the prevalence white plague in Calcutta? An anti-tuberculosis heme which included the appointment of a tuberculis officer with eight assistant medical officers (for stematic house to house visiting), a dispensary and a blicity bureau has been approved by the Health mmittee".

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Women and Councils: We are glad to see that, th only two dissentients, the Madras Legislative Council s passed the resolution removing the ban on men becoming members of the Council. We hope mbay will not lag behind Madras when a similar olution comes up for discussion in the Legislative uncil.

Successful Temperance Work in Jaffna: anks to the efforts of temperance workers in Jaffna, ly one tavern will be kept in that place by the end of e year. In 1923 Jaffna boasted of 17 taverns which re reduced to 12 three years later. At the beginning this year a regular campaign for closure of "arrack" ops was started by temperance workers and the resse that they got has been stupendous.

Back Bay Inquiry Committee: The Governnt of India has announced the personnel of the Comttee which it has appointed to inquire into the Back y reclamation scheme. Sir Grimwood Mears, Chief stice of the Allahabad High Court, is the Chairman d the members are Sir M. Visvesvaraya, Sir Frederick omas Hopkinson and Mr. S. B. Billimoria. Mr. R. W. rbank is the Secretary. The terms of reference to Committee are to inquire into the history of the eption and conduct of the Back Bay scheme and to ke recommendations as regards future operations.

Gift of Hindu Daughter to a Christian: A Free Press of India message from Madras dated July 13 says:—The story of how a Hindu minor girl was given away to a Christian and how the Government kept quiet over the transaction was told in the Council to-day. One Marichetti of Palatholai, near Palghat, gave his daughter to one Paul of Pollachi for a small consideration. The document under which the transaction was registered was a deed of gift by which the Hindu gave his daughter to a Christian on the ground that he was unable to maintain the child. A sum of Rs. 5 was paid to the Hindu for travelling expenses. The Government considered all facts and found there was no need to take any action.

Naik Girls of Almora: A correspondent from Almora writes to the Hindustan Times, Delhi, under date July 9:—A city music conference was held here last week under the presidency of Prof. D. Pant. It was decided to use the proceeds in opening a school of music on a very small scale at present. It will help the Naik girls out of the life of sin that they are now leading. The Naik girls who have been condemned by the reformers as prostitutes were originally known as dev kanyas. In the then social organisation their function was to look after the art of music and dancing. The poverty and degradation of the intellectual class all over the country is responsible for the degradation of this class. It is to be hoped that with the great awakening in the country, the social lot of those women will be improved.

Untouchables and Temple Entry: The Kusthia correspondent of the Forward writes to that paper under date July 15:—There is an ancient temple of Goddess Kali at Bheramara, a place of much commercial importance. This temple is owned by the Narain Zemindars. Large number of pilgrims assemble every Saturday and Tuesday for worship and sacrifice. For sometime past, the "Yugis," "Namasudras," "Hely Nais," "Sutradhars" and these suppressed and so-called untouchable classes had engineered a movement demanding the right of entrance into the shrine and was stoutly opposed by the social bureaucrats. The so-called untouchables formed themselves into an association and dissociated from the oppositionists. The movement was being led by a well-known merchant and Congress-worker of the district who persistently started a campaign against this tyrannical man-made custom of the Brahmins. The Narain Babus on the 12th of July last extended the right of entry to the temple to these suppressed classes and on the 12th of July last men belonging to the suppressed classes entered the temple amid acclamations of joy and paid their homage to the deity.

Story of Previous Birth: The Leader, Allahabad, published a few days ago a communication from Kr. Kekai Nandan Sahay, Vakil, Bareilly, in which he stated that his son of about two and a half years of age was giving an account of his previous birth. The child gave the name of his father in his previous birth as Babuaji Pandey who lived at Benares and related a number of details about the house in which the said gentleman lived, his personal habits, and several domestic matters. Our contemporary published a further communication from Kr. Kekai Nandan Sahay

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n828/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

from which it appears that corroborative testimony has been forthcoming of the statements made by the boy from two respectable citizens of Benares, one of them being Munshi Mahadeva Prasad, the Chairman of the Municipal Board. The testimony of Pandit Babua Pandey, as he is popularly known at Benares, is of particular interest and value in this connection. The Hindus have long believed in re-birth and this is not the first case of survival of memory after death which may establish, if a satisfactory and scientific inquiry is made, the truth underlying the Hindu belief. The question of scientific importance is whether memory survives the destruction of the physical organ, the brain, which is supposed, according to western notions, to record and preserve the impressions.

New Vihara at Saranath: Those interested in Buddhist revival will be glad to learn that Dr. C. A. Newavivata, leader of the Ceylon Deputation, returned to Madras recently after selecting the site for a New Vihara at Saranath and left for Ceylon after a successful termination of his mission in this country. New Vihara at Saranath will enshrine the relic of Buddha which is one of the relics enshrined by Emperor Asoka; and the Vihara will be built in the eighth century style of Buddhist architecture. He said the present settlement will be welcomed by Buddhists all over Asia, as marking a historical gesture at the revival of Buddhism in India. He hoped the liberal attitude of Government will make the contending parties in India to recognise Buddhist claims with regard to Buddha Gaya shrines. Buddhism is not alien to be kept out of India, when the West was today attempting to bridge the gulf by introducing the compassionate teachings of Buddha and shake off the effects of materialism in spite of its conflict with the sentiments of the East. He asked why there should not be greater co-operation between Hindu India and Buddhist India, which comprises Ceylon, Burma and Nepal, to bring about greater co-operation and happier life in the motherland.

"Darwin of Botany": According to The Englishman, Sir Jagadish Chandra Bose was entertained at luncheon by the British Indian Union. Lord Lee of Fareham, who presided, paid a tribute to Sir J. C. Bose's work in the cause of science and humanity. He stated that he understood that this "Darwin of Botany" hoped to make it possible to substitute plants for animals for vivisection. It was Sir J. C. Bose's dream to make the Bose Research Institute in Calcutta a "Microcosm of the League of Nations." Sir J. C. Bose, emphasizing the importance of science, said that, for the economic welfare of a vast continent like India, there must be two complementary activities, industry and agriculture, both depending on science. The present unrest in India was due to severe economic distress. The Universities were turning out a large number of science-trained men who did not find scope for their activities. For the removal of the threatened economic danger a comprehensive State policy was required. Sir Jagadish said: "I am sure India will willingly meet the necessary large expenditure, provided the money is spent on enriching India and opening out wider spheres of activity for her children." He declared that the peaceful penetration of foregin nations "not over-friendly to Indian interests" would inevitably lead to forceful occupation and the division of India into different spheres of influence. "There," he added, "lies India's great peril."

"Otherness" in Sex: Students of the science of physiognomy have been deeply stirred in Berlin by a totally new theory propounded at a meeting of the Lavater Society by Dr. Wilhelm Fliess, writes "The Westminster Gazette." A number of photographs were shown with half of the face darkened. In practically every case the members of the audience pronounced the photograph to be that of a man when the left half of a woman's face was shown, and in the case of the left side of a man's face, to be that of a woman. This occasionally remarkable difference in the two sides of a person's face, which every photographer notices and of which film actors are acutely aware, Dr. Fliess explains by the presence of feminine elements in every man, while fundamental male characteristics are to be met with in every female. These "other sex" attributes have a habit of coming out more strongly on the left than on the right side. The greater the preponderance of these elements in any individual, the greater is the difference between this character and the normal type of the same sex. This is one explanation of the so-called "artistic temperament"; photographs showing very wide differences between the two sides of a face were in all cases those of persons of peculiarly distinctive gifts in one form or other. That this "otherness" is not confined to human beings alone was sufficiently demonstrated by various leaves being folded down the middle: the two halves invariably displayed slight differences.

Abolition of "Reet" Urged: News has been received that the Conference of the Chiefs of the Simla States with the Deputy Commissioner of Simla, who is also the Superintendent of the Hill States, in the chair, has concluded after two sittings. The Conference, it is understood, discussed the curious "Reet" custom, under which matrimonial ties are of the loosest kind and can be broken off by a wife being sold to another at a price mutually settled. This question of "Reet" custom has been exciting considerable interest and a number of social workers in the Hill States have been for some time urging its abolition. Col. Coldstream, Superintendent, Hill States, is reported to have declared at the Conference that Government favoured the abolition of the custom as soon as practicable in the interest of the administration of the States. Government would render every help, but to stamp out that custom concerted action should be taken by the combined efforts of the Chiefs of the Hill States and by their people. A discussion took place for and against the "Reet" practice. While it was generally agreed that the custom was primitive and constituted a blot on the social life in the hills, it was, nevertheless, pointed out by some of the speakers that its prevalence was due to the illiteracy of the hill people and their poverty. The Conference finally appointed a sub-committee of the Chiefs and representatives of the States to go into the question fully and chalk out a scheme for the gradual abolition of the practice. The Conference adjourned sine die and when it meets again the sub-committee will report its recommendations to it. The Conference is also expected to consider the question of forced labour which is prevalent in these States from time immemorial.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n829/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

To Our Subscribers.

A subscriber from America writes to us to supply them with some missing numbers in order to complete the files of their library. As some of the copies are not available at our office, we would be glad if any of our subscribers can spare the following missing numbers, which would be paid for at the rate of 8 annas per copy.

| Year. | | Issues. |
|---|---|---|
| 1912 | ... | August 18 and 25. |
| 1915 | ... | December 5. |
| 1916 | ... | January, February, March (all numbers except March 26th), April 2, 9, October 8 and 22. |
| 1917 | ... | July 1st. |

THE MANAGER,
The Indian Social Reformer Office,
NAVSARI CHAMBERS,
OUTRAM ROAD, FORT,
BOMBAY.

THE INDIAN REVIEW.
JUNE NUMBER.

Reaction Against Liberalism. By Mr. J. T. Gwynn, I.C.S. (Retd.)
Coalition of Parties in Legislature. By Mr. Mukandi Lal, M.L.C.
Purgatories or Reformatories. By Prof. Diwanchand Sharma, M.A.
Gokhale's Legacy. By Mr. G. A. Natesan.
Twelve Years of Rural Work. By Mr. K. T. Paul, O.B.E., B.A.
The Art of India. By Dr. James H. Cousins, D.Litt.
Maharajah Jang Bahadur. By Prof. C. S. Srinivasachari, M.A.
The New Dewan of Mysore in Islamic Lands. By Mr. V. B. Metta.
The Message of Buddha. By Mr. R. R. Diwakar, M. A.
Indian Public Life. By Mr. K. R. R. Sastry, M.A.
Lone Wanderer: (A Poem) By Swami Paramananda.
My Experiments With Truth. By Mahatma Gandhi.
The Root of the Evil in South Africa. By Mr. C. F. Andrews.
A Historic Tragedy. By Dr. A. J. Saunders, M.A.
On Growing Old : (A Peom.) By John Masefield.

Single Copy Annas Eight.

Annual Subscription Rs. 5.

A few copies of back numbers of January, February, March, April and May are available. Mahatma Gandhi's autobiography which is printed regularly from the March Number is continued month after month.

G. A. NATESAN & CO.,
Publishers, Madras.

NEW BOOKS. Two Books of JUST PUBLISHED.
GREAT VALUE.

TALKS ON THE PATH OF OCCULTISM

is a companion volume to The Masters and the Path, and is intended for the daily use of aspirants. It consists of a commentary by Dr. Besant and Bishop Leadbeater jointly on At the Feet of the Master, The Voice of the Silence and Light on the Path, and is full of detailed explanation, advice and instruction.
Pages 969 with full index.
Price: Cloth and Gold Rs. 12.
Boards... Rs. 10.

THE GOLDEN BOOK OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY 1875—1925.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

Issued in Commemoration of the Jubilee of the Theosophical Society by its General Council.

Edited by C. Jinarajadasa, M. A., Vice-President of the T. S.

334 Illustrations and Index.
Cloth and Gold in Art Paper, pp. 421,
Price Rs. 12-8.
THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS.

THE GUARDIAN,

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6|—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33| 1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n830/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,75,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-25) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon, Dharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur, Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co., Dept. C. J. 18. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE:
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.
Branches: CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents:—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms." Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
Nira ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... (District Satara).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kalol ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 2,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial positions are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n831/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.

(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)

Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.

Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)

Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)

Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)

Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)

Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM: An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0. Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE: Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI: A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT: By Mr. V. S. Soboni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION? A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

Apply to Manager, The Indian Social Reformer, Navsar. Chambers, Fort, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... Rs. | 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED " ... | ... " | 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP " ... | ... " | 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS " ... | ... " | 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits, etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U.S.A.:—Summer Ballard.

Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n832/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ¼ Column. | | ½ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| 13 | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 26 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 52 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n833/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

A NEW BOOK ON BUDDHISM.

(ONLY A FEW COPIES LEFT.)

THE BUDDHA DOCTRINE, THE GENUINE TEACHING OF BUDDHA AS TAUGHT BY THE BUDDHA HIMSELF.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY

DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

It is the English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world and had gone through 11 editions, since its first publication. "The book is entirely a product of the spirit of the times. It is a valuable addition to Buddhist Scholarship." The book is priced at 15 Shillings or Rs. 10 and can be had at The Indian Social Reformer Office, Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n834/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1926. No. 48

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Communal Problem.
"As a Farmer to Farmers".
The "High Table" Practice.
The Children's Act of 1924.
Where the Public are to Blame.
Local Self-Government Conference.
Evolution of Hindu Marriage.
Grievances of Khoti Tenants.
Borderland Sects.
'All Castes but Untouchable.'
A Tragic Marriage.
The Importance of the Child.
Conference of Asiatic Nations.
Viceroy's Advice to Students.
An Egyptian Lady Educationist.
Baby Week Campaign.
How to Fail.
News of the Week.

NOTES

The Communal Problem: The serious and protracted Hindu-Mahomedan riots in Calcutta and the influential representations of the Hindu population, have forced the communal problem in India on the attentions of British statesmen. Lord Olivier, who was Secretary of State for India in the late Labour Government, wrote a letter to the Times (London) calling attention to the feeling that the executive officials did not sufficiently protect Hindus in communal conflicts. The Viceroy in India and the present Secretary of State in the House of Lords have repudiated this accusation, and have declared that the policy of Government continues to be to give equal protection to all communities and religions. Lord Irwin, our new Viceroy, has gone further and pledged himself with the help of Hindu and Mahomedan leaders to put an end to communal dissensions. His Excellency's confident assurances have produced an excellent effect, and if Government have the will, it will not be difficult to find a way for bringing about a settlement of at least the more acute points of difference. There is no country in the world where people more readily take their cue from the persons in power for the time being, and when the public come to realise that His Majesty's Viceroy himself is determined to end the state of communal tension, it will not be long before a considerable section of it come into line with him. Of course, there is always a small section which likes to have troubled waters to fish in, but its power for mischief will be greatly at a discount when it comes to be generally realised that calm water is the order of the day.

"As A Farmer to Farmers": It is fast becoming a fashion that when a person of eminence is addressing a set of people such as agriculturists or weavers to preface his remarks by describing himself as one of them. Mahatma Gandhi who is nothing if not original set the example in the palmy days of the Non-Co-operation movement when virtually a return to nature was advocated and any pretensions to Western culture or learning was condemned as savouring of slave mentality, by calling himself a weaver and a farmer. Last week, His Excellency the Viceroy in the course of his speech to the Agriculturists of Central Provinces and Berar said that he was talking as a farmer to farmers. The principle underlying this mode of expression is sound. It amounts to no less than this that to understand the people, to realise their difficulties and to inspire confidence in them, nothing so much is needed as a complete identification of oneself with them and their interests. Once this principle is grasped it will tend to establish harmony and good-will. No doubt a good deal of versatility is needed to be able to shed one's occupational mentality to be able to do so. After all, no one can claim to have dropped down on the planet as the finished product of this or that profession, for

When Adam delved and Eve span
Who was then the gentleman.

The "High Table" Practice: The Swarajya of Madras has in one of its issues reproduced an article from a local contemporary depicting at length the humiliation to which the students of the Women's Christian College are exposed by the "high table" practice in vogue in that institution. An idea of the high table practice will show that it is neither elevating nor ennobling. Briefly it is this. A specific number of students are accorded daily the rare privilege of sitting at the lady Principal and professors' table which is called the "high table" for their meals. But the honour is more in the nature of an ordeal, as the students, instead of being served with the same food as that of the Principal and professors, are put on short commons. A single helping of a plate of rice and curry is all that is vouchsafed to them and, as etiquette demands that they should not rise from the table before the Principal, they have to put up with unwashen hands and much discomfiture until the Head of the Institution and her colleagues have finished their elaborate meal consisting of many courses. The only parallel to this practice that suggests itself is the fable of the Fox and the Crane with this difference that the same kind of food was served at this banquet. We are glad, however, that the students of the College did not adopt the mode of retaliation suggested in the fable. But we cannot understand why the students did not signify their disapproval of such a practice. The tactful way would have been to decline with thanks the invitation accorded them or failing that to enlist the Indian professors', as we believe all of them are not Europeans, service to bring to the notice of their European colleagues the obvious defects of this practice. To Indian feeling it is abhorrent to have a differentiation in the kind of victuals served to people sitting together at meals and that is one reason, though not the only one, why different castes do not eat together. Any difference between rich and poor, young and old, at a caste dinner, would be keenly resented by social opinion.

The Children's Act of 1924: Following the meeting of the Women Justices of the Peace of Bombay, a public meeting was held last Wednesday under the auspices of the Bombay Vigilance Association and 24 other Associations, to urge Government to bring into force Parts II and III of the Children's Act of 1924 at once and also to convene a conference of representatives of different Associations and individuals interested in the question of child welfare with a view to taking concerted action to ensure the proper working of the Act. As Miss Katherine Davis rightly pointed out, this Act is the key-stone in the arch of child welfare, which recognises the child's right to live and society's right to protect. The criminal is not born, but is often made, owing to the surroundings in which he is kept, and if he is removed from bad surroundings, as the Children's Act proposes to do, then the problem of juvenile crime will fairly be solved. The Act roughly falls into two divisions, Parts II and III dealing with the offended-against child or young person and Parts IV-VIII dealing with the young offender. Two types of children and young persons are dealt with under Parts II and III: first, those in a bad environment, i.e., who are wandering about, without proper guardianship, destitute with no home, or the inmate of a bad home owing to the criminal habits of parents and guardians and immoral associates like thieves and prostitutes, and secondly, those who are the direct victims of other people's misconduct including neglect, ill-treatment, incitement to begging and the causing or encouragement of the seduction and prostitution of young girls. It is under this part of the Act that it is made illegal for anyone between the ages of 4 and 16 to reside in a brothel and definite penalties are levied for malpractices towards children and young persons. Provision is also made in these sections for the removal of young people in such circumstances to a place of safety and for the production of the juvenile before a Magistrate. The Magistrate is empowered either to remove the children or young persons entirely from their bad environment and commit them to the care of a relative or a fit person, or to send them to a certified school, or leave them in the charge of a parent or guardian on his giving an undertaking for their right treatment. It will thus be seen that Parts II and III are the most important sections of the Act and Government will not be put to much expense in immediately putting them into operation.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n835/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Where the Public are to Blame : Much was said and rightly said at the meeting in condemnation of the delay in bringing into force the Act which was passed two years ago. But Government is not alone to blame for it. The Act was introduced by Government after over ten years' cogitation and pushed through the Legislative Council where there was some strong opposition to some of its original provisions. Government, therefore, may claim that at least it was on their initiative and not on account of any public demand that the law for the better protection of children was passed. But when it comes to apply the provisions of the Act, Government cannot go an inch beyond the limits set by public opinion, up to which it can get the support of public opinion. Unfortunately, the free flow of human sympathy is hindered among us by political, communal and caste divisions. There is, in addition, the modern tendency for the economically well-off to regard the economically ill-off as belonging to a different race and even species. There is no use shutting our eyes to the fact that the social conscience amidst large sections of our communities is not sufficiently awake to the danger of infection from neglected nooks and corners. We are too much taken up with communal and political matters to feel humanly for human beings. By all means, let Government be blamed when they are blameworthy, but let us not forget now and then to look into ourselves and remedy any deficiencies in our outlook which may help Government in their indifference to public interests.

Local Self-Government Conference: The Local Self-Government Conference which was held last week in Poona under the presidentship of the Hon. Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatullah, Minister of Local Self-government, was the first of its kind ever convened to discuss problems relating to local self-government, and deserves to be copied by other Provinces. The local bodies and municipalities form the training ground for self-government and Conferences like the one held at Poona will no doubt tend to create a civic enthusiasm and public spirit in the people which will ensure the successful working of local self-government institutions. The education of public opinion, the founding of a Local Self-Government Institute, the appointment of a Local Self-Government Board and the encouragement of Village Panchayats, these were some of the subjects discussed at the Conference. Finance is the root of all problems and especially after the provincialisation of finances the position of local bodies has become very difficult. The recurring and non-recurring grants that were given to the local bodies by the Government of India have now been stopped with the result that they have to depend upon the provincial governments which are themselves in a bad position, while, on the other hand, as the President remarked, the demand for extra services, conveniences and amenities from the local bodies is steadily on the increase. The Conference has demanded that a fourth share of the income-tax and the super-tax should be assigned to local bodies, and, if this is not possible, that a levy of one anna in every rupee of income-tax and super-tax collected should be imposed by Government and assigned to local bodies. The proposal to impose a terminal tax on exports and imports in rural areas met with much opposition and was finally voted down by the Conference. The resolution which the Conference passed in the teeth of the Minister's opposition, urging the establishment of an Advisory Local Government Board consisting of the Minister as the President and two representatives elected by the Presidents of Municipalities and Local Boards among themselves, is not calculated to achieve its purpose. If it is intended by it to control the Minister, it is superfluous, since it is already being done by the Legislative Council, while, on the other hand, if it is intended to advise the Minister in deciding all questions regarding local bodies that come before it, it is incompetent to do so, which only a body of men with administrative experience can do. The success of local self-government depends in no small measure upon the co-operation which the local bodies receive from the public and the resolution passed by the Conference that organised and systematic and sustained efforts should be taken by Municipal and Local authorities, with the co-operation of voluntary associations, to educate public opinion on the rights, duties and responsibilities of the people, is a step in the right direction. The founding of a Local Self-government Institute and the publication of an Year Book of Local Self-government are all necessary to educate public opinion efficiently. We are glad to see that the Conference also passed a resolution calling upon Government to establish Village Panchayats throughout the Presidency within the next ten years.

MANAGER'S NOTICE.

Reminders are being sent to those subscribers whose subscriptions have fallen in arrears and to those whose subscriptions are due for the current year. Those who are in arrears are specially requested to remit the amounts due without delay.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n836/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, JULY 31, 1926.

EVOLUTION OF HINDU MARRIAGE.

The first place in the current number of the Mysore University Magazine is given to an article headed "The Sanatana Dharma of Hindu Marriage" by Mr. V. Venkatachalam Iyer, B.A., B.L. It is an attack on the belief that Hindu marriage is a sacrament and that the religion of which it is a sacrament cannot be called Sanatana Dharma. Marrying and giving in marriage has nothing to do with Sanatana Dharma. The term is, no doubt, used in Upper India for orthodox Hinduism to distinguish it from the Arya Samaj. But this is a palpable misuse. The differentia between the two is more correctly expressed as that between the Vedic and the Puranic religion. Sanatana Dharma is the sum of the principles underlying religion and means really the law of righteousness. It has nothing to do with any social custom or institution. Sir Narayan Chandavarkar in his memorable address to the Indian National Social Conference at Benares in December 1905, brought out the distinction between the Sanatana Dharma and the popular Hinduism of the day very clearly. The ancient Rishis, he said, gave the name of Sanatana Dharma or Shaswata Dharma to the religion of the eternal verities unconditioned and applicable to all human beings of whatever caste, class or creed, embodying the laws of the universal mind and the principle of universal morality, as distinguished from the Varnashrama Dharma or the laws applicable to particular castes or condition of life. There were also the Dharmas of time and place, Yuga Dharma and Kshetra Dharma which were also distinct from Sanatana Dharma, which is the subjective aspect of the law of righteousness. The contents of Sanatana Dharma as defined in the Mahabharata and the Bhagwat Gita are in the ultimate analysis the same as those of St. Paul's definition of "charity" in his letter to the Corinthians. Mr. Iyer's heading "Sanatana Dharma of Hindu Marriage" is about as inapposite as would be "Christianity of the British Constitution." The latter has changed and will change from time to time but the truths of Christianity will be always the same, and British statesmen whether they are monarchists or Republicans, if they are Christians, must abide by them. Even so, the marriage customs of the Hindus have changed and will change to suit changing conditions, but the truths of Sanatana Dharma do not change, and every righteous man, whether he is a monogamist like Sri Rama or a polygamist like Sri Krishna, will have to conform to them.

So much for Mr. Iyer's misconception of Sanatana Dharma. He is equally at sea about the exact meaning of the term "sacrament." He assumes quite gratuitously that a marriage which is a sacrament is the same as a strictly monogamous marriage in law and in fact; and in the manner of the clever lawyer which he evidently is, he cites case after case and text after text to show that Hindu marriage at no time answered to that idea. The mistake here is also Mr. Iyer's. The sacramental relation between husband and wife is created or symbolised by marriage, but once created, it is not affected by any vicissitudes of the physical tie. That is the Hindu conception as evidenced by the fact that even the death of the husband does not break the sacramental bond to the widow. Not only that, but the sacramental relation is created among Hindus not by the consummation of marriage but by the religious ceremony which may be and is often several years antecedent to it. And if the husband dies before consummation, the wife becomes as much a widow as if she had lived with him, and co-habited with him for many years. Among the Nairs of Malabar, the sacramental ceremony is gone through with one man, but the actual marriage takes place subsequently with another man of the same caste. All the cases and texts which Mr. Iyer cites as discrediting the idea of a sacramental marriage among Hindus from ancient times, considered from the sociologist's point of view and not from the criminal lawyer's, reveal a continuous and consistent evolution of the institution from the earliest to the present time. Amidst all the vicissitudes of time and circumstance, amidst much that was discouraging, irregular and grotesque, the Hindu people have clung to the idea that marriage between man and woman does not begin and end with the sexual relation, but is something essentially spiritual which is not and cannot be interrupted or perverted by any interruption or perversion of the physical relation. Mr. Iyer, eager to establish his case for the secularity of the Hindu marriage, begins at the wrong end. The student of social evolution, possessed of the master-key that every human institution grew from the impingement of reason upon a felt necessity, sees harmony where the lawyer sees only discrepancy. The article is, indeed, a very good illustration of the danger of applying the principles of the Evidence Act to the elucidation of social phenomena. Mr. Iyer makes another assumption, namely, that Hindu marriage rules have remained absolutely unchanged from the Vedic times to our day. For instance, taking the famous case of Satyakama Jabala, he denounces the poor lady for pretending not to know her husband's gotra and the commentators for finding excuses for her. Does Mr. Iyer know that gotra was not always the same important consideration which it is to-day in Hindu marriages? In this Upanishadic episode we are in the fascinating region of social evolution where the Hindus emerge from the matriarchal to the patriarchal conception of the family. The patriarchate was not yet well-established, but the matriarchal system was coming into disfavour, just as to-day among educated Hindus though monogamy is not legally established and is, indeed, sometimes followed, polygamy has come to be looked upon with disfavour. Draupadi protests against having five husbands foisted upon her and has to be persuaded to accept them by the citation of Shastric precedents. Satyakama does not even feel that there was anything requiring explanation in her not being able to identify the father of her son. She clearly belongs to an age even anterior to Draupadi who, notwithstanding her polyandrous marriage, has passed into tradition as one of the five or seven ideal women of the Hindu race. Nevertheless, Mr. Iyer would interrogate Satyakama in his imaginary witness-box as he would a Hindu woman of our day for an alleged irregularity in her matrimonial life!

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n837/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GRIEVANCES OF KHOTI TENANTS.

In July 1925 resolutions were brought forward by Mr. A. N. Surve and Mr. S. K. Bole in the Bombay Legislative Council regarding the grievances of the khoti tenants in the districts of Ratnagiri and Kolaba, but were withdrawn on the understanding that the Commissioner, S. D., would make personal inquiries and report the result to Government. The Report of Mr. L. S. Mountford is now available with the Government Resolution thereon. In the Kolaba district, grievances are confined to the "upri" tenants alone, while in Ratnagiri the discontent is general among all classes of tenants. The root causes of discontent among the tenantry in Ratnagiri seem to be based upon two factors, one economic and the other legal. The first is the pressure upon the land, and more particularly upon the rice land, due to the large and increasing population of the district, which affects both tenants and khots. The tenants are affected by the extreme sub-division of the holdings and the increased competition for land which reduce the means of subsistence per head of population and, in the case of tenants-at-will, tend to force up the rates of rent, while in the case of the khots the increase in the number of sharers makes it impossible for them to reduce their demands and in numerous cases leads to the harassment of the tenantry under the claims of a multiplicity of masters. The second cause is the existence under the Khoti Act of different classes of khoti tenants, privileged and unprivileged. Even among the privileged classes of tenants there is discontent and no wonder, therefore, it is most acute among the "upri" tenants or tenants-at-will who not only have no rights in the land, in spite of long and continuous occupation extending over 70 years, but have to pay higher rates of rent than other tenants. This discontent has been further accentuated by assertions based on the incorrect entries in the settlement registers of 1866-73, that many tenants-at-will are really permanent tenants who have been unjustly deprived of their rights, and the result is a general demand for the abolition of the Khoti system.

One can understand Government's adherence to the Khoti Act of 1880, for under it it was agreed that permanent occupancy would be confined to tenants who had cultivated continuously for the 20 years previous to 1865 and that no new tenant rights would accrue in future, unless they were formally granted by the khots themselves, but Government's attitude towards the legitimate grievances of the tenants is most deplorable. Government contents itself with merely reminding the khots "that it is their duty to behave towards their tenants with the greatest possible consideration, as harsh and overbearing treatment can only result in justifiable resentment and agitation". That the grievances of the "upri" tenants are not imaginary, but are real and, in some respects, unbearable, is made amply clear by Mr. Mountford's report. The upris who have improved the land and are wedded to the soil, have no alternative but to submit to all the exactions of the fathers and grandfathers and in some cases great-grand-fathers had cultivated before them. They have to provide labour to plough the khots' lands and to thresh the harvest where the khots themselves cultivate; they have to cut fuel and take it to the khots' houses and so forth on a miserable pittance ranging from ⅛ of a seer of grain up to 2 annas a meal. The fruit of jack trees raised by their forefathers, which is an important item of food in the Konkan, is taken by the khot. Then, again, they have to live on the khots' land and use it also for grazing purposes. Any refusal to work for the khots entails refusal of grazing, impounding of their cattle and the danger of eviction from their houses. They no doubt enjoy the privilege of free grazing and fuel, but in return are subject to any amount of "veth" (forced labour, in the sense of labour for the khot on his lands at less than the market rate) the khots may demand under pain of losing their privileges. And last of all the Government official in the village is the Police Patil who is invariably a khot and hence no complaint is listened to. Mr Mountford also depicts in true colours the exactions of the khots. With a few exceptions he says, the khot has done nothing to improve his tenants' conditions. He has no conception of the obligations of the landlord and has demanded the service of the kul for generations as a matter of course. He uses him as his cooly, as his woodcutter his ploughman, his thresher etc., and takes from the upri as much as and often more than half the gross produce which has to be paid in good as well as bad years. These are only some of the disabilities under which the upris are labouring Nothing but the strong hand of law can protect them from the cruel exactions of the khot Government, we see, has approved of some minor recommendations made by the Commissioner to alleviate their difficulties, but the least it can do under the circumstances is to pass a Tenant Act, as suggested by him, to limit the power of the landlord to take more than a certain amount of rent and to force him to pay the ejected tenant for the improvements he has effected, in order that this might afford him some security of tenure.

BORDERLAND SECTS.

The usual official theory recently propounded by Earl Winterton in the House of Commons is that the Hindus and Mahomedans are always seen cutting each other's throats and the moment the English leave India there will be a general massacre. Unfortunately for this facile theory, the early History of India abounds in facts clearly tending towards a rapprochement between the two great Indian communities. The religious reform movements of Kabir and Nanak are well known as attempts to coalesce the best in the two religions. Even more interesting from a sociological point of view is the existence to this day of what may be called intermediary commu-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n838/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

practices are an admixture in varying proportion of Hinduism and Islam. Of such a community is the Molesalam Thakurs who, according to the Kathiawar correspondent of the Indian Daily Mail, recently suppressed a school started a week ago for the children of the untouchables. The Bombay Census Report of 1911 describes this community as one whose people were originally converts to Islam from Chohan, Vaghela, Gohel, Parmar, Solankhi and other Rajput clans in the reign of Mahmud Begada (A. D. 1459–1513). Molesalams are found throughout Gujerat proper and as far South as Broach. They follow half Hindu half Musealman customs and would revert to Hinduism if they could secure their old position in the hierarchy of caste. They employ Kazis, Sayads and Maulvis as well as Brahman priests. There are five other similar communities mentioned in the Report from which we take the following :—

Matias. Matias are found only in the Jalalpur and Bardoli talukas of Surat. Originally Lewa Kanbis, they adopted Islam about three hundred years ago under the guidance of Imamshah, a Mussalman recluse who lived at Giramatha. In 1880, about 160 families of Matias, reminded of their respectable Hindu origin, formed themselves into a separate caste, calling themselves Vaishnava Matias, as distinguished from the original one Pirana Matias. They gave up all Mussalman customs, stopped eating with the Pirana Matia, and returned to Lewa Kanbi customs. The Lewa Kanbis do not, however, recognise them as Hindus. They employ Audich or Modh Brahman priests, conform to the Atharva Veda and call themselves Satpathis or followers of the truth. They worship the tombs of Mussalman saints and bury their dead.

Momnas. Momnas are found almost entirely in Cutch. Siahs in faith they are Mussalman in little more than name. They do not associate with Muhammadans, eat no flesh, do not circumcise, do not say the five daily prayers or keep the Ramjan. Among themselves their usual salutation is the Sravak phrase "Johar, Johar," and with others the ordinary Hindu "Ram, Ram." They keep the Janmashtami and Divali holidays, weich are purely Hindu festivals. Originally Lewa Kanbis, of late they have shown a tendency to call themselves Lewa Patidars or Lewas. They worship the Hindu Triad and look upon Imamshah as an incarnation of Brahma. About a century ago some families of Momnas adopted the Swaminarayan creed and formed themselves into a separate group. They do not marry, though they will eat, with other Momnas.

Sheikhs. The Sheikhs who are found chiefly in Broach claim descent from, and, like the Matias and Momnas, are followers of Imamshah, who 300 years ago gathered Patidars, Brahmans, Vanias and others into one sect. They refuse to be classified as Hindu or Mussalman, though of late years they have shown leanings to Hinduism and some have taken to worshipping at the Swaminarayan temples. They bury their dead for reasons not connected with economy and employ a Fakir, who is maintained for this purpose by the community, at marriage and death ceremonies. In the case of marriage the Fakir performs the nika ceremony and the rite is then completed according to Hindu practice. In all other respects they are Hindus. They worship the ordinary gods of the Kanbis, employ Borsada, Audich, and Shrimali Brahman priests and do not reverence the Kuran. They are admitted into Hindu temples and make pilgrimages to the tomb of Imamshah at Pirana near Ahmadabad. They swear by Khuda, the God of Islam, though they worship Hindu deities.

The influence of the Pirana shrine on the Hindus of Cutch and Gujarat is still active and it is certain that the Census failed to return correctly all these Hindu–Muhammadans. Many secretly profess an allegiance to this shrine who would return themselves to an enquirer as Hindus.

Sanghars. Sanghars who are found chiefly in Kathiawar and Cutch are said to be Sind Rajputs who came with the Jadejas to Cutch in the 13th and to Kathiawar in the 16th century. They were once daring pirates but are now indifferent seamen. They bury their dead and are Hindus or Muhammadans and equally lax whichever religion they profess.

Sanjogis. Sanjogis come principally from the Shahdadpur taluka of the Upper Sind Frontier, Larkana and Sukkur. They were forcibly converted to Islam under the Kalhora and Talpur rule in Sind not more than 150 years ago. The Hindus call them Sanjogis and the Muhammadans Sheikhs. Their customs are either purely Hindu or purely Mussalman or a mixture of both according to their environment. Thus in the Kakar taluka of Sukkur they are Nawakpanthis, follow Hindu customs, worship Hindu gods and employ Sarsudh Brahmans as priests. Instead of the Vedic they observe the Anand or Sikh form of marriage. In the Rohri division the main influence affecting the Sanjogis has been Mussalman. They call a Mulla for their ceremonies, perform nika, worship no Hindu deities and are disciples of Mussalman Murshids and Sayads and bury their dead in the Muhammadan position, In the Mehar and Kambar talukas we get an intermediate type following mixed Hindu and Muhammadan customs.

An exactly similar case is to be seen in the veneration in which Sai Baba, a Mussalman ascetic in Ahmadnagar (who teaches nothing and preaches nothing) is held by Brahmans of high position, some of them Government servants, who have built dharmshalas in his honour.

The tolerance and elasticity of Hindu religion is also to be seen in the variety of Hindu castes that flock to the tomb of St. Francis Xavier at Goa whenever an exposition of the saint's body is held.

Since the above was in type, news has been received that about 150 Molesalam Thakurs have reverted to Hinduism.

'ALL CASTES BUT UNTOUCHABLE.'

(By Mr. S. K. Jain.)

Mr. Din Dayal Jain, Superintendent, Shri Gopal Digambar Jain Siddhant Vidyalaya, Morena (Gwalior), calls the public, through the pages of the Jaina Gazette, to take advantage of the above Vidyalaya. He says that it 'admits all castes but untouchable.' So touchable Hindus, Mahomedans, Parsis, Christians, Jews, Jains, etc., can get admission, except the poor so-called untouchable Hindu brethren. I doubt if the Superintendent knew that there exists in South India one other class called unapproachables, otherwise he would have included that also. The principle of teaching Jaina Siddhanta to all castes with almost all other necessary subjects is laudable indeed, and his earnest appeal to the 'public' for funds deserves delightful and ready compliance. But, I suppose, the Superintendent does not mean by the term 'public' people other than the untouchables and the unapproachables and as such any monetary help from them is not unwelcome. To take help from a certain class of people denying them, at the same time, the benefits

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n839/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

of the Vidyalaya is a grave injustice. Or, to reject help from the untouchables as unworthy to be received is as sinful as to refuse them the benefits of education. It is against the principles of Jain Siddhant which the noble founders of the Vidyalaya have proposed to teach to 'all castes.' Let us see how far the position of the Vidyalaya is morally defensible.

I was under the impression that untouchability was the curse of Hinduism alone. It is the curse of Jainism too! Jainism—as the Editor of Jaina Gazette rightly calls it—is the most democratic of all the religions. It not only preaches the brotherhood of all mankind, but proclaims the equality of all the souls in the Universe. The soul in a plant or bud or animal is potentially equal to that of a human being. All souls are equal in point of their intrinsic nature to God. So the soul in an untouchable is equal to that in a Jaina monk in its inherent nature.

Souls are primarily divided into two classes—the Bhavyas and the Abhavyas. The former class is capable of annihilating the Karmic bondage and of attaining eternal bliss whereas the latter class is not. Man is a Bhavya Jina and is qualified for salvation and therefore entitled to be taught religion. The animals are abhavya and are debarred from salvation because of their general deficiencies in respect of intellect and other bodily and mental functions. Performance of tapas, according to Jainism, is imperative to attain salvation which man alone is fitted to do. Even the residents of heavens and hells are not entitled to salvation as they are not fitted to perform tapas. Therefore man is the principal recipient of religious injunctions. An untouchable or unapproachable is also a man, who is in one sense a degree higher than the heavenly beings and entitled to salvation, as he is fitted to do penance. So he must be taught dharma and to neglect him as untouchable is to deny the above truth.

Love, being the attribute of soul, knows no distinction. All living beings are alike before it. It has a unifying influence. Before it there is no untouchable or unapproachable even as all living beings are equal before God. Hence love is God.

It is this kind of love that the Jinas taught : they not only preached not to injure any living being but to love all. Their followers are abusing it and call a section of the humanity untouchables and neglect them. The duty of a Jaina is not only to practise ahimsa but try to decrease the sufferings of others and increase their happiness. He must try to raise the fallen humanity and show them the path to moksha. He must have mercy on the ignorant unlettered untouchable brethren and uplift them.

The religion as preached by the Liberated Souls is a universal one. The Jainas cannot monopolise it. An untouchable has as much right to know it as a Jaina has, even as Truth is not an exclusive commodity of anyone. He has also a right according to the Law of the Jina to ask a Jain to teach him the Jaina Siddhanta.

Being a Jain myself, I am at a loss to know on what moral grounds the authorities have deliberately denied admission to the untouchables in the Vidyalaya.

Is it because some of them eat carrion and live far away from the town? Is it because some of them are scavengers? Or, is it because they work in the field in the rain and in the hot sun to maintain the abnormal standard of life of the aristocrats?

Let every Jaina, nay, every Indian, bear in mind that we, the touchables, are responsible for their degradation. We do not consider them as human beings : we never try to educate them. Generosity lies not in despising but in elevating those who are placed in less fortunate circumstances. We would keep the parrot at home and teach it. We would have dogs and cats on our laps. We would keep cows and buffaloes and plant trees in our backyard. But we would not consider our brotherman, the so-called untouchable, as equal, much less allow him to pass by our street. Is he less than a bird, or animal or plant? It is virtue to teach an untouchable and elevate him from his filthy life ; but it is more absurd than vice to cage a parrot or a mina and teach it one or two arrogant words. A man from Germany or England can have free access not only to Jaina Shastras but to the sacred books of Hindus also, because he looks neat with his hat and boot. But an untouchable is prohibited! Is there rhyme or reason in this absurd man-made law? Man at times displays his brutish nature ; and this attitude of him towards brotherman, the untouchable, demonstrates the fact.

We treat a certain portion of our own countrymen as untouchables, and we are in turn treated by the Whites as untouchables outside India. How pretty right Dr. Besant is when she says that an Indian has no home of his own. He is treated as a foreigner in his own country and an outcast in every other.

Jainism aims at the establishment of brotherhood, not simply between man and man, but between man and God himself. Every being could attain that bliss. So long as man is infected with the slavish and selfish mentality, salvation is impossible. Slavishness must go and selfishness must be annihilated. Seclusion and narrow-mindedness must yield place to love and broad-mindedness. It is no use boasting of exalted principles of Ahimsa and love. They must be shown in practice. Let us hope the dignified and noble authorities of the Vidyalaya will admit the poor untouchables also and uplift them and thus proclaim to the world that their religion is not an exclusive and narrow one, but a universal religion.

A TRAGIC MARRIAGE.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

It is with painful feelings that I am seeking the hospitality of your columns, for exposing the heinous social scandal involved in the marriage of an orthodox Brahmin, aged about 72, and leading the life of an astrologer and a priest. The second marriage of this individual, at such an advanced age, took place recently in a village in the vicinity of Junagadh, the premier State of Kathiawar. His first wife aged about 60 is still living, and by this wife he has got two daughters, the eldest being about 30 and the youngest about 21

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n840/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

years old. The eldest daughter has five sons and daughters and the second is the mother of one female child. The man had a son by his first wife, who died some years ago leaving behind him a widow whose age at present is said to be about forty years. It is this patriarchal individual, leading a priestly and "religious" life and maintaining himself by reading "shastras" and "puranas" who has not hesitated to enter into the bonds of matrimony with a young victim of about 12 years only, about the same age as his youngest grandchild. It is really most shocking to any one with the smallest grain of humanity in him. The man's action is intolerable in these days of civilization and progress and I wonder how such a man is allowed freely to continue his social relations with the Shree Gaud Brahmin community to which he belongs. Such a man deserves severe condemnation by his caste people and, with a view to give him and others of his ilk a lesson, he should be socially boycotted in every respect. It is, as I honestly feel, the sacred duty of the Dewan of the State to look into such marriages with interest and punish such moral and social culprits by inflicting due punishment, thereby giving a lesson to others like him.

Navsari Chambers, Yours etc,
Fort, 21st July, 1926. C. P. NANAVATY.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE CHILD.

(By. Mr. Bhagat Ram.)

Throughout all the ages mankind has realized that children are the best crop of a country. The hope of the race lies in the children. So, in our day, protect the child, and you have protected the race. If the child is not looked after, all family welfare work is in vain.

A nation rises or falls according to the health of its children. The health of the child depends upon the health of the mother. It is heart-rending to witness almost every day that the victims of wrong customs are Hindu girls in the very flower of their womanhood. The handicaps from which Hindu mothers suffer react most injuriously on the condition of their children too.

Each time that a child dies, it is perhaps a great teacher, a noble ruler, an angelic judge, a capable doctor, a good mother, or a saintly person who disappears.

It is easy to enjoy good health when one is young. The first 7 years of life are the constructive years; if during these first years the health of the child remains sound, the child will have resisting powers throughout his or her life. But if during this period the child is neglected, he or she will grow up like a slender plant with no stamina even to bear its life's burden.

It is an undisputed fact that the mother is the most natural guardian and the greatest benefactor of the child. The child's senses, imagination, reason and expression are best trained under the selfless love of the mother. It is the glorious mission of the mother to serve, and to serve all the time. Hers is the duty to brood over the child through all its earthly existence. The dear mother is ever one with her child even in its dreadful sufferings. It is why the mother is called the Child's Paradise. Hence the child has always a claim upon the mother.

The earlier part of life is the time when impressions are received that last throughout the whole life-period. It is the time that decides whether the life is one of usefulness or failure. How just and natural it is that the child should be trained up to 7 years under the loving care of the mother. Can any one else serve the child with the same generosity, loyalty and friendship as springs spontaneously from the mother's heart?

If all the leaders of our society devoted a day or two in the year to studying the importance of child life, thousands of children would be brought up in a more sensible manner, and would be happier, healthier and stronger to meet the battles of life.

Good diet, care, education, good companions, opportunities for play, healthy atmosphere, happy surroundings, and contentment of mind—, are factors bearing strongly on the early life of the child. Children have the right to demand these things, but they are too young to obtain them for themselves.

It is therefore hoped that all liberal-hearted and public-spirited people would bear their share in carrying out the ideal of the child-welfare movement. So long as the infant mortality here is dreadfully high, so long as Hindu mothers suffer from the peculiar unjustness of our society,—so long will the necessity exist for arousing the patriotic public to a vivid realization of the importance of child-welfare.

CONFERENCE OF ASIATIC NATIONS.

Move to Promote Good Relations.

The promoters of the Pan-Asiatic Society, Tokyo, have issued the following statement:—

Our ultimate ideal as human beings is to make sure that all the races in the world must have the right to exist and share a common prosperity.

Such a great ideal, in our opinion, can only be realized by beginning the gradual working out of the great principle with our neighbours. We cannot expect a world-wide friendship until the time when neighbouring nations have been found helping one another on the principle of mutual existence and common prosperity of all. With this object in view we are calling a conference of all Asiatic races.

It is, moreover, our desire to see the renaissance of the glorious Asiatic civilisation of four thousand years ago effected by the co-operation of all Asiatic races, as a prelude to the establishment of world peace based on the principle of equality and justice to all, irrespective of caste, creed, colour and religion.

Provisional Rules of the Conference.

The following are the (Provisional) Rules and Programme of the Conference:

The Conference will be held under the auspices of the Pan-Asiatic Society of Tokyo and the Great Federation of Asiatic Races Association of Peking. The place and date of the Conference follow: Place: Nagasaki, Japan. Date: Executive Committee Meeting on and after July 15th 1926. Main Conference on and after August 1st 1926. Delegates to the Conference shall be elected in the following way: Japanese: By Pan-Asiatic Society. Chinese: By Great Federation of Asiatic Races Association. Others: Left to the discretion of the races concerned. Invitations will be sent to each country (through the newspapers) or to public bodies representing the race, provided that in case such bodies are unknown, invitations may be sent to individuals for the sake of convenience. The

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n841/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Executive Committee shall decide the following matters: A. Order and method of the meeting. B. All affairs concerning the proceedings of the meeting. The resolutions to be introduced at the Conference, names and addresses of delegates and their dates of birth should be sent to the Executive Committee Office before July 15th, when it is expected to meet. The Pan-Asiatic Society of Tokyo will be responsible for all arrangements in connection with the boarding and lodging of the delegates, the securing of the Conference hall, etc. The Executive Committee Office address is No. 1—1, Uchiyamashita-cho, Kojimachi-ku, Tokyo, Japan. Telephone: Ginza Nos. 215 and 216.

(Provisional) Programme.

I. Meeting of the Executive Committee to be held at Nagasaki from July 1st to July 17th 1926.

It is desirable that each race is represented by more than one member, if possible. Order of business and method of meeting, arrangement of resolutions, and all other matters concerning the Conference will be discussed.

II. Main Conference of All Asiatic Races.

August 1st: Opening ceremony, greetings by delegates, introduction of resolutions, and referring of resolutions to special committees.

August 2nd: Meeting of special committees.

August 3rd: Main Conference, closing ceremony.

III. Investigation Tour.

From August 4th an investigation tour party will be organised and delegates wishing to visit Kyoto and Tokyo will be afforded all facilities.

VICEROY'S ADVICE TO STUDENTS.

The following are extracts from His Excellency the Viceroy's speech on the occasion of laying the foundation-stone of the New College of Science at Nagpur:—

I wish first to assure you of the pleasure I feel in coming here at your invitation to lay the foundation-stone of this College of Science. I am grateful for the opportunity of expressing my warm interest in the scheme itself and my admiration for those who have laboured to make it a success. I must also thank Mr. Tambe for the cordiality with which he has welcomed me in the address to which we have just listened. His reference to my grandfather touched me deeply and it is a special gratification to me to be associated as I am to-day with the cause of Indian education which he had so much at heart. I thank you also for your welcome to Lady Irwin who, I can assure you, joins with me in wishing that every blessing may rest upon this College.

Importance of Science.

The importance of science in modern life, in industries, in agriculture and in every department that affects the public weal has become a common place. Scientific enquiry will take its part, an increasing and vital part, in the great future which lies before this country. India was slower than many western countries to recognise this truth and to give science its proper place in her schools and colleges. For this there were obvious reasons. The traditions of education in India have been largely literary and philosophic. The poet and the mystic breathe a different atmosphere from that expressed by test-tubes and scientific formulae. Moreover the careers generally sought by students were the legal profession or clerical and administrative appointments under Government. And to these men science made no great appeal. The heavy cost of well-equipped laboratories was another difficulty. But if science lagged behind in the early march of education, she is advancing with no uncertain stride to-day. The increase in the number of students of science even during the last four or five years has been remarkable and the annual meetings of the Indian Science Congress have been growing rapily in size and importance.

Scientific Quest.

I am glad to see that this province is taking its share in this great advance and that, in doing so, it is proceeding on such wise and sound lines. For although the study of science has its own high ideals of exactitude and close reasoning, it has much to receive from as well as to give to the students of history, philosophy and literature. It is by contact of different types of mind of diverse lines of enquiry that the spark of true knowledge may be struck. I see that this thought has not been absent from the minds of those responsible for the design of this University. Here will be the cross roads of learning where science will advance hand in hand with humane studies in the common search of truth. The search is no easy one. Whatever be the road along which man may seek the goal, it is certain often to be rough and difficult. Yet those who steadfastly pursue this quest are able to rejoice in a boundless and always expanding liberty. They are pioneers in a country that knows no bounds, not like explorers of the earth surface where every fresh discovery reduces the range of mystery lands, but as travellers in a wider universe, the universe of spirit and intellect, where each new conquest widens the horizon of undiscovered knowledge that we scan. I trust that of the students who are listening to me to-day many will also be ready in due time like runners in the ancient race to hand on the torch to their successors. Gentlemen, as you watch this stone being laid in its place to-day, I would, as you too, remember that the fabric which is to rise from it will stand for the opportunity of bringing precious knowledge to those of your children and your children's children who will be attracted within its walls and that on successive generations will be laid the high duty of keeping its name untarnished and its honour bright.

AN EGYPTIAN LADY EDUCATIONIST.

Miss Zakiya Sulaiman, the Egyptian lady tourist, who arrived at Allahabad a few days back, was interviewed by a representative of the Leader, Allahabad, who called on her at the residence of Major Ranjit Singh, with whom she is staying. Miss Zakiya Hanim Abdul Hamid Sulaiman Bey (as her full name is) is the directress of the kindergarten system of education in Egypt and is in direct charge of Roudatul-Atfal Kasrul Darbar. She is a pioneer of the movement in her country and is one of the strongest advocates of woman's cause in Egypt. After receiving her education in Cairo, Miss Zakiya Sulaiman went to England and was for four years, from 1916 to 1920, at the Cheltenham Ladies' College. Thereafter she made an extensive tour on the Continent and studied the condition of education in various countries, especially that of the infant school in France and the Montessori system in Rome. Asked as to the purpose of her tour Miss Zakiya Sulaiman replied that she was on a visit

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n842/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

to India to study her social and educational conditions and added that her mission was to popularise the kindergarten movement wherever she went. In Egypt itself, she said, kindergarten was first introduced in 1919, and upto 1924 it was in a dormant state. Till then there were only two schools for infant boys in charge of an English lady. But they had not become popular institutions and people hardly knew of them. Though Miss Zakiya Sulaiman has been working for the cause of education in Egypt since 1920 it was only in 1924 that the department came under her effective control. And the progress has been so rapid that to-day there are as many as six kindergarten schools proper and a kindergarten department attached to every primary school. A striking feature of these schools is the mixed classes, in which boys and girls up to the age of 8 years read together. The credit of introducing co-education first in Egypt also goes to Miss Zakiya Sulaiman, who is a great believer in co-education and hopes to see before long grown-up girls and boys reading together even in the universities. She is not in favour of direct introduction of co-education in the universities forthwith. She is of opinion that while separate classes for girls and boys accentuate sex differences, a hasty step may not give good results.

Education in Egypt.

On being questioned as to the attitude of her Government towards education, Miss Zakiya Sulaiman was filled with pride and exclaimed, 'We have state education in Egypt.' The Government provides free elementary education to the masses throughout Egypt, male and female alike. The grants to education are most liberal and she gets the fullest support from the Minister of Education. The Government does all to encourage foreign education and every year sends out girls and boys to Europe and America for the purpose. An idea of the Government's keen interest in the cause of education can be formed from the fact that in the current year alone the Egyptian Government has spent more than £15,000 for the students' (both boys and girls) excursions all over Egypt.

Status of Woman in Egypt.

Miss Zakiya Sulaiman stated that the Egyptian woman was never kept in purdah in the manner in which the Mussalmans of India kept their women. The Arabs having no purdah, it was introduced in Egypt for the first time by the Turks, whose yashmak is a double veil worn in public, the eyes being uncovered. With their yashmak on they could go about. But of late along with the political awakening in Egypt, the social progress has been tremendous. Since the great war and the national upheaval (1919), whatever little purdah there was, it has completely vanished and the Egyptian woman to-day freely takes part in national movements. Miss Zakiya Sulaiman mentioned the name of Kassim Ainin as the first man to start the woman movement in Egypt.

Hindu-Muslim Relations in India.

When invited to express her opinion on the present tension between the Hindus and Mahomedans in this country, she felt extremely concerned and sad. 'If the Muslims in India gave more attention to the teachings of Islam,' said she, 'they will learn that there should be no persecution in religion. Islam is essentially a religion of peace and progress.' If they understand the teachings of the Qoran better there will be no trouble.

Readers will be interested to learn that Miss Zakiya Sulaiman repeatedly resented the expression 'Mahomedan.' She insists upon being called a Muslim and objects to being called a Mahomedan.

In Egypt, she went on to say, people placed country before religion. During the national upheaval the Muslims and the Christians worked under the same flag of 'Cross and Crescent'—an emblem of unity and signifying 'Egypt first and religion next'—instead of the old and traditional flag of Egypt having the Crescent and the Three Stars.

It is yet early for her to give expression to her impressions about India. On being asked as to what struck her most in India she promptly replied, 'Diversity of dress. You have no one national head dress'.

Miss Zakiya Sulaiman will stay at Allahabad up to the first week of August, whereafter she intends to visit Calcutta, Benares, Lucknow, Nainital, Agra, Delhi, Lahore and other places. She is having a busy time in this city, and her stay will not be without an advantage to the cause of female and infants' education.

---

BABY WEEK CAMPAIGN.

The Standing Committee of the National Baby Week, Bombay, held its second educational campaign in the Damodar Thackersey Hall, Parel, on the 25th instant. The hall was overcrowded with visitors composed mostly of mill-hands and workmen.

Several models prepared by the Poona Seva Sadan Society were exhibited explaining sanitary and insanitary wells, ventilated and unventilated houses, the correct and incorrect methods of handling maternity cases and the evils of drinking. Miniature models of a labour room and maternity wards in hospitals were also exhibited. There were also several other models showing how babies should be brought up, etc.

There was a magic lantern show and several slides showing the high rate of infant mortality in Bombay and how to prevent it were exhibited. Dr. Patel explained in Marathi each slide to the audience. He said that children were the wealth of the family, without which a family was sure to be no more, so also was the case of a nation. A nation was sure to decay if the would-be generation was not properly taken care of. In Bombay, out of every 1,000 babies born, 402 died and in Poona the death-rate among babies was even higher. Twenty years ago the mortality figures in India were very much higher than at present, but in England the figures had greatly improved chiefly due to welfare work. The birth-rate in Bombay was nearly the same as in other large cities but the death-rate was much higher and infant mortality even higher. The chief cause of the high rate of infant mortality was the health of the parents. The death-rate of the children increased with the quantity of wine and spirits taken by the parents. Another cause was the hard work extracted from our women even in their pregnancy. Their poverty compelled them to work for their livelihood even up to the day of delivery. The next cause was the crude methods adopted by the village Dais at the time of delivery. To ensure a safe delivery the services of a trained Dai should be secured and if that was not

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n843/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

possible they should be sent to Maternity Hospitals, which were not an uncommon thing in Bombay at present.

Some women give opium to their babies when they cry in order to soothe them. This was very harmful to the baby and opium would cause constipation and obstruct digestion.

Babies should be brought up with all possible care. They should not be kissed but no mother would abstain from doing it. In that case they should be kissed only in the cheeks and not in the mouth. Babies should be taken out every evening for airing either in open hand carriages or in the arms. Only if proper care was taken of our babies they would turn out worthy citizens of India.

Lectures were delivered in Marathi on Health and Maternity problems and with the exhibition of Cinema films the proceedings terminated.

HOW TO FAIL.

One would scarcely look among a list of "best-sellers" for a book bearing a title such as this; books on success are much more in the line of the average reader. Yet, at the risk of being accused of pedantry, one might safely aver that such a treatise would minister to a more widely-felt want, would bear more enlighteningly upon the horizon of the plain man. For where you have one man who can faithfully claim to have succeeded, even according to the world's standard of success, you have a full million who must frankly confess their shortcoming. And strangely enough, the vast majority of the characters which stand out in history as having borne the marks of true greatness are to be found among the larger class. According to the general norm applied by society, what would you say, for example, about the success or failure of men like Moses, Lincoln, Paul, or Jesus?

Having read the apostle's confession, so ingeniously expressed in the words "I count not myself to have apprehended that for which I was also apprehended," we feel a sudden check in our pride, and we begin to wonder if, after all, we have not been entirely wrong in our valuation of life. Here was a man who, of all men, you would have expected to have succeeded: a man seized in his tracks by the overpowering hand of Almighty God, swung around in the opposite direction to that which he himself had chosen to travel, endowed upon his journey with every needed grace, the requisite mettle, unfaltering perseverance, yet a man who never did fully grasp the prize. If one like Paul must speak in such terms, where do we stand? Place his simple acknowledgment of failure beside the coarser pride of Napoleon and you begin to perceive how mysterious, how paradoxical a thing is life. Yet had you been in quest of genuine contentment, where would you have sought it—in the saint within his death cell or in the militarist at the zenith of his career? Paul did not count himself to have apprehended the prize, but he had learnt, in whatsoever state he was, therewith to be content. And that is the one lesson that never seems to be learnt by your deeply-coffered plutocrat, your Rand gold-magnate, your plaudit-sickened political leader.

But the fault does not lie in the coffers, in the gold, or in the applause of the crowd. It lies rather in the homely fact that few men ever learn the most elementary of all the principles of conduct, that happiness depends in no measure whatever upon success. It is not in self-realisation, even in its highest and most spiritual forms, that deep peace of soul is to be found. It was that for which he had been apprehended by Jesus Christ that Paul had not apprehended. And if we could only be happy on condition that we had succeeded in life's loftiest pursuits we should all be sad; for we are all failures. There is nothing worth having in life that can be had. "Man's reach must exceed his grasp." The student, the philosopher, the scientist, the musician—none of these is happy with the happiness of achievement. Satiation is for the glutton and the hog. The most hopeful of all the world's great social movements are anything but successful.

"What's the score?" asks the so-termed sportsman of his friend behind the newspaper, and the unwary question reveals the whole tragic epitome of the waywardness of modern sport. Surely it is not the score, but the game, that counts. Yet we go on counting the value of a man to society by the capacity of his cheque-book, the progress of the Church from her annual "returns," the whole of life in figures on a dial rather than in heart-beats. We worship still the tawdry goddess of success, and we forget that we were really meant to fail. On any other supposition this world is a very hopeless place and there are few that are saved!

To fail—yes; but to fail in good spirits! Not to cherish failure for its own sake, not to make our inevitable "non-apprehension" of the prize a mere excuse for lethargy and flabbiness. Paul had little patience with luke-warmness and the half-hearted. There is a fine honour in never consenting at all to our failure. This great man had so far come short of the ideal, but one thing he was doing—he was pressing on! If we are not intended by a wise God to succeed, we are intended to fail as men should fail, with a brave scramble to our feet after each stumble, a smile upon our streaming brow, and a sprightly dash after the prize again!—The Student Movement, America.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Lord Irwin at Poona: Poona accorded a hearty welcome to their Excellencies Lord and Lady Irwin on Wednesday last. This is probably the first time when a Viceroy pays an official visit to this great historic city, for although both Lords Curzon and Chelmsford paid flying visits, these visits were more or less unofficial and not accompanied by elaborate ceremonial. Immediately after arrival, Lord Irwin received and replied to an address by the Poona Suburban Municipality. Later, at Government House, Lord Irwin received a deputation from the Moslem community, and in reply to their address he appealed for their help as well as that of the Hindus to remove the communal dissensions in India.

A New Departure: We understand that H. E. the Chancellor of the Bombay University has decided to invite Dr. Brajendranath Seal, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Mysore, to address the annual convocation of the Bombay University, which is to be held on August 17 for conferring degrees. This is the first time in the history of the Bombay University that a gentleman from outside the Presidency will deliver the convocation address. Sir Leslie Wilson will preside at the convocation.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n844/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Whom to Vote for: A correspondent writes that now that the electors will soon have to consider whom to vote for, during the coming Council elections, they should use great care in making their choice. They should not vote for a candidate, merely because he is recommended by a political party. He humbly suggests two tests. (a) One test is that he does not drink or has left the habit and is sure to put a strong fight for obtaining prohibition in as short a period as possible. (b) Another equally good test is that he practises Swadeshi honestly, and has been working for it among his countrymen.

A New Law in Mexico: A Reuter's Message dated the 24th July from New york says that 'newspapers are considerably preoccupied with the troubles of the Roman Catholics in Mexico where a new law regulating religion becomes effective from August. The President, General Calles, has issued a proclamation prohibiting religious instruction and worship in all schools and forbidding any cleric to direct a private school. A telegram from Nogales Arizona reports that the Archbishop of Mexico and Bishop Tobasoo have been arrested on a charge of violating the law by calling the Catholics to exert economic pressure on the Government with the object of obtaining an amendment of the church laws.

Miss Bondfield's Election: A message has been received that Miss Margaret Bondfield, who was Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labour in Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's administration, won Walls-end by-election by a large majority on the 22nd instant. The vacancy was caused by the retirement of the Labour member, Sir Patrick Hastings, who was Attorney-General in the Labour Government. There are now six women members of Parliament, of whom three are members of the Labour Party.

Representation for Labour and Depressed Classes: In the House of Commons on the 20th inst., Earl Winterton announced that Lord Birkenhead had adopted the proposal of the Government of India in favour of additional seats in the Legislative Councils for four labour representatives, and eight representatives of the depressed classes. There would be two representatives of Labour in Bombay and one each in the Punjab and Central Provinces. There would be five representatives of the depressed classes in Madras, one in Bombay, and two in the Central Provinces. They would be nominated. The question of such nominations for the Legislative Assembly is being considered.

"Justice" Editor Apologises: A suit for the recovery of damages filed by Mr. O. Kandaswami Chetty against the editor and publisher of the "Justice," Madras, in connection with the publication of an alleged defamatory speech delivered by the Raja of Panagal, came on for hearing on the 22st inst. before Mr. Justice Beasley. The defendant tendered an unqualified apology in the following terms to the plaintiff: "We the editor and publisher of the "Justice" feel sincerely sorry for having published and commented on the speech of the Rajah of Panagal delivered at Tenneri on 1st October 1922. We feel we should not have published the speech. We hereby offer unqualified apology for having done so." The suit was then withdrawn with the consent of both parties and His Lordship awarded Rs. 500 as costs to the plaintiff.

The Punjab Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha: The Hony. Secretary writes: Reports of 260 widow marriages have been received from the different branches and co-workers of the Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha, Lahore (Punjab), throughout India in the month of June 1926. The total number of marriages held in the current year, i.e., from 1st January to the end of June 1926 has reached 1364 as detailed below: 1. According to Castes: Brahman 263, Khatri 171, Arora 188, Aggarwal 194, Kaisth 35, Sikh 159, Rajput 121, Miscellaneous 233. Total 1364. 2. According to Provinces: Punjab and N.W.F.P. 940, Sind 40, Delhi 43, U. P. 263, Bengal 45, Madras 5, Bombay 4, C. P. 6, Assam 4, Behar and Orissa 14, Total 1364. 3. Voluntary donation received during the month is Rs. 58 and the total amount during the year is Rs. 581.

Protection of Children in India: The Society for the Protection of Children in India is now going to be reorganised and registered under the Societies Registration Act. The Society will thus henceforward be an independent and properly constituted body able to carry on its useful activities unfettered by the District Charitable Society to which it formed something like an appendage hitherto. The Memorandum of the Association and the Rules thereunder drawn up under the presidentship of Mr. Justice Rankin, which are of far-reaching importance and based on experience from various viewpoints, have been accepted at a meeting of the members held recently. The case of destitute children will now receive careful attention of the Committee of the new Society. The Secretary, Miss Arbuthnot, gave a brief account of the work which was being done by the Society. We gather from it that 175 fresh cases have claimed the attention of the Society during the present year, they being English, Indian, Anglo-Indian, Italian, Jew and Singhalese. The cases are classed chiefly under destitution, insufficient means, evil surroundings and want of protection. Much of the work of the Society is confined to taking the destitute and unprotected children under its care and giving them proper training, so that they may come out as useful citizens. The want of such a Society is felt all over India and if the Society can open various branches properly equipped to carry on the work more vigorously, it would indeed be taking a step forward in which it is bound to receive the support of all classes of people.—The Express, Patna.

Reconstituted Milk: We came across sometime back in the columns of the Guardian, Calcutta, a new process of preserving milk by turning it into a powder. Our contemporory after referring to an article by Dr. Blackham wrote: "In this connection we have just come across the interesting fact that in Singapore the Cold Storage Co., Ltd., of Australia actually has got a factory at work, which out of the milk powder imported by them reconstituted locally as required a milk, which, according to the Principal Medical Officer of the Straits Settlements (vide Straits Legislative Council: Proceedings of 1st February), "tastes like fresh milk and on analysis is found to be above the standard laid down for fresh milk." This reconstituted milk apparently is now used in the Government Hospitals of the Colony, as also extensively by hotels and private families, replacing the nauseating "tinned" milk which hitherto constituted the bulk of the local milk supply. What, exactly, one would like to know, has been done in India in this direction? On the face of it, the technique of dried milk powder opens up large possibilities for dairying in India, where hitherto distance has militated against such large-scale developments. Possibly this may form the solution of our milk problem and incidentally give a considerable fillip to our agricultural resources." We think it a wise suggestion well worth the consideration of Government.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n845/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Additional Delegate to the League of Nations: The Hon. Sir C. P. Ramaswamy Iyer, Member, Executive Council, Madras, has been nominated as an additional delegate to the League of Nations Assembly which meets at Geneva on September 7th 1926. Sir Ramaswamy Iyer will sail from Bombay per S. S. "Razmak" on August 7th and proceed straight to London to confer with the authorities there before leaving for Geneva. The Hon'ble member will leave Madras on the 2nd or 3rd of August.

ADVERTISEMENTS

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

NEW BOOKS. Two Books of JUST PUBLISHED.

GREAT VALUE.

TALKS ON THE PATH OF OCCULTISM

is a companion volume to The Masters and the Path, and is intended for the daily use of aspirants. It consists of a commentary by Dr. Besant and Bishop Leadbeater jointly on At the Feet of the Master, The Voice of the Silence and Light on the Path, and is full of detailed explanation, advice and instruction.

Pages 969 with full index.

Price: Cloth and Gold Rs. 12.
Boards... Rs. 10.

THE GOLDEN BOOK OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY 1875—1925.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

Issued in Commemoration of the Jubilee of the Theosophical Society by its General Council.

Edited by C. Jinarajadasa, M. A., Vice-President of the T. S.

334 Illustrations and Index.

Cloth and Gold in Art Paper, pp. 421.

Price Rs. 12-8.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, ADYAR, MADRAS

BELLA & CO. LTD.

Tel. Add. "PFAFF." } SOLE AGENTS FOR { Estd. 1921.

STRONG: DURABLE: LIGHT:

Class 11 Family Hand Machine Rs. 90.
Class 31 Tailor Treadle Machine Rs. 140.

BRANCHES ALL OVER INDIA.

Same Price Everywhere.

V. V. THAKUR,
Managing Director,
CARNAC ROAD, DHOBI TALAO,
BOMBAY 2.

THE INDIAN REVIEW.

JUNE NUMBER.

Reaction Against Liberalism. By Mr. J. T. Gwynn, I.C.S. (Retd.)
Coalition of Parties in Legislature. By Mr. Mukandi Lal, M.L.C.
Purgatories or Reformatories. By Prof. Diwanchand Sharma, M.A.,
Gokhale's Legacy. By Mr. G. A. Natesan.
Twelve Years of Rural Work. By Mr. K. T. Paul, O.B.E., B.A.
The Art of India. By Dr. James H. Cousins, D Litt.
Maharajah Jang Bahadur. By Prof. C. S. Srinivasachari, M.A.
The New Dewan of Mysore in Islamic Lands. By Mr. V. B. Metta.
The Message of Buddha. By Mr. R. R. Diwakar M. A.
Indian Public Life. By Mr. K. R. R. Sastry, M.A
Lone Wanderer: (A Poem) By Swami Paramananda
My Experiments With Truth. By Mahatma Gandhi.
The Root of the Evil in South Africa. By Mr. C. F. Andrews.
A Historic Tragedy. By Dr. A. J. Saunders, M.A.
On Growing Old: (A Peom.) By John Masefield.

Single Copy Annas Eight.

Annual Subscription Rs. 5.

A few copies of back numbers of January, February, March, April and May are available. Mahatma Gandhi's autobiography which is printed regularly from the March Number is continued month after month.

G. A. NATESAN & CO.,
Publishers, Madras.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n846/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,75,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co., Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.
Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY,
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED,

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
Nira ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... (District Satara).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kalol ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 9,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n847/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.
(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6|—

Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33|1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.
SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, ... | ... | ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A.:—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n848/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,
Jamnagar (Kathiawar).
Bombay Office:
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to
NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,
Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,
10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.
Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n849/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY No. 4.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

The English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world. Price 15 shillings or Rs. 10. Only a few copies are available.

Apply to :—

THE MANAGER

The "Indian Social Reformer."

Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n850/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1926. No. 49

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Lord Irwin's Visit to Poona.
The Currency Commission Report.
An Ill-Advised Step.
The Ramkrishna Mission, Benares.
Landlords' Disastrous Negligence.
Prohibition and Bombay Government.
Wise Advice.
The Children's Act.
Purchase of Stores.
The New Archimedes.
Evolution of Hindu Marriage—II.
Communal Tension.
The Salvation Army and Proselytization.
Hindu Philosophy Interpreted at Oxford.
Emancipation of Women.
The Ethics of Social Work.
Indian Students in England.
Model Village for Depressed Classes.
The Tilak Vidyapeeth and Tilak College.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Lord Irwin's Visit to Poona: The Viceroy's visit to Poona lasted for a week. Unlike the usual routine of such visits, there was little speech-making and few ceremonial functions. Lord and Lady Irwin spent most of the time in inspecting important institutions engaged in nation-building activities, and there is good reason to think that their visits and words of encouragement were highly appreciated by those connected with the institutions. The visit has produced an excellent impression among all classes, and we have no doubt that similar visits to other parts of the country in the early months of his Viceroyalty will be of considerable help in enabling Lord Irwin to understand the several problems which come before him in the next five years in relation to the needs and conditions of the various Provinces.

The Currency Commission Report: The most important event of the week is the publication of the Report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance. The Commission consisted of the Right Hon. Hilton Young (Chairman), Sir Norcot Warren, Governor of the Imperial Bank, Sir Reginald Mant of the India Office, Sir Maneckji Dadabhoy, Sir Henry Strakoch, Sir Alexander Murray, Sir Purshottamdas Thakurdas, Professor J. C. Coyajee, and Mr. W. E. Preston. The Commission's terms of reference were very wide. They were to examine and report on the Indian Exchange and Currency system and practice, to consider whether any modifications are desirable in the interests of India, and to make recommendations. The Commission have found that the present system does not enjoy the public confidence and must be changed. They reject a scheme proposed by the Indian Finance Department for a Gold Exchange and Currency and recommend a complicated one of their own which they call the Gold Bullion Standard, the main feature of which is gold will not pass into currency but will be made available only for exchange purposes; and they propose to fix the gold rate of the rupee at 18d. Sir Purshottamdas in a minute of dissent objects to the last proposal and pleads for a 16d. rupee. The Government of India have announced their intention to legislate only for the stabilisation of the rupee at 18d. at the forthcoming session of the Legislative Assembly, leaving the larger questions for future consideration. This has been strongly protested against in the Indian press.

An Ill-Advised Step: The Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta has served an order on Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya not to enter Calcutta for the next two months, on account of the effect of the feeling created and likely to be created by his speeches on Hindu-Mahomedan relations. The general opinion is that the order is a great blunder, and that it is calculated to make matters worse instead of better. We think that if sufficient time had been allowed, the pressure of public opinion on the authorities would have led them to recognise their mistake and withdraw the order. Unfortunately, Panditji has taken, for him, the unusual course of resolving to disobey the order and has notified the Magistrate of his intention to arrive at Calcutta to-day (the 7th August). It is a great pity that at a time when the recent communal troubles in Calcutta had barely subsided, a fresh fillip should be given by this unfortunate incident to a controversy which is bound to assume a communal character.

The Ramkrishna Mission, Benares: The noblest form of service that one can conceive of is that rendered to suffering humanity. The Ramkrishna Mission Home of Service, Benares, which has recently published its annual report, has made this service its life-work for the last 25 years. The Mission owed its existence to the direct inspiration of Swami Vivekananda whose boundless compassion for the poor could only be compared to that of the Lord Buddha. The Swamiji's exclamation "My heart bleeds for the poor, the ignorant and the suffering" struck a responsive chord in the hearts of young men who started forthwith the Home of Service which, true to its ideal, has held out a helping hand to the old, the poor and the helpless. Through its quarter of a century of untiring activity, the Mission has come to be recognised as one of the greatest and the most useful institutions in Benares. Besides relieving the distress of those who flock to it by providing accommodation, medical aid, doles and pecuniary help, it has been housing strangers to the city and maintaining a spinning and weaving department. It has now extended its activities into many additional branches. In its work of organised charity, the Home of Service knows no caste or creed. The workers of the Home try impartially to bring succour to all those in need of help and keep them in the path of righteousness, filling their wants and teaching them honest ways of earning a livelihood. Though much has been done still the demands made on it to widen its scope are ever increasing. The claims of orphans, widows and those who are poverty-stricken are pressing on the attention of the Home. We hope the Mission's appeal for funds to carry on the war against disease, squalor, sin and iniquity, caused by poverty and by adverse circumstances, will not fail to meet with a liberal response throughout the country.

Landlords' Disastrous Negligence: It would be hard to believe that there were so many dilapidated houses in Bombay verging on collapse, were it not for the fact that as many as ten buildings came down, causing considerable damage to

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n851/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

life and property, since the monsoon broke out. Without exception all the cases of house collapse were shown to be due to the neglect and callousness of the landlords. The avarice of this class of men coupled with the grinding poverty of the people leads to the occupation of ricketty and dangerous houses which are unfit for human habitation. The Section of the Municipal Act which empowers the Commissioner to deal with this matter is too limited in its scope to enable him to take effective steps. As the Municipal Executive Engineer in a recent interview said that, beyond serving a notice on a landlord calling upon him to pull down or repair his building, the Commissioner can do nothing. He cannot personally inspect a building that he considers unsound and dangerous nor can he compel the tenants living in it to vacate. Under these circumstances, it is imperative that the Municipal Act must be so amended that it can ensure the safety of the people living in Bombay. The housing problem in Bombay has been of late woefully neglected. Sure sign of it is that although the local Council has been in session for a fortnight no member has thought it worth while to break ground on this subject in spite of the considerable excitement caused by recent disasters. The root cause of all the trouble is that in the attitude adopted towards the poor and the ignorant the human factor is totally lacking. They are regarded as so many cyphers.

Prohibition and Bombay Government: The Bombay Government, in spite of its professions about prohibition, does not show any signs of decreasing the facilities for drinking. To a question put by Mr. S. K. Bole in the Legislative Council as to why the owner of a certain liquor shop near Dadar was permitted to sell liquor till 11 p.m. in the night, the Hon. Minister for Excise replied that extension of time was granted to him since the liquor shop was very convenient for Railway passengers at Dadar. The Minister, however, did not explain how it is a necessity for Railway passengers to drink liquor at the beginning or end of a journey. The Minister added that he had consulted the Commissioner of Police and some Railway officials and that they had no objection to the same. So, then, it comes to this, that people living in the locality are to have no voice at all in a matter which vitally affects their health and well-being. The Minister's reply is also indirectly an inducement to other liquor shop-keepers near the railway stations to apply for permission to keep their shops open till a late hour in the night. The same indifference to the welfare of the poor was exhibited by Government when it was urged that the liquor shops near mills should be closed on pay day and the day following, in view of the abnormally heavy sales that take place on those days. It was only after repeated requests that the Hon. Minister agreed that he would try to close the liquor shops on pay days. The attitude of Government in regard to the proposal to concede to the Corporation the right to determine the number and locality of liquor shops in the town and island of Bombay, is also deplorable. Government is adamant in its refusal to reconsider its decision. Government's reply naturally came in for a good deal of criticism at a recent meeting of the Corporation, when Mr. Nariman moved an amendment that as a protest the Corporation representatives should resign from the Excise Advisory Committees. This, however, was an extreme step, and eventually the matter has been referred to the Excise Committee.

Wise Advice: The Hon. Mr. S. R. Das, the Law Member with the Government of India, who is now on a tour in Southern India, in replying to an address presented to him in Madras, gave some good advice to the Non-Brahmins of that Presidency. The Brahmin-Non-Brahmin trouble in the South, if it has not attained the dimensions of the Hindu-Muslim quarrel in the North, has been productive of much bad blood between the two communities and, especially after the introduction of the Reforms, it has degenerated into a scramble for the loaves and fishes of office. Not even the most bigoted Brahmin can deny the legitimate rights of the backward communities, but to penalise the Brahmin simply because he is a Brahmin, is nothing but a tyranny of the majority over the minority. The Hon. Mr. Das rightly pointed out that the question of raising the backward communities should be viewed as a national question and not as a communal problem, and that the raising of the backward classes should never be done to the exclusion of the communities that have already risen. He also advised the Non-Brahmins to put a little more of faith and trust in the Brahmins and warned them not to mistake the opposition of a few die-hards among them to the opposition of the community as a whole. This advice, coming as it does from a disinterested source and a Non-Brahmin to boot, is worth the earnest consideration of his brethren in the Southern Presidency.

The Children's Act: We are glad to see that the public meetings held in Bombay in connection with the Children's Act of 1924, have had some effect upon the Government. Replying to a question by Dr. Paranjpye in the Legislative Council as to why the Children's Act has not been given effect to, the Hon. Mr. Hotson replied that the intention of the Government was to follow the example of other Governments in introducing the Act by degrees and that Parts II and III of the Act, rules for which have been framed and circulated to several societies and persons interested in the matter, will soon be brought into force. The difficulty seems to be that many societies are reluctant to be certified under the Act, unless Government would pay for them a capitation grant for each child admitted. Government pleads inability to find the necessary money in view of financial stringency. It is a pity that whenever questions intimately affecting the welfare of the people arise the plea of financial inability should crop up. If only Government has the will, it can find the requisite money in a thousand and one ways. It is gratifying to note that Mr. Hotson is in favour of the suggestion for a Conference made by Mr. Kanji Dwarkadas to discuss the whole subject and to appeal to the charitable public for financial support. We have no doubt that the public of Bombay will make a response worthy of the cause.

Purchase of Stores: Mr. Lalji Naranji, addressing the second quarterly meeting of the Indian Merchants' Chamber, dwelt upon the unsatisfactory policy pursued by the High Commissioner of India in regard to purchase of stores. He referred in particular to the indents for cement placed with foreigners whereas cement of sufficient quantity to meet the needs of the country and of equal, if not better, quality can be had in this country. The High Commissioner issues a statement of his purchases every six months and meanwhile the public of India are kept entirely in the dark. Like the Indian Stores Department, the High Commissioner should issue a weekly statement so that the public may have an idea of the purchases made. Mr. Lalji also referred to the practice of indenting officials asking for urgent deliveries when a short delay would not matter much. These officials may not care, but it is India that has to pay for their lavishness.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n852/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, AUGUST 7, 1926.

THE NEW ARCHIMEDES.

The week opened with the publication of a verbose document signed by a number of gentlemen, Hindu and Mahomedan, constituting themselves into a new party to be known as the Indian National Union to carry on a persistent propaganda against communalism in all forms. All persons who do not belong to a communal organisation are invited to join the party, in the opinion of whose promoters, "the only real remedy which can save us from disaster is the deliberate establishment in our midst of a national consciousness and national atmosphere, in which religious and communal conflicts and passions will be relegated to a subordinate and lower plane." Pandits Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Motilal Nehru distinguished themselves some months ago by making certain "drastic" proposals for stamping out communal riots, which were laughed out of court by the whole country. That was a striking instance of how men of great reputation and great ability can, in a moment of impulse, lend themselves to wild-cat proposals which clash against elementary principles of government by law. The present scheme scarcely displays greater insight into them. We assume, of course, that it is seriously intended to quell communalism by the operations of the new Society. There are people who suggest that the movement is merely a device of the astute leader of the Swaraj Party to dish Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya who is becoming a dangerous rival to power in Upper India with his Hindu Mahasabha and the Maharashtra politicians who are nearly all Responsive Co-operationists and adherents of the Hindu Mahasabha. A wag also suggests that the aim of the new party, put briefly, is to put God in the third place and Pandit Motilal Nehru in the first place. The Pandit is a clever politician and it is impossible to say that he has no ulterior object in view in starting this Society, especially as he does not propose to wind up the Swaraj Party which is pledged to support communalism in the shape of communal electorates. The presence among the signatories of the Right Hon. Srinivasa Sastry, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and one or two other Hindus, is easily explained. They find that communal troubles have been increasing, that Lord Birkenhead and others are making the most of them to retard political progress, and that something has to be done to meet the situation created by these two facts. In default of anything better, the Nehru-Azad scheme may be given a chance, especially as it expressly assures every one that he need not give up any of his political convictions and may continue to remain in his own special political party. We cannot regard this as a serious attempt to grapple with the communal problem. On the contrary, it may do harm. There are many liberal-minded men, Hindus and Mahomedans, whose presence and influence in the communal organisations is likely to do more to temper communal exacerbations than their coming out of them, leaving them to be guided solely by communal extremists. A philosopher undertook, with the aid of a short and simple lever to divert the globe from its present orbit, provided he was given a point in space to operate from. The new party is such a point from which its Pandit-Maulvi originators undertake to divert the Indian communal system from its course by means of their "persistent agitation." The manifesto, as might have been expected, has not created even a ripple on the surface of communal politics. The country has simply ignored it.

EVOLUTION OF HINDU MARRIAGE—II.

We showed last week how Mr. V. Venkatachallam Iyer's paper in the Mysore University Magazine on the "Sanatana Dharma of Hindu Marriage" is vitiated by his complete misunderstanding of the meaning of the words "Sanatana Dharma" and sacrament. Hindu Marriage is not a part of Sanatana Dharma, because Hindu marriage, as Mr. Iyer shows, has passed through many phases, while Sanatana Dharma is as the words mean something eternal, unchanging and unchangeable. Hindu marriage is a "sacrament" because the relation which it creates is conceived as subsisting for ever notwithstanding the cessation, interruption, perversion or diversion of the sexual relations between husband and wife. The common factor between Sanatana Dharma and the sacramental relation is that they are both unconditioned by the limitations of mundane things.

Sanatana Dharma and the sacramental relation are the ideals inspiring the evolution of the Hindu religion and marriage, the touchstones upon which Hindu religious and social reformers have to try and prove that their reforms are in the line of the race-consciousness of the Hindu people. Modern psychology by the light it throws upon the great part which the "unconscious" or "sub-conscious" mind plays in individual and social life, has given us an insight into the causes of the success or failure of reforms. We now understand and can appreciate the true meaning of Christ's parable of the sower, why some ground on which the seed fell was rocky, why weeds choked it in others, and why only in some it struck root and bore fruit.

Putting aside Mr. Iyer's special pleading, let us try to understand what exactly is the significance to be derived from the cases cited by him. Let us take first the classic case of Jabala. It is narrated, in the Chandogya, one of the canonical Upanishads, that a boy named Satyakama applied for admission as a pupil to a teacher who, in those days, was a religious philosopher of repute and with whom his pupils lived as members of his family during their period of tutelage. The teacher to whom Satyakama applied, asked him the name of his father, but the boy could not tell him. So he was asked to go back and obtain the information from his mother. The boy went home and told his mother, Jabala, of the master's enquiry, and she replied that she could not say as in

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n853/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

her youth she had to move about much as a servant. "My name is Jabala, and your name is Satyakama. Tell the teacher that you are Satyakama Jabala." The boy returned to the teacher and repeated what his mother told him. Whereupon the teacher was pleased and said: "You have spoken the truth and the whole truth. No other than a Brahmin would have done it." He took the boy into his school on the spot.

The Upanishad is a philosophical treatise and not a work on sociology. The incident is casually brought in to introduce a disquisition, but on that account its sociological value is all the greater. It is not clear why Mr. Iyer has brought in this case as there is no reference to marriage in it. It may only show that in those days there were teachers who would not visit the sins of their parents upon their children. It also shows that truthfulness and not the mere accident of parentage was regarded as determining the status of Brahminhood. A liar, though he was the son and grandson of Brahmins, would not have been admitted by Satyakama's teacher as a Brahmin. This is in conformity with the ancient usage which determined a man's caste not by his birth, but according to his qualities; conduct and character. Caste had not hardened into the hereditary institution that it is now. This is the plain and natural meaning of the text. Mr. Iyer, however, starting on the assumption that the Brahmin caste was what it is now, and that Jabala was a girl of that caste, proceeds to argue that the Brahmins at one time did not attach any importance to the marriage sacrament. To our mind, the very fact that Jabala's case was thought worthy of notice in a philosophical treatise, shows that it was an exceptional case in which the sublimating virtue of truthfulness was held to condone a previous irregularity of life.

COMMUNAL TENSION.'

( By Mr. C. Sundrier, B. A. )

In his impassioned speech at the Chelmsford Club on the present communal trouble in the country, His Excellency the Viceroy made a fervent appeal in the name of religion. Religious strife is not a new phenomenon. It is a recurring feature in the history of every community in the world. If there have been no religious wars in the twentieth century, it is not because men have grown more tolerant of creeds that conflict with their own, but because religion has been relegated to the background and Mammon-worship has usurped its place. To the thinking mind, the violence displayed in the recent communal riots at Calcutta and elsewhere is a hopeful sign for the future, because it shows that religion is taking its hold again in the hearts of the people. It shows how close to the heart of both communities religion is. Both Hindus and Muhammadans are bred and born in the belief that religion is their dearest possession on earth, for which naturally they will fight while there is breath in the body.

The fact that quarrels and fights often occur now between Hindus and Muhammadans should not make us oblivious of the more important fact that they have lived together in concord and amity for several centuries. Each community consolidating its position on the plea of self-defence, the Government increasing either the police force or the political privileges of either community, may be a temporary palliative, but is certainly no complete cure for the disease, which, starting with a political colour, took a religious hue, and now threatens not only our business life but even our domestic peace. The problem can be really solved only by the educated classes of both communities mixing together more freely, by their showing toleration for what they consider to be the other fellow's follies, by inter-dining and by inter-marriage. In fact, the last involves the rest, and was practised even by Moghul Emperors, who knew their business. The cultured leaders of both communities should live in closer contact with one another, and when this comes to be, we should not be surprised to see a Muhammadan endowing a Hindu temple, or a Hindu offering his prayers in a mosque.

The trouble, apparently, is not only in getting the leaders together, but in getting any leaders at all who are sincerely and deeply interested in religion. Dr. George Grimm begins the preface to his book on "The Doctrine of the Buddha" with these words: "No seeing man possessed of even half an eye will be disposed to dispute that our present age is a thoroughly irreligious one". He comes to the conclusion that "whoever really desires to help present day humanity can only help it by again restoring to it its sense of religion". He observes that "it might be thought that at least every man of the better class of mind, at the very least the leaders of mankind, would see it quite well, and therefore would feel bound to direct all their energies towards making a home for religion among the nations. But the terrible thing is precisely this, that of men of this better class of mind hardly any more are now at all to be found, and that particularly for the leaders of mankind the religious factor no longer has any existence at all, so that they are veritably like captains who with their own hands steer the already wrecked ships of state into the maelstorm that roars in wait for it at the end of the long voyage of the social problem."

It is, indeed, tragic that "religion, which intended to bring people together, should generate hatred instead of love". It is a great pity how little religion is understood by those resorting to violence, be they Hindus or Muhammadans. Poor misguided people, they have an instinctive, hereditary reverence for something they know not what, and they give expression to it in the only crude form they are capable of, mistaking physical violence for religious zeal.

THE SALVATION ARMY AND PROSELYTIZATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

During the last night's public meeting at the Cowasji Jehangir Hall in connection with the Bombay Children Act of 1924, in the course of your remarks when ad-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n854/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

dressing the gathering, you stated the following: "If the Salvation Army and other institutions would abandon their proselytizing methods, a larger field of useful labour would open up to them." We think your observation is rather unfortunate, especially so in the light of what has recently been published in your valuable weekly, the Indian Social Reformer, bearing upon the same point. We thought that, as a result of our Brigadier Dayasagar's explanation of our position, and your subsequent editorial modifying your previous comment, the position would have been made clear so far as the Salvation Army is concerned.

We had no opportunity of combating your remark in last night's meeting, and, even if we had, it is not the policy of the Salvation Army to fight opposite opinions on the public platform, but we wish to make it clear that in our social work we do not proselytize as you appear to think and publicly declare.

Moreover, we challenge you to bring forward a single instance on proselytization at our Social Institutions, and invite you at any time to visit the same, as other editors (Indian) have done, and see things for yourself. We refer especially to the Women's Rescue Home, Matunga, and the Willingdon Boys' Home, Byculla.

If notwithstanding our statement and invitation to visit our institutions for your personal first-hand knowledge and information, you still maintain your present views and publish them, we can only assume that it is due to prejudice of another kind which you do not make publicly known. We are of the opinion that your attitude and remarks bearing upon the Salvation Army are not reconcilable with the title of your weekly publication, the Indian Social Reformer, and do not help forward the cause which you claim to have been your life-long work.

The Salvation Army has been the pioneer of practical social reform work for a great many years in this and other lands, and much of what others are doing to-day is the outcome. We have nothing to fear, but only desire the real facts to be clearly understood by those who are seeking to influence public opinion.

Yours faithfully in the cause of practical social reform.

Chas. A. Peck, Major,
Bombay, July 29th, 1926. Social Secretary.

[ Mr. Natarajan was deploring the absence of national institutions to which rescued children may be sent. He said that there were Salvation Army and other Christian Missionary institutions but these were not acceptable to the people. He added that he had many friends among Christian Missionaries and had often begged them to give up proselytising, as then many doors would open to them which were now closed against them. We accept Major Peck's assurance that there is no proselytising in Salvation Army homes. There may be none in other Mission institutions also. But the point is that these institutions being run by agencies whose aims are avowedly denominational are felt by the great majority of Hindus and Mahomedans to be unsuitable as homes for homeless children of their communities. That this is the fact, Major Peck can easily ascertain for himself. All that it was intended to be said was that Hindu and Mahomedan institutions should be started in order that the co-operation of the Indian public may be ensured for the working of the Bombay Children Act. Ed. I. S. R. ]

HINDU PHILOSOPHY INTERPRETED AT OXFORD.

Mr. S. Radhakrishnan, George V. Professor of Philosophy, University of Calcutta, who is now in Europe as a delegate of the University, was elected to deliver the "Upton Lectures in the Philosophy of Religions." This is the first time that a Hindu had been invited to interpret the message of his religion at Oxford. We publish below the report of the speech as taken by Dr. Surendranath Sen, M A. Ph. D:

It is seldom that a Hindu is invited to interpret the message of his religion at Oxford. People here know little of our religion and even that little is not free from gross inaccuracies and exaggerations, for the average Englishman does not go to scholars for any information about India and Indians. He finds an easier way of informing himself and credulously accepts whatever his friend the missionary chooses to tell him. The ignorance of the most cultured men about things Indian is, to use a mild term, appalling. We were therefore agreeably surprised when Mr. S. Radhakrishnan, George V. Professor of Philosophy at Calcutta, was invited this year to expound the principles of Hinduism before an Oxford audience. It is an honour of which any scholar may feel proud, for men of established reputation alone are elected to deliver the "Upton Lectures in the Philosophy of Religions" and Professor Radhakrishnan's immediate predecessors were Evelyn Underhill, Dr. Peabody and the famous Dean of St. Pauls. At first an eminent Professor of Manchester was invited to speak, but when Principal Jacks learnt that the well-known author of "Indian Philosophy" was coming here as a Delegate of the Calcutta University, he induced the Committee to revise their arrangement and avail themselves of this opportunity of listening to the "best living interpreter of Hindu Philosophy."

Time Ill Chosen.

The time for the lectures was very ill chosen for it coincided with the eight weeks boat races, and we were afraid that few people will care to forsake the races to attend a course of abstruse lectures on an unfamiliar subject. But Professor Radhakrishnan can make even the most complex philosophical problem interesting to an audience of laymen and the lecture hall was not only crowded but many late-comers had to go away disappointed. It was not an easy task to explain the whole range of Hindu thought and social customs in a short course of four lectures. But Professor Radhakrishnan accomplished this with such success that it was no wonder that he received numerous invitations to speak at different seats of learning, but the time at his disposal was unfortunately limited and he could not accept them. He has delivered a similar course of lectures in the King's College, London, but we wish that he could accept the invitation of Cambridge and Edinburgh as well.

Hindu Religion is Experience, not Dogma.

His Oxford lectures will soon be published, but I may give here a short summary for the readers of the "Forward". In his first lecture the Professor pointed out that religion in Hinduism is experience and not dogma, not belief in authority. As God is infinite, so the limited experiences of different people about Him must inevitably differ. The Hindu therefore did not

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n855/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

question any such experience that did not quite coincide with his own for he knew that the conflicting representation of the experienced reality shows only the imperfection of our logic and not the unreality of God. But the Hindu recognised at the same time that all representations of the Supreme were not equally correct though they had all some amount of truth in them and though they were all based on experiences of undoubted value. These different representations of God were therefore arranged in a hierarchical order as less correct and more correct. They progressed from truth to truth and not from error to truth.

MISSIONARY CHARACTER OF HINDUISM.

In his second lecture Professor Radhakrishnan emphasised the missionary character of Hinduism. The Brahmin, the Sufi and the Christian mystic, he said, do not differ vitally so far as the experience is concerned. There was no need therefore for quarrelling about names. The Hindu readily accepted the names with which his culturally inferior neighbours were familiar, but he clothed these old names and old gods with new conceptions. This method makes for religious peace and harmony. The other method of converting the whole world into one religion has led to persecution in the past and is fraught with mischief for the future The Hindu did not recognise or believe in any statutory way of salvation.

MAYA AND KARMA.

The third lecture was devoted to the doctrine of Maya and the theory of Karma. Maya, said Professor Radhakrishnan, does not mean that the world is an empty dream. The reality of empirical and ethical distinction is secure even with Sankara's doctrine of Maya. Karma according to him is not fatalism and Hindu thought is not pantheistic in denying a distinction between God and Man.

ORIGIN OF CASTE.

In his fourth and last lecture the Calcutta Professor dealt with the origin of caste. He frankly admitted the defects of the caste system as it now stands. But he pointed out that the Hindus had an immensely difficult problem before them when they first settled in India. They had to deal with various people in different stages of culture and civilization. They could pursue three different policies in their relations with people in different stages of culture and civilization. They could pursue three different policies in their relation with their new neighbours. Firstly there was the policy of extermination. The Hindu rejected this policy not only as ruthless but also as wasteful. It may be reasonably asked what the world loses, if a backward race like the Zulus is exterminated, but answered the Proffessor, the cultural possibilities of a race are always very difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain. No one denies to-day the immense contribution made by the English to the progress of the civilization of the world. But what a sorry picture do we find of the ancestors of the same Englishmen in the pages of Julius Caesar! Would not it be a tremendous cultural loss to the world if the Romans exterminated the inhabitants of Britain? The second possible policy was that of subordination. But the aboriginal inhabitants of India were too numerous. So the Hindu followed a policy of racial conciliation, and caste was the result of this policy of live and let live. Racial amalgamation by intermarriage was out of the question as that would mean cultural annihilation for the numerically inferior Hindus.

In thanking the lecturer Principal Jacks said that while listening to him he had often felt inclined to exclaim that he (Rev. Jacks) was also a Hindu, for Hinduism is the most hospitable religion in the world.

What impression this short course of four lectures has made on an Oxford audience has been best expressed in the following lines quoted from an Oxford paper:

APPRECIATION OF AN OXFORD PAPER.

"Professor Radhakrishnan's Lectures, given under the Upton Trust, have constituted a notable event. The matter of the lectures, on the Philosophy of Hinduism, was profoundly important and interesting, and they were delivered with a command of the subject matter and a power of exposition which greatly impressed all who heard them. Hinduism, as expounded by Professor Radhakrishnan, may be said to have illustrated the principles of Manchester College on a scale of which those acquainted only with Western Religion have no knowledge. The lectures were as eloquent as they were profound. The audiences were large, varied and attentive; and it is noteworthy that they increased almost to the point of inconvenience in spite of the fact that they were held during Eights Week, when even the best lectures in Oxford have difficulty in gathering an audience."

Prof. Radhakrishnan rendered a real service to his country when he accepted the invitation of the Upton Trust Committee. It is a pity that lack of time did not permit him to carry the message of his country to Edinburgh and Cambridge and we hope his American tour will not be so short as his sojourn in England and his activities there will not be confined to Chicago alone: Forward, Calcutta.

EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN.

NEW EGYPTIAN MOVEMENT.

Mme. Pahmy Wissa Bey, who arrived in London in mail week from the Conference of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance in Paris, is a leader of the women's movement in Egypt. It is a recent development, and like all the other movements in Egypt it has grown out of the National movement. "We had first to have a Parliament," she explained in an interview, "before we began to talk about votes for women."

Long before the war, she said, an Egyptian woman writer worked for the emancipation of women. She was a Mohammedan and her hope was to free them from the veil, but she died without accomplishing this.

The new movement had its real beginning in March 1919, with a demonstration made by a thousand veiled women in the streets of Cairo. This was after the military had been called out to suppress a demonstration by the Nationalists against the refusal to let Zaghlul Pasha leave Egypt with a delegation for England.

The women, full of indignation, said they would also demonstrate, and there followed the extraordinary scene of these secluded women wrapped in their veils attempting to march through the streets. The soldiers barred their way and made them disperse. They returned to their homes, but have never gone back to the old way of thinking that was symbolised by the veil, nor do they wear the veil except occasionally and for its beauty.

A number of these women had been interested in social and patriotic work, and now they were fired with the belief that they could help their country in many practical ways. They had not been organised and most

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n856/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

of them had not known each other before that day, which not only introduced but united them. They at once organised several societies, each of which carries on its own special work.

GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The new Women's Society is engaged in educational and philanthropic work. "We all came together and said, 'Now what can we do for Egypt' and we started a school for girls which has two hundred pupils. They receive an elementary education and training in a great variety of industries, machine-knitting, dress-making, carpet-making and so on. They are doing well, for the Egyptians are very industrious and efficient."

Another society whose members have been elected by Egyptian women is political and aims at Egyptian independence. Mme. Wissa is its President. The Feminist Union is a suffrage society and in 1923 it was affiliated to the International Woman Suffrage Society at the International Conference in Rome. It aims at securing complete political equality and at changing the laws relating to marriage and divorce, and it has already secured legislation fixing the legal age for marriage at sixteen years for a girl and eighteen years for a youth. It is now working to abolish polygamy. Polygamy is not practised by the upper classes, but it is by no means uncommon for a peasant to have two or even three wives.

"We want our girls to have equal chances of education, for the building up of the home depends on the women, and the home means the coming generation. It means Egypt. This demand for the education of girls is widely supported by the parents who understand its importance. There are now two women's clubs in Egypt, one of which is a Christian training centre, a purely Egyptian enterprise."

Mme. Wissa said the number of men and of women of Egypt was almost equal. Organised women are trying to uplift their nation in every way. One way is by raising the moral standard in all political and social dealings. The ideal they upheld was that of moral integrity.

DRUG TRAFFIC.

As social reformers the Mohammedan women are trying to get rid of many traditions that do not belong to Mohammedanism but have grown around it. "We want," said Mme. Wissa, "to fight the drug traffic and to improve the conditions of the fellaheen—who are the backbone of the nation. With regard to education and hygiene, we hope to have in every town branches of our Society to bring women together for these purposes. And we are now organising a campaign to send young men and women all over the country to preach against the use of drugs. We know that our country can never reach the standard we are aiming at unless it has a system of compulsory education, but we realise that in present conditions this would mean that the fellaheen would leave their fields and crowd into the cities. So we want to improve the conditions of life in the villages, first of all by introducing a supply of fresh water. The scanty water they get is not clear and we shall not get rid of the diseases that are causing great havoc until we get good fresh water. We also want sanitation, for at present there is none in the villages, and better homes for the workers. We suggest that the landowners should spend a few months every year among their tenants to understand how they live. Instead of that they are accustomed to spend their lives in the city enjoying the luxuries provided by the fellaheen's hard toil."

The fellaheen, who work tirelessly and make the wealth of Egypt, pay heavy taxes. Mme. Wissa said she thought there was more public spirit among the rich men than there used to be, and still more among the wealthy women. There are several industrial schools for girls, a very good child welfare centre in Cairo, and dispensaries in different parts of the country.

Mme. Wissa herself belongs to a Coptic family and she explains that, while Egypt has assimilated other races who have come with successive invasions, the Copts who are Christians are the descendants of the Egyptians of Pharaonic times. She has a tremendous pride in her country, in its ancient history, its industrial efficiency, and high moral standard, and a profound belief in its great future.—The Statesman.

THE ETHICS OF SOCIAL WORK.

Galsworthy has suggested that one of the first principles of training a child is to make him aware of other people. Case workers have learned that lesson in some degree or they would hardly be at their present jobs. They are sensitively aware of their clients as individuals or families, but are they aware of the attitude and relationship of their clients to the community? If social work is to be numbered among the professions, it will have to accept the basic principle of all professional ethical codes—service to humanity. Why is it that social workers are so often conscious of two distinct forces, apparently pulling in opposite directions? In the various relationships within the professions, there is usually a harmonious interweaving in the general professional interest, but sometimes there seems to be lack of harmony and even conflict. In all professions, and through every code, it is most difficult to effect a reconciliation between the individual interests of the client and the best interests of the public.

The relationship between the social worker and his client differs greatly from the relationship between a lawyer and his client. One wonders why the word client was chosen unless it could have been that the root meaning, "one who hears or listens," was taken into account. John Doe may be equally as much in need of the service of the case worker and equally as anxious to get it, as his garrulous, exacting wife who comes asking assistance in obtaining a larger percentage of John's pay envelope and in breaking him away from the poker gang that meets tri-weekly. Neither John nor his wife will be thought of as the client, but the family will enter into some sort of relationship with the social worker for which we may have to coin a new name. Clients are not problems. They are people with problems. The question of the need to be met rather than that of any one individual coming first and securing certain services is the factor to be considered.

The approach to the question as to where the social worker's first duty lies, depends to a large extent on the position he holds as a worker. An executive may argue convincingly that the best interests of both client and community must ultimately be the same. He may urge the necessity of taking a long view, and insist that one of the main jobs of the case worker is to help his client adjust himself in the community. It is evident, too,

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n857/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

that chaos would result if laws, written and unwritten, were broken wholesale. The field worker, on the other hand, is apt impulsively to say, without reservations, that his first duty is to his client, always, though no one realizes better than the field worker that community standards play a most important part in any work with individuals. His chief argument is that usually in dealing with people who have come into conflict with the community, the time element is a very considerable factor. Sometimes your theoretical beliefs have to be temporarily suspended while you deal with a situation which cannot wait for you to change attitudes.

The little vexing problems met day by day which may even run counter to the seemingly obvious rules of conduct cannot be covered by any code of ethics. Shall the rule of never giving addresses to instalment men be broken when William Smith makes no attempt to pay his debts even when able to do so? We seem to be able to brace ourselves better to meet, if not to settle, the larger moral problems that arise. No code of ethics could be detailed enough, nor could the drafters of it be wise enough to cover all these points. The ethics of social work cannot be summed up into a series of commandments which can be applied everywhere and always, without regard to the particular situation, or a comprehension of the ends to be attained, or thought of consequence. Behind rules there must be an ideal and when rules clash the ideal will have to be the guide.

Discussion as to possible clashes between the individual and the community might go on endlessly. It appears to be too difficult for a starting point, but if it can be settled in any satisfactory way, the rest of this section of a code of ethics is comparatively easy. If we can agree that the case worker's first duty is to his client, unless this jeopardizes the welfare of the community, we can at least make a start. Just what we as individual case workers mean by duty to a client will depend to a large extent on our equipment for our task, which will include our own aims and ideals.

Our next step will be our standards of conduct towards the client. He should have the best we can give him and an increasing best. In our personal contact with him we shall remember that he is a person, not just a problem. "Patience and delicacy should characterize all the acts of a physician," reads a physician's code of ethics. It seems equally deserving of a place in a social worker's code. From a dentist's code, I take this, "His manner should be firm, yet kind and sympathizing, so as to gain the respect and confidence of his patients, and the simplest case committed to his care should receive that attention which is due to operations performed on living sensitive tissue."

The sacredness of confidences should have an important place in the social worker's code. The confidences given should be held as a trust. They are given to the worker as a representative of his agency. The ethical code with reference to the worker's relation to his organization and to his profession, as well as his duty towards his client, will come into play here, to make him guard carefully these confidences. A proper guarding of these will mean that they are kept somewhere besides in the worker's head, or the key to the whole situation may be lost. Special means of safe-guarding records have been devised and are in use in many agencies. Sacredness of confidences certainly means that they shall not be used as a general topic of conversation, nor discussed on the street car nor in public places

After confidences on the part of the client might come promises on the part of the worker "He should encourage no false hopes," is a negative way of putting it. Outwitting is not part of social work, and frankness and honesty should rather be the tools employed. There are unusual cases where there is the necessity of protecting the individual from himself and the community from him, but real emergencies are few and we are apt to carry over emergency methods into our every day work. The changing attitude of the doctors on this point is of interest, and we find them in practical agreement that in the majority of cases nothing but good could come of complete honesty. Partnership produces better results than awe, and large promises that cannot be fulfilled are never effective.

The much talked of advice by which the case worker is so well-known has some place in drafting up relationships with our clients. We are dealing with human beings and it is a tremendous responsibility to have a part in the making of plans for anyone's well-being. Advice given without adequate knowledge savours of immaturity, and a desire to do something rather than to study what is the best thing to do. It should be sincere, and, so far as possible, should contain positive elements rather than negative ones. Very few people to-day are easily impressed by the wisdom of other people, and if we could keep this in mind when giving advice, it might be given in such a way that it would be as one client expressed it, "just common sense."

The client should expect certain things from the worker—punctuality, attendance to detail, consideration, encouragement and a freedom from that deadening atmosphere of busyness too often to be found around our overworked case workers.

But what of our "hopeless" families,—the non-co-operative, the undeserving, and the unreasonable ones? Again, we quote from the physician's code—"The physician should not abandon or neglect the patient because the disease is incurable." Surely these people demand of us something more than a scornful labelling, and perhaps if we gave them intelligent and painstaking attention and understanding, they might not cling so closely to those unfortunate labels. At the other extreme, we have our "pet" families, and our treatment of them might be changed if we tried to justify some of our actions towards them by a professional code of ethics.

Preventive and educational work must go hand in hand with service to the individual, and gradually, out of service to the individual emerges service to the community. This means more than the service of one group to another and suggests that all shall unite in promoting the common good. There are public needs as distinct from the needs of the individual. Everyone has a duty to the community as a citizen, and the social worker has the added duty of being definitely committed to the promotion of social betterment. If he realises this phase of his citizenship, he will be a student of social conditions and alert to press for action when he finds these conditions needing remedy.

A realization of duty towards the public will prevent the worker having an undue absorption in his own task. He will feel bound to help the community by doing his

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n858/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

own work in as highly skilled a way as possible, and he needs to know how his own job fits in with the whole scheme of community work. The public is larger than social worker and client, but does include them. An ethical code means more than the relationship of the social worker to others, either as client or as the community, for, he, too, is included and his welfare is someone's duty. Social workers should expect that the community will stand behind them financially and otherwise—if they are real public servants—so that they may be permitted to give their best service to the client and to the community.—Social Welfare, Toronto.

INDIAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND.

The following notification has been issued by the Director of Information, Bombay :—

Those students who propose to proceed out of India for further study will no doubt be interested to learn that a circular has recently been issued by the High Commissioner to Vice-Chancellors of all Indian Universities explaining the reason for the increasing difficulties experienced by Indian students in England in obtaining admission into British Universities and in securing good degrees owing to their ignorance, on the commencement of their studies there, of any modern European Languages other than English.

A knowledge of at least one modern European language is generally required from all students entering Universities in the United Kingdom. At the University of Oxford, for instance, the authorities are anxious that all students should pass the first Public Examination not later than the first Academic Year. As a knowledge of French is necessary for this purpose, the Colleges are most reluctant to consider for admission applicants who have not already attained a sufficient standard in this language, and who, if admitted, would have to begin an elementary course, necessitating private tuition and consequent sacrifice of time from the real degree work with which the Colleges are naturally most concerned.

The following is a list of some of the leading Universities and Colleges in the United Kingdom requiring, for admission, a sufficient standard of efficiency in the languages noted against them.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cambridge | ... Various Tripos Examinations. | French and German. In some cases Italian and Spanish. |
| London | ... Faculty of Economics | French or German. |
| | Final B.Sc. (Economics) | Do. |
| | I. Sc. | Do. |
| | B. Sc. | Do. |
| Durham | | |
| Armstrong College | ... Honours B. Sc. in Pure and Applied Science. | French or German, Spanish or Italian. |
| Birmingham | ... B. Sc. | French & German. |
| Manchester | ... Final B. Sc. | French or German. (Scientific literature to be read in the language mentioned above) or any other language approved by the Faculty. |
| Leeds | ... Final B. Sc. (Pass and Honours) | French and German. |
| Scottish | ... Honours Examination. | French and German. (Scientific work). |
| Wales | ... Honours Exam. in Pure Science. | French or German. |

It may also be mentioned that the preliminary Examinations of the various professional bodies (Medicine, Law, Accountancy, &c.) in the United Kingdom similarly involve a knowledge of at least one modern language.

Indeed apart from the question of securing good degrees at British Universities it is hardly necessary to emphasise that for Indian students who go to Europe for Western instruction in such subjects as Science, Economics, Education, &c., a reading knowledge of French or German or preferably both is essential if they are to return to India adequately equipped with a competent knowledge of modern European developments and trends of thought.

How far these facilities are available, or will be provided, is indeed a matter for the Indian University to consider.

MODEL VILLAGE FOR DEPRESSED CLASSES.

The Dalit Udhar Sabha, Delhi, was founded in 1913, says a correspondent in the Tribune, Lahore, and has been carrying on the mission of ameliorating the position of the so-called untouchables. In 1921, the Sabha secured the patronage of Swami Shraddhanand, whose enthusiasm coupled with the munificent aid given by Seth Jugalkishore Birla, enabled the Sabha to substantially widen the sphere of its activities. With Swamijee's sympathy and guidance, the Sabha has weaned thousands of so-called untouchables in Delhi, Meerut, Bulandshahr, Aligarh, Muttra, Gurgaon, Rohtak and Hissar from their habits of drink and meat-eating and has initiated them into the Vedic Dharma. It has not only saved thousands from being driven away from Hinduism by the numerous hardships arising out of the inflexible caste distinctions, but has also brought back larger numbers that had actually stepped out. The improvement in their own ways of living and their relations with other Hindu castes can be seen by any one who cares to go and observe them in the above-mentioned districts.

The Sabha has got eleven workers and preachers for the spread of the Vedic faith and has been conducting thirty schools for the so-called untouchables in which 1300 boys and girls are being imparted religious and up-to-date secular education.

The Model Village.

The depressed classes of Delhi have no houses of their own and have to accommodate themselves in hired premises in the worst and congested bylanes. Touched by their miserable condition, the Sabha approached the authorities for a site on which a model village could be constructed for them. It is a matter for felicitation that the authorities have been pleaded to grant a site at Pahargunj, situated to the west of the Railway line at the foot of the Ajmeri Gate over the bridge. On this site model houses will be constructed by the residents themselves, but for the intellectual and spiritual needs of those people it is

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n859/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

necessary to build a school and a temple, the cost of which has been estimated at Rs. 12,500, the school requiring Rs. 6,000, subscribed by the public.

It is not necessary to explain the need of uplifting and reforming the untouchables. People now know it for themselves too well. Religion and the present condition will convince anybody that to remove the feeling of contempt and untouchability towards these depressed brethren is to remove a disgrace from the face of Hinduism. To help the six crores of so-called untouchables is to help Hinduism itself. Therefore, this appeal is addressed to the adherents of Hinduism and lovers of their community to contribute their mite to enable the Sabha to perform this necessary service and mission and thus to share the credit and merit of it.

THE TILAK VIDYAPEETH AND TILAK COLLEGE.

The following appeal issued by the office-bearers of the institutions, was sent to us for publication:—

Shortly after the death of the late Lok. Tilak, Tilak Maharashtra Vidyapeeth (University) and the Tilak Maha-Vidyalaya (College) were founded in Poona to perpetuate his memory. 11 secondary national Schools and 4 primary Schools are affiliated to the University and the Tilak Maha-Vidyalaya offers collegiate instruction in the faculties of Literature, Ayurveda (medicine), Commerce and Engineering. There are 1200 students at present receiving instruction under national institutions in Maharashtra. The Vidyapeeth and the Mahavidyalaya are run wholly on national lines and are completely under national control. The rightful place of vernaculars in the cultivation of national culture has been recognised and Marathi forms the medium of instruction. The mad rush after purely literary courses, resulting in the economic helplessness of the present-day graduates, is discouraged and stress is laid more on vocational training than on literary training.

There is a body of young enthusiastic life-members, who have devoted themselves entirely to the service of the College. Moreover, some of us of the older generation like Mr. C. V. Vaidya, N. C. Kelkar, S. M. Paranjpe, K. V. Vaze, J. S. Karandikar, V. G. Apte and others also take our share in the teaching work of the College. The College and the Vidyapeeth depend solely on popular support. The current annual expenses of the College and the University come up to about Rs. 20,000 and they look to lovers of National Education all over India to find the small amount every year. We, therefore, earnestly appeal to the admirers of the late Lokamanya to give on his anniversary day liberal donations to the College and thus mark their devotion to the great departed leader by contributing their quota towards making his memorials permanent. The Lokamanya lived and died for the whole of India. Is it too much to expect that his countless followers all over the country will pay their Guru-Dakshina on the coming 1st of August? All donations which should be sent to the Registrar, Tilak Maharashtra Vidyapeeth, Poona city, will be gratefully acknowledged.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Bombay University and Social Reform: The Bombay University invites essays for nine prizes in last week's Government Gazette. Of these two are for social reform subjects, namely, "the effects of our social customs on the physical, moral and economic conditions of our population," and "untouchability, its religious and social basis, and the significance of the movement for its revival."

Gandhi and New Testament: It is understood that Mahatma Gandhi has decided to teach one hour on each Saturday the New Testament to the students of the National College at Ahmedabad that was founded by him in the beginning of the Non-Co-operation movement.

Woman Candidate For Council: We are glad to see that consequent on the Council removing the ban on women from contesting elections, Mrs. Kamala Chattopadhaya, wife of the poet Harindra Nath Chattopadhaya, has announced her candidature to the Madras Legislative Council from South Canara. It is believed she stands on the Congress ticket.

Lokamanya Anniversary: The sixth anniversary of the late Lokamanya Tilak was celebrated on August 1st in different parts of the city. The principal public meeting was that held at the Marwadi Vidyalaya with Mr. M. R. Jayakar as President. Both Mr. Jayakar and Mr. B. G. Horniman paid glowing tributes to the memory of the great leader. Messrs. B. F. Bharucha, Joseph Baptista, K. F. Nariman and several others also spoke on the occasion.

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad: Sir Chimanlal Setalvad proceeded to England by the last Mail. Though the trip is primarily for a change and rest, he will, while in England, utilise all opportunities that might be open to him to do political work on behalf of the Indian National Party. As his continuance as Vice-Chancellor is considered essential he is not resigning the post as ordinarily he would have to do under the circumstances.

Female Education in Baroda: While advocating free college education for girls, the Princely India says: There are very few Indian States which can boast of the existence of a college imparting higher education to the girls. Among those few, Baroda is one. However we cannot approve of Baroda Government's policy of recovering college fees from the girls and boys at the same rate. In India girls receive education for education's sake, and not as a necessary equipment for earning their livelihood as in the case of boys. We understand that some time ago no fees were charged to the girls in the college. But now full fees are recovered from them. This will naturally hamper higher female education. We are of opinion that Baroda Government should encourage female education by exempting the girls from payment of college fees.

Yuvati Saranalaya, Madras: A correspondent writes to Justice, Madras:—This institution was started in 1922 by Srimathi Yaminipurna Thilakamma Garu for reforming the Devadasi community and to serve as a home for reclaimed girls of that community. It is now in the hands of an efficient Committee with Sir R. Venkataratnam Naidu, Vice-Chancellor of the Madras University, as its President. In 1922 it had only one inmate, now it has got about 10. Up till now about 15 girls of that community have passed through the institution out of whom 8 are to be married shortly by their parents: six others are either coming back to the home for further training or are to get married. It speaks a great deal to the credit of that lady worker that her educational and reform propaganda met with failure only in one case out of the 15. I learn that the institution has to limit its activities for want of sufficient funds. I hope the public will come forward to help the institution financially so as to enable the management,

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n860/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

to make it serve as a home for repentant elders of that class also and to extend its activities by adding some useful cottage industries.

Adaptability of Hindu Society : Adaptation to environment is the first condition of life. That Hinduism and Hindu Society have not lost their vitality, writes the Forward in a recent issue, has been clearly demonstrated by the resolutions recently adopted by the Banglya Brahmin Sabha. The Brahmin Sabha is popularly known as the citadel of orthodoxy; but it has managed to remove that impression to some extent by its catholicity of spirit reflected in the following resolution :— 1. That Hindu women, kidnapped, forcibly molested or outraged will be taken back in Samaj after "Prayaschitta" which is necessary for the purification of body. Devoted ablution into the Ganges will be considered enough for Suddhi in these cases. 2. That to simply read the "Kalma" is not sin for the Hindus. They should be taken in the Samaj after "Prayaschitta" if they are forcibly fed on rice and any other food however prohibited it may be. This decision is quite in keeping with justice and common sense, and the learned Pundits of the Brahmin Sabha have done a service to Hindu Society by rising above narrowness and bigotry which are not a little responsible for the present miseries of the Hindu community.

Conciliation Board in Calcutta Revived : We understand that Sir Bhupendranath Mitra's mission of peace in Calcutta has been crowned with success so far as the constitution of the Conciliation Board is concerned. At a luncheon given by him to the members of the Board at the Calcutta Club recently, there were also present members of the Bengal Executive Council, the Commissioner of Police and the President and Secretaries of the Club. It will be recalled that the Board was formed shortly after the outbreak of the first communal disturbances in Calcutta, but that it was found impossible to continue its work owing to the stress of communal tension and it was felt that the organisation could serve no useful purpose because the atmosphere was unfavourable to a calm discussion of the points at issue between the two communities. Sir Bhupendranath's visit to Calcutta and his interviews with both Hindu and Muslim representatives have resulted in their realising their danger of the present situation to this extent that they have agreed to come together to discuss the measures for the prevention of further communal disturbances. The entire efforts of Sir Bhupendranath have so far been concentrated on creating a favourable atmosphere in Calcutta for a settlement of the communal disputes and, in this direction, judging from the acute tension prevailing between the communities, he has succeeded.

Embassies of Heart and Intellect : Interviewed by a representative of the Free Press of India, Mr. Chatterjee, the editor of the Modern Review, who left for Geneva by the last Mail, said that for some time past he had been thinking of going to Europe for reasons of health, and the invitation from the League of Nations decided his sailing immediately. He was going to Geneva at his own expense and he intended to tour various important places on the Continent. "The time has come", he said, "when India should look for avenues of establishing friendly relations with the outside world. This was no diplomatic move in the sense that the Indians should join the great game of world politics with a view to counteract England's imperialistic monopoly in India. There is a nobler diplomacy which seeks to establish embassies of the heart and intellect everywhere, urging men to know one another and through moral and spiritual bonds to tame down the ignorant and self-assertive savagery, which causes wars and keeps humanity constantly boiling in mutual hatred. The publicists of the world must know India first hand and not through the commerce mongers, whose politics is a part of their high finance. India's greatest contributions to the world are not jute, tea, wheat or rice. This must be brought home to those probable friends of India who, as yet, find it a difficult job to love India whole-heartedly, because of the evil propaganda that is being constantly urged against India everywhere by interested agencies. We, on our part, must know more of the outside world but not through those who run down everybody else in every way, so that their own place in the scheme of things may appear the highest. India can be a teacher, but she should be at the same time much more of a learner. This would be," concluded Mr. Chatterjee in parting, "his motto while travelling abroad."

Lady Irwin's Visit to Seva Sadan : Her Excellency Lady Irwin paid a visit to the headquarters of the Poona Seva Sadan Society during her stay in Poona. Lady Irwin accompanied by the Rani Saheb of Sangli, President of the Seva Sadan Society, Mr. Devadhar, Jankibai Bhat, Lady Superintendent, and others went round the hostels and various classes and departments of the Seva Sadan. She was shown the material prepared by the Society for the Provincial Commitee of the National Baby Week Exhibitions. After going round all the departments of the Society and having evinced great interest in all activities, Lady Irwin returned to Sir Vithaldas Thackersey Hall which was richly decorated. The function in this hall was attended by a large and distinguished gathering. Prominent amongst the ladies present were the Rani Sahebs of Bhor, Savantvadi, Akalkot, Jamkhandi, and Indumati Raja, Lady Mehta, Mrs. Cawasji Jehangir, Mrs. Raste and others. The President of the Society then delivered her welcome speech. She traced the progress of work this institution had been doing ever since it was started in 1909. Amopg the ladies and gentlemen who started the Society prominent mention must be made, she said, of the late Mrs. Ramabai Ranade and Mr. G. K. Devadhar of the Servants of India Society. The main object of the Seva Sadan Society was to make Indian womanhood self-reliant and the institution was carrying on work on thoroughly non-sectarian lines. The Rani Saheb concluded her speech saying that her Excellency had placed the Poona Seva Sadan Society under a profound debt of gratitude by honouring its home with her visit soon after her arrival in this country. Her Excellency then made a few remarks thanking most warmly all the kind expressions made about her. She said it was the greatest pleasure to her to come there that day and have the opportunity of herself seeing something about the Seva Sadan of which she had heard so much. She knew it was no exaggeration to say that it was doing very splendid work. She could assure them that the Society always had her best wishes and hearty sympathies.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n861/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

ADVERTISEMENTS

A. K. JOSHI & Co.,
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.
We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.
Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.
Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

THE INDIAN WITNESS.
[ Founded 1870 ].
Largest Circulation among Christian Weeklies in India.
Special attention to Temperance and Public Morals.
Rapidly Growing Subscription List.
Rs. 8/- per annum in India.
Rs. 9/- in foreign countries.
EXCELLENT ADVERTISING MEDIUM.
Address-INDIAN WITNESS, HAZRAT GANJ, LUCKNOW.

NOW READY
SHRI BHAGAVAD-GITA
DEVANAGARI TEXT
FREE TRANSLATION INTO ENGLISH
A Word-for-word Translation
Introduction to Sanskrit Grammar
BY
Dr. Annie Besant
AND
Babu Bhagavan Das, M. A.
Revised and Enlarged
A Complete word Index added
Pages 320—Index pages 73

| | |
|---|---|
| Cloth and Gold... ... | ... Rs. 5-0 |
| Cloth and Ink ... ... | ... Rs. 4-8 |
| Boards ... ... ... | ... Rs. 3-12 |

Theosophical Publishing House, Adyar — Madras — India.

To Our Subscribers.

A subscriber from America writes to us to supply them with some missing numbers in order to complete the files of their library. As some of the copies are not available at our office, we would be glad if any of our subscribers can spare the following missing numbers, which would be paid for at the rate of 8 annas per copy.

| Year. | | Issues. |
|---|---|---|
| 1912 | ... | August 18 and 25. |
| 1915 | ... | December 5. |
| 1916 | ... | January, February, March (all numbers except March 26th), April 2, 9, October 8 and 22. |
| 1917 | ... | July 1st. |

THE MANAGER,
The Indian Social Reformer Office,
NAVSARI CHAMBERS,
OUTRAM ROAD, FORT,
BOMBAY.

THE INDIAN REVIEW.
JUNE NUMBER.

Reaction Against Liberalism. By Mr. J. T. Gwynn, I.C.S. (Retd.)
Coalition of Parties in Legislature. By Mr. Mukandi Lal, M.L.C.
Purgatories or Reformatories. By Prof. Diwanchand Sharma, M.A.
Gokhale's Legacy. By Mr. G. A. Natesan.
Twelve Years of Rural Work. By Mr. K. T. Paul, O.B.E., B.A.
The Art of India. By Dr. James H. Cousins, D.Litt.
Maharajah Jang Bahadur. By Prof. C. S Srinivasachari, M.A.
The New Dewan of Mysore in Islamic Lands By Mr. V. B. Metta.
The Message of Buddha. By Mr. R. R. Diwakar M. A.
Indian Public Life. By Mr. K. R. R. Sastry, M.A.
Lone Wanderer: (A Poem) By Swami Paramananda.
My Experiments With Truth. By Mahatma Gandhi.
The Root of the Evil in South Africa. By Mr. C. F. Andrews.
A Historic Tragedy. By Dr. A. J. Saunders, M.A.
On Growing Old : (A Peom.) By John Masefield.

Single Copy Annas Eight.
Annual Subscription Rs. 5.

A few copies of back numbers of January, February, March, April and May are available. Mahatma Gandhi's autobiography which is printed regularly from the March Number is continued month after month.

G. A. NATESAN & CO., Publishers, Madras.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n862/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE
Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,56,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30 6-25) ... ... ,, 1,08,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)

Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
Nira ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... (District Satara).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kalol ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 9,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n863/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.
(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription : Inland, Rs. 6/—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33/1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.
SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... Rs. | 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ... | ... ,, | 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP ... | ... ,, | 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS ... | ... ,, | 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n864/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED,

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions.

Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n865/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available.
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
ERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

The English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world. Price 15 shillings or Rs. 10. Only a few copies are available.

Apply to :—
THE MANAGER.
The "Indian Social Reformer."
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n866/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1926. No. 50

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.
A Notable Case.
The Salvation Army and Proselytising.
Women and Bombay Council.
Reform among Bhatias.
Depressed Classes and Admission to Schools.
Support to Rescue Home.
The Currency Commission Report.
Concerning the Problem of Communalism.
Juvenile Punishment.
Marriage Customs among Nayars of Malabar.
"The Education of India."
Unequal Marriages.
Help the Miners of Great Britain.
"High Table" Practice.
Enforced Widowhood.
Inter-Communal Dinner at Lahore.
The "Light Wines and Beer" Sham.
"Impressions of Russia."
British Science Association.
Social Reform among Depressed Classes in Hyderabad.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : The Pandit reached Calcutta last Saturday ignoring the order of the Magistrate prohibiting his entry, delivered a speech at a public meeting and left next day to keep an engagement in the Central Provinces. A large crowd welcomed him at the Calcutta Railway station, including the leaders of the Independent and Moderate parties. The Police were present in force, but beyond keeping order they did nothing. It has since been explained that under the law legal action can be taken for breach of the Magistrate's order only by way of process, and that he could not have been arrested on arrival at Calcutta. A summons has accordingly been issued, returnable on the 23rd instant, to him to appear before the Magistrate. Meanwhile, an influential deputation of members of the Legislative Assembly waited on His Excellency the Viceroy yesterday in connection with the prohibition order on the Pandit. The proceedings were strictly private.

A Notable Case : A case was tried at the last Criminal Sessions of the Madras High Court in which a young Brahmin typist was accused of setting fire to the clothes on his girl wife of 13 years after pouring kerosine oil over them. The girl died from the burns. She made statements to the lady doctor and the Magistrate who took her dying declaration to the above effect. Except her statements, there was no evidence of this and, in the circumstances, there could be none. It came out from the statement of the accused and one or two other witnesses that the girl did not welcome his conjugal attentions. The accused was eventually found not guilty by a majority of the jury and was acquitted and discharged. The importance of the case lies in the fact that it is perhaps the first instance in which a peculiarly odious aspect of child marriage has been brought to the notice of the public in so unpleasantly impressive a manner. There must be scores, not to say hundreds of cases, in which the cruelties to which the institution exposes girls of tender age never come to public notice. We trust that the Madras case will be a means of awakening the social conscience to the urgent need for reform of the Hindu marriage system.

The Salvation Army and Proselytising : We published last week a letter from Major Charles A. Peck, Social Secretary of the Salvation Army in Bombay, in which he wrote : "We challenge you to bring forward a single instance of proselytization at our social institutions." Brigadier Dayasagar also in a previous issue had disclaimed the idea of proselytization in the Salvation Army institutions. By the last mail, we received the Journal of the East India Association containing a paper read by Commissioner F. Booth Tucker on "The Criminal Tribes of India." We take the following from it : "On one occasion Sir Henry McMahon, (who was in the chair) introduced me to one of the leading Maharajas of India, who was anxious that we should undertake work among his criminal tribes. His Highness had taken the trouble to personally visit our settlements, as well as to inquire from Government as to our success. But there was one condition he was anxious to introduce—namely, that we should refrain from introducing Christianity. He was a Hindoo—his people were Hindoos—and any attempt to proselytize would be resented. I pointed out to His Highness that this would be to invite failure, and when this became evident, there would be no object in continuing the experiment." Nothing came out of the proposal. It may be that the Salvation Army has realised since that proselytising is not essential to its social work, and that Commissioner Booth Tucker is not in touch with recent developments in its policy in the Indian field. One of the speakers in the discussion which followed the reading of the paper, Mr. H. Harcourt, expressed a doubt as to whether there was not an implied violation of the clause in the Proclamation of 1858 which enjoined that none of those who were working under Government should in any way interfere with the religion of those among whom they were working. He suggested that the Proclamation should be modified, for if it was strictly followed, he could not quite agree with the way in which the matter had been approached by the Government. The Commissioner in his concluding observations simply ignored the objection.

Women and Bombay Council : We are glad that the Bombay Legislative Council passed by a large majority Dr. Paranjpye's resolution removing the ban on women becoming members of or being nominated to the Legislative Council. An amendment limiting women's candidature to those 45 years of age and over was rightly turned down. Dr. Paranjpye, in a brief speech in introducing the resolution, pointed out how it was a natural corollary to the enfranchisement of women. If women are fit to vote, they are surely fit to vote for whomsoever they wish, whether it be man or woman. Moreover, as he pointed out, there are many questions on which women are peculiary qualified to speak such as on bills relating to children, public health, sanitation, temperance and education in all which subjects they are taking more and more prominent part. Men Councillors need not fear that the Council woul

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n867/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

be swamped by women, for the resolution, as it stands, does not ask for any special proportion of women members, but only a fair opportunity of representation of women. It is a pity that even this just demand of women should have met with opposition at the hands of some Councillors. The Hon. Mr. Dehlavi, Minister for Excise, trotted out the time-worn and old-world plea that the women's place is only by the hearth. The Hon. Minister congratulated his fellow-Councillors on the fact that they had produced excellent legislation without the help of women, but he forgot that they could have produced more excellent legislation with the help of women, especially in such social matters as the Children Act. Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmed's statement that there is no demand for the resolution from women themselves is incorrect, for it is solely through the persistent agitation of women's organisations in the country that women were first enfranchised and the recent amendment to the present electoral rules was made which has been given effect to in Madras and Bombay and which we hope will be the case before long in other Provinces also.

Reform among Bhatias: It is a welcome sign that the Bhatias, one of the most important and conservative communities in Bombay, have been realising the need for social reform in their midst. Presiding at the third Bombay Provincial Bhatia Conference which met in Bombay on Saturday last, Mr. Haridas Lalji Lakhmidas reviewed the progress made by the community socially and the reforms that still remained to be effected. He first emphasised the necessity of framing a constitution for the community and bringing the different sections of the community together for working the reforms on common lines. He expressed his satisfaction at the attitude of the community in regard to child marriage and at the fact that there were now only rare cases of marriage of girls under fourteen years of age. He condemned the system of marrying girls to the highest bidders and marriages of girls of tender age to old men. The most thorny question in the list of Bhatia reforms is widow remarriage. The President pointed out that according to the Census fifty per cent of Bhatia males in Bombay were bachelors and widowers while among Bhatia women 25 per cent. were spinsters and 25 per cent. widows. Similar conditions seem to prevail outside Bombay also. On the question of widow remarriage the community was sharply divided into three sections. One of these wanted the Conference to decide it once and for all. A second though in favour of widow remarriage, wanted to wait till a favourable moment. The third was out and out against it and a majority of it therefore remained outside the Conference. The President finally left it to the Conference to decide whether the question of remarriage should be considered by them. We do not know what the recommendations of the Conference are in this respect, but, as we have pointed out on many occasions, the best way of solving the widow marriage problem is for widowers to marry widows. We call attention to Mahatma Gandhi's feeling remarks on the subject, which we reprint elsewhere. We may add that we entirely agree with him that it is impossible at this stage of national life to distinguish between social and political reform and to give precedence to one over the other.

Depressed Classes and Admission to Schools: Some three years ago the Government of Bombay announced that schools maintained or aided out of public funds which refused to admit children of the Depressed Classes would be deprived of assistance from public funds and Edu-ability was imposed on these children in any school conducted by a public authority in its own or in a hired building. Where buildings had been hired subject to the condition of exclusion of the Depressed Classes, the local authorities were to be pressed to make other arrangements free from any such condition. Similarly, where public schools were held in temples or sacred buildings, efforts were to be made to secure accommodation without delay. We are glad to see that from reports received from the Educational Inspectors these orders have been observed generally in the schools maintained by local bodies in the Presidency, namely, by District Local Boards and Municipalities. There have been, however, some cases in which admission has been refused to Depressed Class children. In two schools in Deogad Taluka of the Ratnagiri District admission was refused by the owner of the school building in one case and by the villagers in the other case, where the school was held in a temple. The Educational Inspector has taken steps to remove the hardship by providing other suitable accommodation for these children. In the District Local Board schools at Talvade in the East Khandesh District and Upale and Chare in the Barsi Taluka of the Sholapur District admission has been refused. The Educational Inspector has suggested to the District Local Board, East Khandesh, the closure of the Talvade School if suitable accommodation for Depressed Class children is not provided by the villagers at an early date. The Chairman of the School Board, District Local Board, Sholapur, is endeavouring to persuade the people of the two villages in the Barsi Taluka to allow Depressed Class children to be admitted to the Schools. In nine schools in the Surat District admission has been refused and the people of the villages concerned have been advised to withdraw opposition, lest they might lose the benefit of the schools.

Support to Rescue Home: We hope the appeal made by the Bombay Presidency Women's Council for financial support to its Rescue Home will meet with favourable response from the Corporation. The Corporation, at a recent meeting, considered the application for an annual grant of Rs. 5,000 from Mrs. F. S. Taleyarkhan, President of the Council, and after some discussion, referred it to the Commissioner for favour of remark. It is hardly necessary for us to enter into the justice of this appeal. This Rescue Home for Indian women is the only one of its kind in the city which has been in existence since 1921 and is carrying on rescue and preventive work among women in the city. A special feature of the Home is that women of all communities are admitted into it. The expenses of the Home have hitherto been met for the most part by small donations and subscriptions. But, with public bodies and police turning more and more to the assistance of the Home, it is but natural that, instead of depending upon a precarious source of revenue, it should turn to the Corporation for a fixed annual grant to meet its increased expenses. With the Children Act in prospect of being put into operation in the immediate future, the Home has a real need to serve and a grant of Rs. 5,000 per annum is not too much under the circumstances. The Corporation is already giving assistance to a Rescue Home conducted by the Salvation Army and it cannot refuse help to a similar institution conducted under Indian auspices. We are sorry to find some members opposing the application on the ground of "financial stringency." We cannot think of a better way in which the Corporation's finances can be utilised than that of rescuing

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n868/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, AUGUST 14, 1926.

THE CURRENCY COMMISSION REPORT.

We briefly noticed last week the publication of the report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance. The proposals of the Commission require fuller notice in these columns as they are bound to have far-reaching effects on the social and general well-being of the country. The two great dynamic forces of society are the religious and the economic. The currency of a country is a dominating factor in the economic sphere. The report, we are sorry to say, is narrow in its outlook and oblique in its method. The needs of the country and the habits of the people have been subordinated in the consideration of the Commission to the fascination of high finance. The members, or the majority of them, would seem to have been more anxious to produce a report that would be hailed by international financiers as a great achievement than to formulate recommendations which would create public confidence among and harmonise with the national requirements of the people of India. The report teems with ingenious devices for escaping from obvious difficulties which it is the business of the currency reformer to face and overcome. The scheme which the Commission recommend as a gold bullion standard is a make-believe and not a real gold standard. The London Times in its comments, a summary of which has been cabled to this country, significantly observes that it has all the advantages of the present system, the gold exchange system, which the Commission find does not enjoy the confidence of the people. The Times omits to add, what would have been equally true, that the gold bullion standard is only a verbal variant of the gold exchange standard, so far as the people of this country are concerned.

The Commission seem to have set out with two main preconceptions, which they have sought to give effect to in their scheme in spite of palpable difficulties, by dogmatic assertions which utterly fail to carry conviction to the unbiassed mind. These are, first, that India under no circumstances should have a gold coinage and, secondly, that the rupee should be fixed at the ratio of 18d. gold. From these preconceived ideas they have allowed nothing to dislodge them, not even the forcible plea of the Finance Member of the Government of India that the introduction of gold into circulation is necessary in Indian conditions to inspire confidence in the people, and provide the stimulus which is badly needed for the growth of the investment and banking habit in India. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce which is predominantly an European institution, in its statement submitted to the Commission, also took the same view. The Finance Department of the Government of India drew up a scheme of a gold standard and currency to be introduced in ten years for the consideration of the Commission, but the Commissioners have discarded it on purely speculative grounds. The Commission take the view that the circulation of gold as a part of Indian currency will seriously dislocate the currencies of other countries which have or are aspiring to have a gold standard, and that, therefore, it is not to the interest of India to have a gold currency. The Commissioners seem to have forgotten for the moment that other countries have their own financiers and statesmen to take care of their interests, and that the latter are seldom deterred from any course which they consider to be in the interests of their countries from a consideration of its possible effects on Indian conditions. We cannot go into the details of the Commission's scheme which is highly complex and technical, but the essence of it is that while gold should be the basis of the Indian system, that is, while the rupee should be related to gold as the standard of value, there must be no gold coinage and even the rupee coinage should gradually become an inconvertible paper coinage except for the purposes of external trade. We have no hesitation in saying that this scheme when fully given effect to will lead to serious political discontent in the country.

A national habit of centuries cannot be altered by a stroke of the pen. If the members of the Commission were not almost entirely business-men and economists, if there was any among them trained in the methods of social study, they would have been obliged to treat the Indian habit of hoarding and partiality for a metallic currency as socio-economic phenomena with their roots in some inveterate and widely-felt necessity. The methods by which they propose to discourage hoarding and the use of gold and silver coins will have the very opposite effect. If gold and silver are withheld from free circulation, the people will take particular care not to part with whatever they have of the precious metals. The hoarding habit in India has been much exaggerated. To the extent that it prevails, it is intimately associated with institutions like the joint-family and women's right of property as also, of course, with the precarious political conditions which prevailed for many centuries, and which the Indian people are not convinced is even yet beyond the pale of possibilities. With the reform of Indian social institutions, with the growth of confidence in a settled Government, and with increasing openings and facilities for investment, the hoarding habit is gradually declining and will soon give place to economic habits of modern society. But any violent and sudden intervention to interfere with the natural operation of the new forces, will create a strong reaction and set up forces inimical to progress. We, therefore, think that the most essential thing in currency reform is to have a gold standard and currency with an open mint from which any one can get a fixed number of gold coins in return for a given quantity of gold. This will create public confidence as nothing else can. The rupee will be a subsidiary coin like the shilling and it may be fixed at a ratio that may be found convenient and suitable. This, in our opinion, is a minor matter. Of late, the Government of India have been evincing a partiality for dealing piecemeal with subjects the various parts of which are in organic relation to one another. In accordance with this policy, they propose next week to fix by statute the ratio of 18 l. gold to the rupee. We think that this is beginning at the wrong end.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n869/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

CONCERNING THE PROBLEM OF COMMUNALISM.

( By Mr. Clifford Manshardt, Ph. D. )

One of the most serious drawbacks to inter-racial and inter-group unity is the tendency towards classification, i. e., the placing of people in groups, with certain group characteristics, and taking no account of individual personality and individual differences. The "in" group of people is always suspicious of the "out" group. Each group has a predilection for its own kind and a prejudice against other groups. The characteristics of one's own group are idealized and an emotional value is attached to them. Thus Germany is suspicious of France, the United States of Japan, Mexico of the United States, and so it goes.

During the War I served with the allied forces in France. Although a University man with a good cultural background, I had an intense dislike of all Germans and a prejudice against anything that was German. Every ruined village and every wounded comrade seemed to call forth but one feeling—the feeling of revenge.

Came the Armistice, and an opportunity to serve with the Red Cross in repatriating the Russian prisoners in German prison camps. For four months we were in Berlin and had the opportunity of meeting all manner of Germans in all parts of Germany. We met militarists, but we also met little children emaciated for want of proper nourishment; old people starving ; and we came to know individual Germans in their quiet homes. We saw that all in Germany was not bad, that in many circles the outrages of the War were deplored, and that moral idealism was alive and flourishing.

Time came when I was to leave Germany for Poland. One of our ablest technicians, a man of exceptional culture and spirit, shook his head when I told him I was going to Warsaw. "Pigs," he said, "Pigs !" "The Poles are not fit to associate with. They are dirty, filthy", and he shrugged his shoulders in horror. The hotel manager expressed the same sentiment. But when I reached Poland I found the situation similar to that in Germany. There were good Poles and bad Poles, dirty Poles and clean. The same thing was true in Russia and it is true in every other country.

It is so easy to be inflamed to passion heat against an impersonal group, while within that group there are individuals as fine as one would care to meet. There is no such thing as a racial or group characteristic from which there is no variation. It is human nature to generalize, but when one breaks up the group and sees the individual members composing it the situation is changed at once.

Hindus ! but who are Hindus but individual Hindus, our own friends ? Mahomedans ! but who other are Mahomedans than our own Mahomedan neighbours ?

The communal problem is most difficult, but the simple principle of seeing groups as made up of individuals will carry us far along our way.

JUVENILE PUNISHMENT.

(By Mr. R. C. Lorimer.)

The following paragraphs were originally written under the impression that your article on 'Bombay Jail Administration' (appearing in your issue of July the 10th) was to be interpreted in the light of an observation which I thought I had met with in your columns, but which I have since traced to another newspaper. The passage referred to reads as follows: "392 children, an increase of 100 over the previous year, were released by Magistrates on probation of good conduct, which means in plain language allowed to drift along the old way." It was to express dissent from a view, ill-judged as it seemed to me in its one-sided extremeness, that this letter was originally written. Having failed to trace the passage above-quoted in your columns I was at first disposed to refrain from sending you this communication. On further reflection, however, it appears to me, that, though (partially) aimed amiss as regards its original intention, it does contain points worthy of consideration or at least of refutation. It does seem to me strange that while substantive imprisonment (of however limited duration) for juveniles is anathema to all reformers, the perils of the lock-ups are never, so far as I have seen, even considered. It does also strike me as strange that a long-term detention in a moral hospital (such as a Borstal institution) as the universally suitable treatment for juvenile delinquency—for the most trivial as well as for the most serious cases —should not be considered to stand in need of any justification. Justification there may be not only in dangers peculiar to the individual case, but sometimes in conditions of peril prevalent in some particular area, as in Bombay City where the brothels are stated to be nurseries of crime and vice for children living in dependence on prostitutes (vide 'Prostitution in Bombay' by Mr. Kanji Dwarkadas, Hon. Secy., Bombay Vigilance Association, in New India, July 24th 1926).

No doubt there are strong reasons against the imprisonment of children, and the sooner the Bombay Children's Act of 1924 is brought into operation the better. Pending that consummation, however, while Magistrates have no choice but to pass sentences authorised by the ordinary law, it may well appear that they have exercised a wise discretion. The release of as many as 392 children on probation of good conduct, does not seem to me a matter for any disquietude. That would seem to me the most appropriate method of dealing with ordinary petty juvenile delinquency. It would be a fallacy to suppose that release on probation is an encouragement to crime—(if that ill-sounding word is the aptest which the language supplies to describe an eight-anna or two-rupee larceny). The juvenile culprit has already had a scare—( at the time of his arrest, and while his case was under investigation by the Police); and it is difficult to suppose that he has not been at least a little awed by all the formal circumstance of his production in Court, the hearing of his case, and the pronouncement of the Magistrate's order. Virtual punishment too he has already suffered—in a confinement (of perhaps 2, 3 or 4 weeks) hardly distinguishable except in name from substantive imprisonment. Previous to his production in Court he may very likely have spent a few days under remand in the Police lock-up, and as many as two, three or four weeks in the Judicial lock-up.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n870/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

In the Punjab, at least, Judicial lock-ups are ordinarily located inside Jails; and while I cannot pretend to have any exact information as to their accommodation arrangements, I should be surprised to learn that segregation of juveniles was an ordinary feature. Even if it were, the company of some juveniles might be as 'contaminating' as that of most adults. So long therefore as a child remains in the lock-up, rubbing shoulders with other under-trial prisoners, he is exposed to influences not very essentially different from those attaching to ordinary imprisonment. Three weeks in the lock-ups or three weeks in Jail,—where is the vital difference?

It is this consideration which deprives the objection to short-term imprisonment of so much of its force; while at the same time it goes so far to do away with any necessity for that form of punishment. If moral contamination is to be apprehended from imprisonment, it is likely enough that contamination has already been contracted. On the other hand, if penal retribution is considered necessary, what is to be hoped from three weeks in the lock-ups plus three weeks in the Jail, which might not be hoped from three weeks in the lock-ups alone? The principles of differentiation in proportioning punishment to offence are hazardous at the best, and certainly not least so in regard to juvenile and petty delinquency.

A certain proportion of juvenile crime may be actually heinous; and one can never get rid of the necessity for a longish period of detention in some form,—though doubtless it is desirable that the sentence should not be served in an ordinary Jail.

In your article you make no mention of the number of juveniles punished with flogging. Seeing that the number otherwise dealt with is so high, one may hope that the number subjected to that cruel and debasing punishment is correspondingly low. Too often in some provinces it has been regarded as the normal and ready, if rough, expedient for dealing with juvenile crime in general.

That in fact has constituted a main reason for refraining from too thorough-going a deprecation of short-term imprisonments. To deprecate short-term imprisonments was in effect to give one's blessing to a viler and more brutal form of punishment. If in the Bombay Presidency, thanks to a more enlightened lead from high quarters, or other reason, the villainous implication does not hold, it may yet be that the Borstal system, like other excellent innovations in the hour of their first acceptance, may run some risk of being worked a little too hard. It would not seem to me desirable that the 392 children released on probation should all have been sent to Borstal institutions, or even Homes recognised under the Bombay Children's Act, even supposing accommodation available for the reception of so large a number.

In a letter written by me last year (but rejected by the paper to which it was sent) I ventured to suggest that a quite petty offence would not ordinarily warrant a commitment to a Borstal institution. "The most obvious objection to the system (the Borstal system) would seem to be that as the term of detention is long, the cost is great; and as the accommodation is limited, the number of offenders who can benefit by it is proportionately restricted. Furthermore the long separation of the child from its parents and home, and the conditions of its unnatural restraint in the confined atmosphere of a reformatory institution cannot (one would think) be really morally healthy. But for such long detention in any ordinary case there would seem to be neither justification nor necessity. It is too readily assumed that petty larceny is evidence of a depraved heart,—even when extenuating circumstances such as destitution and hunger have not to be taken into consideration."

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS AMONG NAYARS OF MALABAR.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

SIR,

In your leading article published in the issue of July the 31st reference is made to the system of marriage prevalent among the Nayars of Malabar. I may be allowed to say a few words in this connection as to the origin of this system.

The "Thalikattu Kalyanam," which you call the sacramental ceremony, and the Sambandham, the actual marriage, have peculiarities of their own which are only seldom found anywhere else in any other community. It may not be out of place here to make a passing mention that, as in marriage, in various other spheres of social and family life in Kerala, there are astonishing specimens, which will bewilder and perplex the rest of humanity.

The beautiful and fertile land of Kerala has seen the worst features of Brahminic influence to the utter ruin of the pure customs and manners of the children of the soil. Undoubtedly the origin of the peculiar system of marriage dates from the time when the so-called "Nambudiri" Brahmins were all in all, to whose ugly domination the ignorant and the illiterate had easily succumbed. Being Brahmins whose professed spiritual leadership had a fascinating hold upon the superstitious inhabitants, these Nambudiris found it easy to exert their unsolicited influence in gaining supreme predominance, which gave dictatorial tone to every voice they uttered.

Further, as gifts to Devaswams and Brahmaswams they acquired extensive lands and became big landlords whose tenants the majority of the Hindu community, including the donors, had ultimately to become by accepting the position of mere serfs and dependents.

Thus possessing these double advantages of spiritual Gurus and landlords of the soil, they could easily mould the customs and manners of other communities, especially Nayars, in such a way as to suit their own purpose and convenience. As the Damocles sword of eviction from lands, the only means of maintenance of the people, was hanging over, none dared to disobey the dictation of these Nambudiris, whose abuse of their

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n871/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

position brought about the utter ruin of the social order of the whole of Kerala.

Among the Nambudiri Brahmins there is a rule in matrimony, which has been current from time immemorial that only the eldest male of an "Illom" (family) is to marry from their own caste or community, leaving other male members to hunt after females of other Hindu communities for satiating their carnal appetite. In consonance with the caste system then prevalent in Kerala, they could only turn towards the Nayar communities for their wives, whose system of marriage then current did not suit their taste and convenience. The principle of this system was, of course, the same as that of other Hindus with this difference that the Nayars followed the "Marumakkathayam Law of Inheritance," which alone in my opinion had contributed nothing for free play from high class intruders in the field of matrimony. Anyhow, the Nambudiris twisted the laws and customs, then in vogue, to their own liking and enforced a rule that the system of marriage followed by Nayars should not be considered as a regular marriage at all, but only a Thalikattu ceremony to be observed as a sort of license for selection of husbands in future. Also, according to them, chastity was a monopoly of their ladies alone. They did not allow their ladies to be seen even by their own caste men, but at the same time they advocated polygamy among the other Hindu communities. Thus the poor victims of the Thalikattu ceremony were easily influenced and seduced to accept offers from others, to whose professed learning and priesthood implicit homage was ever paid by all alike. History teaches us that even the study of the Vedas, Mantras and Sastras was denied to the Non-Brahmins on the false interpretation that the Vedas did not permit it to anybody else but Brahmins. So everything depended upon Brahminic interpretations and the will of the Brahmins was law in every household. This is how the dual system of marriage has originated and taken root in the fabrics of the society.

But the Nayars have begun to realise the absurdity of the system and signs are not wanting for a rapid extinction of this unreasonable custom. Even very big old families that cling to old customs and manners even to the point of death have opened their eyes and begun to perform the Thalikattu ceremony in front of Temple-Gods, the mother of the girl being substituted in the place of the male for the formal Thali ceremony. Some families have even totally given up this and prefer to have only "Sambandham" celebrated as a regular marriage on a grand scale. Even before this awakening it was always considered as sacred and a privilege to have as the husband of the girl the same man who performed the Thali ceremony, and where the Brahmin influence is less, this has become a regular custom. This fact clearly shows that among Nayars, marriage was regarded as a sacred thing sanctioned by religion.

This is only one of the innumerable ways in which the Brahmins have abused their own power, position and influence to suit their own purpose. These Nambudiris are responsible before God for the social, moral and spiritual degradation of the Non-Brahmin communities of Kerala. Though they are supposed to be the custodians of Hindu religion and are responsible for its up-keep, yet it is they who have brought about the degeneration and demoralization not only of Hindu religion but also of Hindu civilization in the whole of Kerala. Anyhow, there is a general awakening and it is to be hoped that better days are in store for the people of Kerala.

Mahim, Bombay, 6th August, 1926. Yours etc., N. N. MENON.

"THE EDUCATION OF INDIA."

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Sir,

May I draw the attention of your readers to a very important book which has recently been published in England, "The Education of India," by Arthur Mayhew, C. I. E. (Messrs. Faber and Gwyer)? Mr. Mayhew was for many years Director of Public Instruction in the Central Provinces. Before that he had been an Inspector of Schools in Madras. Afterwards he acted for a time as Educational Commissioner with the Government of India. He is therefore admirably qualified to pronounce upon the Indian educational system. His book is a terrific condemnation of that system as at present constituted; and he pleads in a most convincing manner for three main reforms, first, for freedom from the control and direction of Government in higher education: second, for the linking up of the educational system with religion: third, for the introduction of a comprehensive scheme of compulsory primary education.

With regard to the last point, Mr. Mayhew points out the extreme inefficiency and wastefulness of the present voluntary system, which, he reckons, costs proportionately four times as much for an out-put of literacy only one-eighth as large as could be attained under compulsion.

The book is written in an exceedingly witty and stimulating style. I ought however to warn your readers, that Mr. Mayhew, who tells us in his introduction that he was shocked when he returned to England to find how un-English he had become in the official atmosphere of India, has very evidently embodied in his book sections that were written before that return; for his work is marred by a number of sweeping and unjust general condemnations of character and mentality in India. Those who read the book must be prepared to distinguish these two strata, and to appeal from Mr. Mayhew the official to Mr. Mayhew the rapturously emancipated non-official.

Nagpur, July 31st, 1926. Yours etc., JOHN S. HOYLAND.

UNEQUAL MARRIAGES.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Sir,

Who would not be shocked to read the heart-rending account of the tragic marriage, (if 'marriage' it can be called) given by Mr. C. P. Nanavaty in your issue of 31st July? I know of more than one such case. Such scandalous customs deserve not merely severe condemnation but prompt and drastic action in the first place by the society, otherwise by the State or even by an individual.

Mr. C. P. Nanavaty suggests that such culprits should be socially boycotted and receive proper punishment by the State. May I suggest that not only should such be treated severely but justice demands that the

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n872/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

parents of the innocent girls who give away their daughters in exchange for a few hundred rupees should also be spurned in like manner?

An old man of 60 years is able to marry a girl of twelve by parting with a sum of Rs. 2,000! Does it not amount to sale outright, and are not the parents of the poor girl liable to public prosecution and contempt?

Calcutta, 3rd August, 1926. } Yours etc., PADAM PRASAD.

HELP THE MINERS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

You must have noticed in the Town Edition of Forward of the 1st instant and the Dak Edition of the 3rd instant that Messrs. Smith, Cook and Rt. Hon'ble Richardson have made through the columns of Forward the following appeal to the Indian Press and public on behalf of the miners of Great Britain:—

"We appeal to our comrades in India to help us in our great struggle against longer hours and lower wages. For fourteen weeks we have fought the Government and the coal-owners who are trying to beat us by starving our women and children. Every little help will cement the solidarity of the workers in the two countries.

"We shall continue our struggle for justice and win not only for ourselves but for all workers the right of economic security. We are fighting the battle of the workers in India by refusing longer hours in England. Help us to win by sending all the money you can to save our children from starvation."

We shall feel thankful if you will give prominent insertion to the above appeal in the columns of your esteemed paper at an early date.

The above appeal, we need hardly say, should meet with a sympathetic response from our country and we are considering what step should be taken towards that end. We trust that in all that we do in this matter we shall have your help and co-operation.

Calcutta, 4th August 1926. Yours etc., Editor, Forward.

"HIGH TABLE" PRACTICE.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In the editorial columns of your newspaper, dated the 31, July, there was a note on "The 'High Table' Practice" which has attracted our attention. We are afraid the whole matter of 'High Table' system has been either misrepresented to you or misunderstood by you.

The students are invited to the high table and not 'summoned' as you say. During dinner all the professors except the Principal, take their seats at the different tables in the hall so that they might get to know the students better by way of social talk. The students would love to see something of the Principal also, and therefore to keep her company eight students are invited, not to share her dinner, but to enjoy each other's company. It is true we have to sit at the 'high table' with unwashed hands, but that we do at every table. It takes time to serve the food to every member of the staff who is scattered about in the big dining hall. They do not have five or six courses as you say but soup and two other dishes—no fruit even—while we have everything kept for us on our tables. The serving is therefore easily done and we finish our meal in no time. Naturally we wait until every one finishes, no matter who it is, students, professors or the Principal. Spoons and forks had been provided for us at the high table in the early days, but as few students made use of them we ourselves decided to eat with our hands. Former students have enjoyed the high table system and I am sure the present ones also enjoy it; but I am afraid there will be a few who are naturally shy. They would rather be left alone in their corners.

Now about the question of serving European food to the students when they are invited to the high table. It was once proposed so. But the students refused to have it since they were sure that they would relish their food better. We can assure you that this is not because of any ill-feeling between students and professors, but because of personal comfort. To coach us in using knives, spoons and forks the professors have kindly arranged to serve European food to the Senior members of the College. One day in the week a certain number of students are invited to partake of European food and a professor is in charge of coaching them in the right use of spoons, knives, and forks.

You say the relationship between staff and students of Loyola College and Queen Mary's College is "agreeable and harmonious". I am glad you found something good to talk about them. But as far as I know of Queen Mary's College the professors seldom see the students when they dine unless they are professors who eat with them or are invited occasionally by the students, while in the Women's Christian College professors and students eat together in the same hall at every meal. Even if the professors taste Indian food they cannot judge its merits and demerits to be a check on the matron. We should advise that any complaint about food may go straight to the College Committee which is the students' representative body in the College. The students who had been in the College know what it is and why it should be practised. May we request the public not to be unnecessarily worried about this practice? We hope that the authorities of the Women's Christian College will continue this practice still as one of the means of establishing good-will and fellowship between students and professors.

Yours etc., Three old Students.

[We gladly publish this letter but somehow it jars on our Indian notions of propriety that people sitting together at the same table should have meals served to them on different scales. If the students prefer Indian food, the professors when they sit with them should do the same.—Ed., I. S. R.]

ENFORCED WIDOWHOOD.

Mahatma Gandhi writes in a recent issue of Young India:—

Sir Ganga Ram has published a valuable table giving the number of widows throughout India with subsidiary tables for each province. The tables should be in the hands of every reformer.

Not many will agree with Sir Ganga Ram about the order, in which, according to him, reform should proceed. He gives the order thus:

1st. Social Reformation.
2nd. Economic Reformation.
3rd. Swaraj or Political Emancipation.

Not so thought Sir Ganga Ram's predecessors every whit as keen social reformers as himself. Ranade, Gokhale, Chandavarkar considered Swaraj to be as im-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n873/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

portant as social reform. Lokmanya Tilak felt no less for social reform. But he and his predecessors recognised and realised the necessity of all branches of reform proceeding side by side. Indeed Lokmanya and Gokhale considered political reform to be of greater urgency than the others. They held that our political serfdom incapacitated us for any other work.

The fact is that political emancipation means the rise of mass consciousness. It cannot come without affecting all the branches of national activity. Every reform means an awakening. Once truly awakened the nation will not be satisfied with reform only in one department of life. All movements must therefore proceed, every one proceeding simultaneously.

But one need not quarrel with Sir Ganga Ram about his arrangement of the order of the needed reform. One cannot but acknowledge his zeal for social reform even though one may not agree with his political or economic panaceas. The figures he has given us are truly appalling. "Who will not weep," he asks, "over the figures which show the misery caused by child marriages and enforced widowhood?" Here are the figures of Hindu widows according to the Census of 1921:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Widows of ages | up to | 5 — | 11,892 |
| " | from 5 | —10 — | 85,037 |
| " | from 10 | —15 — | 232,147 |
| | | | 329,076 |

The figures are also given for the two previous Censuses. The total of 1921 is a triple higher than for the two decades. The widows of the other classes are also given. They only demonstrate still further the enormity of the wrong done to the Hindu girl widows. We cry out for cow protection in the name of religion, but we refuse protection to the human cow in the shape of the girl widow. We would resent force in religion. But in the name of religion we force widowhood upon our three lacs of girl widows who could not understand the import of the marriage ceremony. To force widowhood upon little girls is a brutal crime for which we Hindus are daily paying dearly. If our conscience was truly awakened there would be no marriage before 15, let alone widowhood, and we would declare that these three lacs of girls were never religiously married. There is no warrant in any Shastra for such widowhood. Voluntary widowhood consciously adopted by a woman who has felt the affection of a partner adds grace and dignity to life, sanctifies the home and uplifts religion itself. Widowhood imposed by religion or custom is an unbearable yoke and defiles the home by secret vice and degrades religion.

And does not this Hindu widowhood stink in one's nostrils when one thinks of old and diseased men over 50 taking or rather purchasing girl wives sometimes one on the top of another? So long as we have thousands of widows in our midst we are sitting on a mine which may explode at any moment. If we would be pure, if we would save Hinduism, we must rid ourselves of this poison of enforced widowhood. The reform must begin by those who have girl widows taking courage in both their hands and seeing that the child widows in their charge are duly and well-married—not remarried. They were never really married.

INTER-COMMUNAL DINNER AT LAHORE.

To carry out their programme of promoting inter-communal unity in general, and amity and concord between the Hindus and the Muslims in particular, and with a view to create a friendly and neighbourly atmosphere and check the growing menace of communalism, the Lahore League of Youth organised an inter-communal dinner and invited a representative gathering of all shades of political and religious thought. The dinner took place on the 31st July at Sir Gangaram Buildings, when covers were laid for over 70 persons and among the numerous guests present were Dr. Kitchlew, Mr. Kalinath Roy, Pandit Santanam, Rai Bahadur Bakshi Sohan Lal, Mr. Homi Rustomji, Rao Bahadur Dr. Maharaj Krishna, Mr. Gulam Mohiuddin, Mrs. Chatterjee, Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Jariwala, Dr. and Miss. Bharucha, Mr. Haq and Mr. and Mrs. Bogra.

Mr. H. M. Chatterjee, President of the League of Youth, in proposing the toast of the guests, thanked them for encouraging the League in their difficult task of removing communal tension and sympathising in their programme of work. One inter-communal dinner, he said, taken at one common table, Hindus, Muslims, Parsis and Christians sitting side by side, amidst most friendly atmosphere, can achieve more lasting good and real spirit of brotherhood than hundred platform speeches and paper resolutions. (Cheers).

Evening's Toast.

Dr. Kitchlew then proposed the toast of inter-communal unity and spoke at length on the Hindu-Moslem problem and thanked the President and the members of the League for their efforts in promoting peace and good-will at a time when the people were getting sick of riots and disturbances, engineered by interested and mischievous persons. He had great hopes of the youth of the nation and he hoped that the League of Youth would continue to fight the monster of communalism and help to create that atmosphere of brotherliness which was a feature of the national life of India from 1919 to 1921.

Pandit Santanam seconded the toast in a short speech, which was supported by Mr. Rustomji, Jang Bahdur Singh, Ghulam Mohiuddin and Mr. Chanham. The function was a great success and the gathering dispersed at about midnight.

THE "LIGHT WINES AND BEER" SHAM.

The one sure thing about the wet outcry for "light wines and beer" is that light wines and beer are merely good talking points. What the wets really want is hard liquor.

Don C. Seitz, formerly of the New York World, has not been a Prohibitionist. But he is both sensible and frank in his facing of the facts.

In the Outlook recently he said:

"The persuasives who seek to palliate Prohibition by advocating the sale of beer and light wines do not know the American people. "Hard stuff" is a concomitant with this democracy. The taste dates back to Scotch ancestry, when whisky had to be the beverage of the poor, because it was cheap and easily produced. Wine was the tipple of the rich and the aristocratic, and as such came to be looked down upon by the common people.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n874/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

The country at large would have none of it. Kings, queens, dukes, and lords drank wine. We were democrats, and would have none of it . . . Common folks would not touch it. . . . They were not going to ape the aristocrats of America or the lords of Europe. Not much. . . . Wine, as a popular beverage, was and remains taboo in the U. S. A.

Beer was in the same class with soup. It was a foreign article, and therefore to be rejected; it was also popular with the poor Germans, and therefore continued to be the poor man's refreshment, and did much to keep him poor. The beer shops persistently picked his pockets. In recent years, by pushing it as a "tonic" and a "food," the brewers gave their product some social standing. It was a mean sort of swill, however, compared with the real German article.

From the standpoint of thrift and welfare, the pushing of beer to the front as a mitigant is absurd, and probably owes its origin to the brewers who still have great investments tied up in plants, for which "near beer" brings too small a return. Beer was bad for the kidneys, overloaded the stomach, and provoked much more thirst than it soothed. Surely no one will welcome the shops on every corner, smelling sourly of suds."

There is not a really honest wet in America who will say that his side would be satisfied with the milder intoxicants. The theory back of all the "light wines and beer" talk is that any gain which can be made against Prohibition will furnish toehold for further advances.

At all events, no Prohibitionist should be deceived when the wets ask for "only light wines and beer." The "only" does not belong. And the whole plea is a deliberate trick.—The North-Western Christian Advocate.

"IMPRESSIONS OF RUSSIA."

Advantage was taken of Prof. C. V. Raman's visit to the Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, in connection with the first meeting of the newly constituted Senate and he was persuaded to give an account of his experiences in Russia on Monday the 19th July. The learned lecturer gave a brilliant address narrating his short but memorable visit to Russia, representing India, in connection with the bicentenary celebrations of the Russian Academy of Sciences held at Leningrad. He was given a warm and right royal reception along with other delegates from various parts of the world. He has nothing but praise for the arrangements made there in connection with the celebrations, a grand occasion celebrated with fitting grandeur. The erst-while capital is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, observed the lecturer, combining the many excellences of continental capital cities like Berlin, Venice and Paris.

Though the immediate effect of the revolution was to give a set-back to all scientific work, Prof. Raman assured the audience that the Russian scientists are as enthusiastic as ever in their quest for knowledge and in their contributions to the solution of problems of fundamental importance. The museum in Leningrad is one of the best of its kind in the world—all the sections like zoology, geology, botany, ethnological, archaeological, industrial and scientific, each having its right place in it. The almost complete collection of Indian ethnological interest as well as a complete collection of the paintings and relics of the famous Russian philosopher and novelist, Count Leo Tolstoy, struck particularly the attention of the Indian visitor. He had the privilege of coming into contact with almost all the leading Russian scientists who under very heavy odds being practically isolated from the rest of the world, due mainly to reasons political and economic, are turning out wonderful work.

He also snatched some time and visited Moscow, where he observed many beautiful mansions, and places now being used as schools and technical institutions. He also went to the Caucasian region, and incidentally touched on the new university that has sprung up in Georgia, a small republic under the Soviet regime, where the lessons are taught in Russian as in the days of old, but in their own mother-tongue—a masterly stroke of statesmanship adopted with success by the Soviet authorities to remove discontent among their subjects by giving the widest amount of latitude and freedom. The learned Professor gave not only an account of the intellectual activity of Russia, but also briefly touched upon the social and economic conditions of the country.—Justice, Madras.

BRITISH SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.

Sir Jagadis Chander Bose's Demonstration.

Parliament having dispersed, political topics of discussion have receded somewhat into the background. For the moment more interest is being taken in the proceedings of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, which has been honoured by the participation of the Prince of Wales. What is considered one of the most remarkable demonstrations which have ever been given before the Association was that made by Sir Jagadis Chander Bose, the Indian scientist, this afternoon (August 7th.) Hitherto men of science have held the belief that the life mechanism of plants is a wholly different thing from that of animals, the one being constantly passive and the other aggressive and active. Outwardly, therefore, it has not appeared that there is any continuity between them.

The contention advanced by Sir Jagadis after long continued experiments in Calcutta, that have been arousing world attention, is that such assumptions are entirely wrong. He says plants have hearts and that he can record heart beats clearly, and vary those beats simply by administering stimulants or depressants. By means of exceedingly delicate apparatus, Sir Jagadis Chander Bose to-day was able to show on sensitive plates the reactions of plants to drugs.

Snapdragon's Fight For Life.

To prove that the sap in plants is driven in the same way as blood in man, the lecturer put a dying marigold into ether and another dying marigold into deadly poison. The first plant revived, the second drooped and died. The audience of scientists watched with intense excitement a snapdragon's struggle for life. A spot of light, representing the snapdragon's pulse, was thrown on the wall of a darkened room. Poison was administered to the plant. The spot of light moved to the left—towards death. Then, when almost at the point of death, the snapdragon was given ether. For a minute the spot of light remained stationary, while the forces of life and death met in combat. Then the light moved to the right—towards life. Its first movement to the right was greeted with a storm of applause.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n875/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

A Remarkable Skull.

Another remarkable feature has been the exhibition of a skull discovered at Gibraltar by Miss Garrod. It was a striking commentary on the position women scientists hold to-day. Miss Garrod made the discovery while excavating a site at Devil's Tower. Sir Arthur Keith declared this discovery to be important. He said it was the first completely representative skull of a Neanderthal child yet found. It was the skull of a young boy aged from eight to ten years. There was no doubt that the kind of men living in Europe at this time, over 20,000 years ago, were a most peculiar species. They were more different from us than we could realise. They differed far more from us than the fair Nordic differs from the black Negro. Sir William Boyd Dawkins described how the Neanderthal man had no chin and could not assume the erect attitude. The date of the Neanderthal man was so infinitely remote that they could only measure it by geographical evolution.—The Times of India, Bombay.

—:o:—

SOCIAL REFORM AMONG DEPRESSED CLASSES IN HYDERABAD.

The Hyderabad correspondent of the United India and Indian States writes:

The so-called Depressed classes in these parts have earnestly taken to social reform. The two protestant movements, the Brahmo Samaj and the Arya Samaj, are mainly responsible for the endeavours made at this reform. Many of these have formally enlisted themselves as members of these Samajes and others who have not done so have formed themselves into a Manya Sangam and through the earnest endeavours of men like Mr. Bhagyareddy (a Brahmo), Mr. Baji Krishnarao (an Arya Samajist) and Mr. V. Naik (an orthodox Hindu), they are endeavouring to move along progressive lines. Evil customs of 'Drinking' are being openly done away with, many have taken to 'vegetarian diet' and some have given up animal or goat sacrifices. Recently at 3 places in Secunderabad they stopped sacrificing goats in connection with Bonala ceremony—worship of a deity corresponding to Kali. It is a noteworthy feature this side that these people never take delight in vilifying the Brahmin or the 'twice-born' castes but silently work for reform from within and not from without. They do not even follow the mendicant policy of begging the Brahmins to work for their salvation nor do they care to pour abuses on their heads for their neglect. We do think that the work of the elevation of the backward classes outside Hyderabad, if carried on these silent but rational lines, will be productive of greater good than it is in the case of British India now. 'Reform from within' is their motto here. Can it not be elsewhere in India also a suitable one for adoption? Will it not oil the social machinery which seems to be now getting rusted abnormally? If in the name of reform the flames of narrow communalism were to be fanned there can be no hope for our race or country.

—:o:—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A Wonderful Feat: Miss Gertrude Ederle, the American champion, swam the English Channel from Cape Grisnez to Kingsdown in fourteen hours and a half, which is a world's record.

Lady Wilson: It is stated that Lady Wilson hopes to join Sir Leslie Wilson in November before the Government goes to Bombay. Lady Wilson has sent a donation of Rs. 500 to the Servants of India Society's Fire Relief Fund.

An Adi-Dravida Colony: Sir George Paddison, Labour Commissioner and Protector of the Depressed Classes, Madras, opened on Sunday last a new village called Ganeshapuram at Perambore, for the members of the Labour Department, mostly belonging to the Adi-Dravida community.

Gokhale's Biography: It is given out that the Rt. Hon. V. S. Srinivasa Sastri intends to make a prolonged stay at Bangalore in the interests of his health. While here he proposes to devote himself to writing a biography of the late Mr. Gokhale.

Donations to Benares University: A Free Press message states that His Highness the Maharaja Gaekwad of Baroda has donated a sum of Rs. 1 lakh towards the Library Building Fund of the Benares Hindu University and Rs. 1 lakh more to enable the University to depute its science scholars to foreign Universities.

Depressed Classes and Local Bodies: The Bombay Legislative Council discussed on the 6th instant Mr. Bole's Bill to refuse grants to local bodies which do not allow members of the depressed classes the use of wells, dharamsalas etc. After a short discussion the house accepted the Bill with an amendment that no discretionary grants be given to such local bodies.

Cochin's Excise Policy: At question time in the Cochin Legislative Council on the 2nd instant the excise policy of the Government came in for severe criticism and non-official members urged that the State should adopt prohibition as its goal. When demand under excise was made members suggested abolition of license fee for tapping sweet toddy which has now penalised jaggery industry. Government accepted the suggestion offering to abolish fee from the next official year.

Cruelty to Animals: The text of the official Bill amending the Bengal Cruelty to Animals Act 1920, to be introduced at the next session of the Bengal Legislative Council, is published in the issue of a Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary. In the statement of objects and reasons the Member-in-charge explains, among other things, that much attention having been directed lately to the cruelty involved in the use of buffaloes for draught purposes in the middle of the day in hot season, an opportunity will be taken to penalise such practice by providing a clause in the Bill.

Encouragement of Indian Medicine: The report of the Ayurvedic and Unani Committee, appointed by the U. P. Government with Justice Gokarna Nath Misra as Chairman, is published. They recommend that the Government should declare a policy of State recognition and State encouragement of Indian systems of medicine, and direct the local bodies to establish as many Ayurvedic and Unani dispensaries and hospitals as possible. The Committee also urge upon the Government to raise the status of the Ayurvedic College and the King Hospital at Victoriagung in Lucknow to that of a State aided Unani College.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n876/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Replica of the Speaker's Chair: According to a wireless message, the Duke of York inspected on the 29th July the replica of the Speaker's chair of the British House of Commons, which is being presented by the members of the United Kingdom branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association to the Commonwealth House of Representatives for the opening of the Federal Parliament House in the Australian capital, Camberra. The chair is over thirteen feet high and is a faithful copy, in solid oak, of the original with its elaborate canopy mouldings, pinnacles and pendants. The royal arms above the canopy are carved out of beams taken from the fourteenth century roof of Westminster Hall, and the timbers of Nelson's flagship, Victory, have been used for the hinged flaps attached to the arms of the chair.

German Lady at Sabarmati: Miss Haulginge, a German Socialist, has arrived at Sabarmati and is staying with Mahatmaji at his "Asram" for the last one month. She conversed with the students and professors of the Gujerat Mahavidyalaya and told them about the present situation in Germany. She said that she had come to this distant land in search of truth. She offered her services to the students and said she would be willing to teach them German, if they would prefer it. As the students have shown their willingness to learn German, arrangements are being made to conduct German classes in the Mahavidyalaya, which will be taught by Miss Haulginge. Miss Haulginge comes of a high and noble German family who, she said, had practically outcasted her on account of her socialistic views.

Wadia Brothers' Donations: The scheme for additional hospital accommodation in Bombay, started by his Excellency, Sir Leslie Wilson, is likely to bear fruit in the immediate future. The Evening News understands that Sir N. N. Wadia, who only recently gave a handsome donation of Rs. 18,00,000, for the maternity hospital in Bombay, has jointly with his brother, Mr. C. N. Wadia, made an offer to the Government of the princely sum of Rs. 16,00,000 for a new hospital—Rs. 6,00,000 for the building and Rs. 10,00,000 as an endowment fund. It is proposed to build a new hospital next to the Wadia maternity hospital. The idea kept in view is that it should serve as a medical hospital where medical cases of the King Edward Memorial Hospital should be transferred for treatment and the latter hospital should be used solely for surgical cases. The scheme, which is still under negotiation, will take shape after the Government have consulted the Bombay Municipality who are responsible for medical relief.

World Students' Congress: Two hundred and fifty boys were among the delegates to the Y. M. C. A. World Congress held at Helsingfors (Finland) from 4th August. The delegates included 245 Americans, 16 Australians, 20 Chinese, 22 Indians and 4 Japanese. The Congress was presided over by Mr. John Hott. The delegates were working in 53 small international groups which discussed the results of the worldwide inquiry into the minds of the youth conducted in the past two years. Twenty-five groups were agreed on the predominant importance of the sex problem because of the growth of immorality, birth control, craze for dancing, passion for freedom, bad housing, weakened parental control, insufficient sex education, late marriages for economic reasons, and Freudian psychology. Several boys' groups demanded more information on sex if it was scientific and from the right source and at the right age. Seventeen groups regarded home problem as the most important since its solution involves all. The other groups considered problems in the light of practical Christianity.

Pan-Asiatic Congress: The following is the Reuter's account of the Congress: The Pan-Asiatic Congress opened at Nagasuki on 1st August and was attended by 50 delegates from China, Japan, India and the Philippines. The Chinese delegates, under threat of withdrawal, insisted on the immediate abrogation of unequal treaties including the 21 demands. The Japanese delegates persuaded them to remain promising to do their utmost to meet their request. The Congress rejected the proposal that Tokyo should be the headquarters of the Asiatic League of Nations. The Pan-Asiatic Congress closed on the 3rd instant after electing two Japanese, two Chinese, two Indians and one Filipino as directors of the new League of Asiatic nations. The Congress decided that the next Congress should be held at Peking. It is reported that a Chinese delegate startled the Congress by proposing that the Pan-Asiatic League should assist India and the Philippines to regain their independence, especially India, because India was the base of the white races in the Orient. A Japanese delegate deprecated public discussion of the proposal, fearing that the police would break up the meeting if anything injurious to Anglo-Japanese and Americo-Japanese friendly relations was debated. The Congress finally decided to discuss the proposal secretly later.

Women and Bombay Council: The visitor's galleries were swelled with ladies when Dr. Paranjpye's resolution for the removal of sex disqualification for women voters to stand as candidates to the Bombay Legislative Council came up for discussion on the 6th instant. He referred to a similar resolution passed by the Madras Legislative Council and the opinion of the Government of India to alter rules if provincial legislatures passed such a resolution. Proceeding the speaker said that women would be of more help to deliberations of the house on subjects like Children's Act, temperance and the law of property. Dr. Paranjpye concluded his speech with an appeal to the house to pass the resolution by way of justice and fairness to women. After Mr. Mansuri and Mr. R. G. Pradhan supported, the Hon. Mr. Dehlavi opposed the resolution on national grounds and remarked that the sphere of activities for woman is her home and not the arena of practical politics. He warned the house not to imitate the western nations by introducing this kind of reform as nations which adopted it are now deploring the evil effects of reform. Mr. Gunjal moved an amendment that women of 45 years age are only eligible for election. After some lively speeches from members on the subject Mr. Gunjal's amendment was thrown out and the house accepted Dr. Paranjpye's resolution as amended by Mr. Shivdasani that women voters be nominated to the Legislative Council amidst great applause.

Concord or Competition? At Mrs. Kirpalani's bungalow on Malabar Hill, Mr. B. J. Desai addressed a large gathering of members of the Bombay Ladies' Branch of the National Indian Association. Miss Cursetjee presided. The subject of Mr. Desai's discourse was "Man as viewed by Modern Woman." He sketched briefly the life of man and woman as described by the Hindu Shastras, pointing out the fact that woman then looked upon man as her master while she was considered his counterpart. In support of his statement that life in the early days was more moral, Mr. Desai said that woman regarded her husband as a god and was capable even of the supreme sacrifice of sattee at his

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n877/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

death. With the passage of time, however, ideals changed and woman's view of man was altered and she looked upon him as something akin to herself. Speaking of the woman to-day, Mr. Desai approved of the way in which she had come forward and given her best during the War, but at the same time he condemned her invasion of the spheres of life which had hitherto been considered man's own. The fact that she was competing with man in almost every branch of life, Mr. Desai deplored. His contention was that as woman was man's counterpart she should live in concord rather than in competition with him. At the conclusion of Mr. Desai's lecture Miss Cursetjee said a few words. Whilst agreeing with the lecturer that it was concord and not competition that would make the world a happier place to live in she stressed the fact that the man of long ago was a more godlike person than he is now. He had more respect for woman and woman in those days deserved respect.

ADVERTISEMENTS

SERVICE GUARANTEED. Wanted candidates for training. Decent employment or MONEY BACK. Guarantee Prospectus on 2 annas stamp. Principal, City College of Commerce, Delhi.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.
Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.
We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.
Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.
Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

NOW READY
SHRI BHAGAVAD-GITA
DEVANAGARI TEXT
FREE TRANSLATION INTO ENGLISH
A Word-for-word Translation
Introduction to Sanskrit Grammar
BY
Dr. Annie Besant
AND
Babu Bhagavan Das, M. A.
Revised and Enlarged
A Complete word Index added
Pages 320—Index pages 73
Cloth and Gold... ... ... Rs. 5-0
Cloth and Ink ... ... ... Rs. 4-8
Boards ... ... ... ... Rs. 3-12
Theosophical Publishing House,
Adyar — Madras — India.

BELL & CO. LTD.
Tel. Add. "PFAFF." } SOLE AGENTS FOR { Estd. 1921.
SEWING MACHINES.

STRONG: DURABLE: LIGHT:
Class 11 Family Hand Machine Rs. 90.
Class 31 Tailor Treadle Machine Rs. 140.
BRANCHES ALL OVER INDIA.
Same Price Everywhere.
V. V. THAKUR,
Managing Director,
CARNAC ROAD, DHOBI TALAO,
BOMBAY 2.

THE INDIAN REVIEW.
JUNE NUMBER.
Reaction Against Liberalism. By Mr. J. T. Gwynn, I.C.S. (Retd.)
Coalition of Parties in Legislature. By Mr. Mukandi Lal, M.L.C.
Purgatories or Reformatories. By Prof. Diwan-chand Sharma, M.A.
Gokhale's Legacy. By Mr. G. A. Natesan.
Twelve Years of Rural Work. By Mr. K. T. Paul, O.B.E., B.A.
The Art of India. By Dr. James H. Cousins, D.Litt.
Maharajah Jang Bahadur. By Prof. C. S. Srinivasachari, M.A.
The New Dewan of Mysore in Islamic Lands By Mr. V. B. Metta.
The Message of Buddha. By Mr. R. R. Diwakar M. A.
Indian Public Life. By Mr. K. R. R. Sastry, M.A.
Lone Wanderer: (A Poem) By Swami Paramananda.
My Experiments With Truth. By Mahatma Gandhi.
The Root of the Evil in South Africa. By Mr. C. F. Andrews.
A Historic Tragedy. By Dr. A. J. Saunders, M.A.
On Growing Old: (A Peom.) By John Masefield.
Single Copy Annas Eight.
Annual Subscription Rs. 5.
A few copies of back numbers of January, February, March, April and May are available. Mahatma Gandhi's autobiography which is printed regularly from the March Number is continued month after month.
G. A. NATESAN & CO.,
Publishers, Madras.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n878/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,26,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30 6-23) ... ... ,, 1,63,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... ( ,, ,, ).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kalol ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 9,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n879/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.
(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office :—BARODA.

Branches :—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS :

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application,

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon ; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription : Inland, Rs. 6|—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33|1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil News paper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to :—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.
SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED ,, ... | ... | ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP ,, ... | ... | ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS , ... | ... | ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide Insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea.

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER.

London Agents :—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A. :—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo., East Africa, etc. etc

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n880/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n881/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY No. 4.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Omar S. Surjia Paude. Price Rs. 2-0-0

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

The English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world. Price 15 shillings or Rs. 10. Only a few copies are available.

Apply to :—

THE MANAGER,
The "Indian Social Reformer."
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n882/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price:-TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1926. No. 51

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's Case. | Wanted a Brahmin Sabha. |
| Municipal Schools in Bombay. | Moral Education. |
| Factories in Bombay. | The Currency Commission Report. |
| Powers of Police. | A Memorial Lantern at Penukonda. |
| Untouchables and Use of Temple Roads. | India's Need for Social Reform. |
| Village Panchayats. | Prohibitionists in World Conference. |
| The Sabarmati Movement. | Untouchables and Use of Temple Roads. |
| Opium Consumption in India. | Powers of Police. |
| New York City. | News of the Week. |
| Marriage Customs among Nayars of Malabar—I & II. | |

NOTES

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's Case: The Government of Bengal has withdrawn from the prosecution of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonji for violating the order prohibiting them from entering Calcutta for two months. The order evoked a large volume of protest throughout the country and an influential deputation waited upon his Excellency the Viceroy about it. In withdrawing the case against Panditjee, the Public Prosecutor admitted that the perusal of the full text of the speech upon which the order was passed showed that it was conciliatory and not provocative. This is as we expected. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya even in his dreams cannot say anything calculated to offend anybody's susceptibilities, and it was a surprise that he should have been proceeded against for making violent speeches. Government have done the right thing in dropping the prosecution which should never have been started. We do not think that it is a triumph for anybody, and we still hold that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya should not have set an example of disobeying an order passed by a constituted authority, especially in the recent circumstances of Calcutta city. It is a pure chance that his entry did not cause a commotion, as there easily might have been one. He took a very grave risk and while we are glad that he has come out scathless, it is a risk to which no man of public eminence should expose the country and its communities.

Municipal Schools in Bombay: Good progress in compulsory primary education is recorded in the Bombay Municipal Schools Committee's administration report for the year 1925-26. Before the introduction of the scheme in November 1925, the total number of pupils of compulsory age attending the Municipal and aided schools in the F. and G. Wards was 5,663 while the results of a preliminary census taken at the time showed that the total number of children that could be brought under compulsion in that area was 17,613. Thus only 32 per cent of the number of children of school-going age were taking advantage of education while the remaining 68 per cent would almost have lapsed into illiteracy, had it not been for the timely introduction of compulsion in that area. The policy of compulsion has been fully justified by its results; as can be seen from the fact that in the short period of five months the number of those attending schools increased from 5,662 to 12,000 out of a total of 17,613 of school-going age, and it is to be hoped that the remaining number will also be soon brought under the scope of the Act. The actual cost of compulsion which is estimated at Rs. 1½ lakhs, is not much, considering the useful work the schools have been doing. It is a pity that Muslim girls who are notoriously backward in point of education, owing to the senseless opposition of a few parents, should be exempted from the operation of the Act, and we are glad to see that correspondence with Government is going on in the matter of bringing the Mahomedan girls of the F. and G. Wards under the operation of the Act. We hope the Corporation's scheme for the other wards which is said to be under consideration, will fructify soon. The medical inspection conducted in schools by the two medical inspectors and the medical inspectress discloses a disquieting state of affairs. It is said that on an average about 70 per cent of the girls and 60 per cent of the boys are afflicted with some sort of disease or other. We are not told, however, whether the Corporation has taken any steps towards treatment of the diseases as they come to light. The most unsatisfactory feature of the report is the poor quality of buildings in which the schools are housed. The medical inspectress and the two medical inspectors found the premises of 68 schools to be unsatisfactory. Of the 343 Municipal schools, only 14 are Municipal-owned. No wonder, therefore, they are most insanitary and often unfit for school purposes. We are told that negotiations are being carried on with Government for a vigorous scheme of Municipal-owned school buildings and Government, we hope, will realise its responsibilities in this direction by giving an adequate building grant. The Schools Committee ought also to be congratulated on its recent appointment of a committee to enquire into the location of liquor shops near school buildings, which, if not promptly attended to, will be a source of great peril to the younger generation.

Factories in Bombay: The Annual Factory Report of the Bombay Presidency for 1925 indicates that the measures for improving the conditions under which operatives work are being steadily enforced. There are now 1460 factories in the Presidency, a net increase of 115 during the last year. The increase, it is said, has been due chiefly to the registration of small concerns employing approximately 20 persons in each. The number of operatives employed in all industries rose from 354,453 in the previous year to 370,460. While the number of women in factories has increased from 72,679 in 1924 to 77,624 in 1925, it is satisfactory to note that the number of children has decreased from 9,779 in 1924 to 8,460 in the year under report. But there are two disquieting features in the Report. One is the evasion of the law regarding the employment of children in two factories the same day which still continues despite official efforts to stop it. The certifying Surgeon at Ahmedabad points out that elimination of double certification depends on the better co-operation of the employers, but it is stated

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n883/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

fication marks has reduced the number of evasions. The other is the Sathi system, still prevalent in Ahmedabad, under which children are brought in from the villages to work in the mills under an agreement whereby they are maintained by their recruiters who take in return the wages earned by them. It has been alleged that the system has been abused and that such children are made to work in two mills, but official inquiry seems to show that the system is not widely prevalent. The certification system has reduced the number of children employees and the introduction of compulsory education in large towns is also expected to narrow down further the scope of double employment of children. Government have also in hand legislation for penalising parents or guardians who are responsible for such employment. Social workers in the City would also do well to keep a close watch on the activities of these individuals. A considerable amount of attention was also paid to the match factories in the Bombay and Thana Districts. Some were heavily fined for the irregular employment of women and children. There was a material increase in the number of accidents which have risen from 922 in 1917 and 2,606 in 1924 to 3,115 in 1925. Serious accidents numbered 599 in 1925 as against 170 in the previous year and 75 in 1917. There is no cause, however, for alarm. The abnormal rise in the serious accidents is ascribed to the new method of classification under which accidents, involving absence from work for 21 days or more, are treated as serious. The number of fatal accidents however, fell from 82 in 1924 to 50 in the year under report. Considerable improvement is also recorded in ventilation and sanitation in factories.

Powers of Police : We referred in a recent issue to two important judgments, one in Bombay and the other in Calcutta. In the Bombay case, the High Court vindicated the right of the accused for counsel while in the Calcutta case a Bench of the High Court decided that the police had no power to detain an accused for an indefinite period without producing him before a Magistrate. But as this decision went against that of another divisional Bench of the same High Court, the matter was referred to a Full Bench. We publish elsewhere the judgment of the Full Bench which has also answered the question in the negative. Section 61, Criminal Procedure Code, lays down twenty-four hours' time for the detention of the accused after which he should be brought before a Magistrate, but it was contended for the police that the Calcutta Police Act did not mention any time and that the practice in Calcutta for about the last sixty years was that accused persons were detained for such period as might be necessary for completing police investigations. Their lordships, however, rightly held that the Calcutta Police Act should be interpreted in conformity with the Criminal Procedure Code which applies to the whole of India and that the Calcutta Police Act could never have intended to authorise detention for an indefinite period. By this decision, their lordships have not only laid down the law for their province, but have also set a good example for other Provinces to follow. It is extraordinary that a power which is admittedly unjustified and unjustifiable should have remained unchallenged for nearly sixty years.

Untouchables and Use of Temple Roads: We call the attention of our readers to the judgment delivered by Mr. K. K. Chacko, Bar-at-law, District Judge, Parur, on the injunction petition presented by some Brahmins to restrain the "Avarna" Hindus from entering the roads near a certain temple of the place, extracts from which we publish on another page. The learned Judge held that "the plaintiffs are not entitled on principle and, on the authorities, to pray for a temporary injunction to restrain the "Avarna" Hindus from using the roads in question". The plaintiffs' contention was that the way in question was not a King's highway common to all the subjects, but only a "Grama Veethy" or common highway to which the public have generally no absolute right. The learned Judge, however, held that since the disputed road is admittedly used by Christians, Mahomedans and Jews alike, it is a public road or King's highway in the broadest sense of the term, and that consequently "the prejudices of particular sects ought not to be allowed to override the primary rights of the King's subjects to use for ordinary purposes what is admittedly a way or path belonging to the State, maintained at the State expense and freely used by Christians, Mahomedans and Jews alike." He further held that "the mere fact that "Avarnas" like the Ezhavas were not using the road for some time, however long, cannot affect their rights unless, perhaps, it is proved that the plaintiffs have acquired a prescriptive right to exclude them." If the courts continue to take such a broad and sympathetic view of the rights of untouchables as the learned Judge has done in this case, the problem of untouchability will be solved before long and orthodoxy will be routed.

Village Panchayats: The report on the administration of Village Panchayats in the Madras Presidency for the year ending 31st March 1925, published recently, records good progress. The year opened with 329 Panchayats and ended with 579, an increase of 250 in their number, due in no small measure to the efforts of the honorary organisers. The activities of the Panchayats cover a wide field. The maintenance and repair of the village streets and roads, clearance of prickly-pear and other bushes, control of chatrams and chavadies, supervision over aided Elementary Schools, maintenance of village irrigation works, opening of markets and protection of standing crops and other property, these were some of the directions in which the Panchayats have been doing useful work. The Registrar-General of Panchayats, Rao Bahadur Gopalasawami Iyengar, however, observes that the work of organising and developing Panchayats has been done against odds. There is first of all the opposition of the vested interests of all kinds, official and non-official. Secondly, there is the apathy of the villagers towards these new institutions. As the report rightly points out, the villagers "have, during the past century, come to look outside the village for everything. The restoration of a feeling of self-reliance to people who have been nurtured in a tradition of helplessness, is an uphill task." Government has been equally apathetic towards the Panchayats. It is certainly no credit to the Government that "not a single rupee had, up to the end of the year under report, left the provincial exchequer in aid of funds of any Panchayat," and that honorary organisers have so far been working without any remuneration, "not even their out-of-pocket expenses when travelling on Panchayat work being reimbursed to them." The Registrar-General in his report makes some valuable suggestions to remove the difficulties in the way of the working of the Panchayats, such as the remedying of the defects in the present Act, the linking of the Panchayats more closely with departments of general administration and the enlisting of a band of genuine honorary workers, but beyond "reading with great interest", Government is not disposed to take any bold action on the report.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n884/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, AUGUST 21, 1926.

THE SABARMATI MOVEMENT.

Now that Non-Co-operation is out of the way, it is necessary to find a suitable term to designate the activities which were obscured and to a considerable extent hindered by the predominance it has gained over them. Perhaps, it would be more correct to say of these activities that they have sprung up on the soil deposited by the Non-Co-operation flood, though the soil in this case contained their seed also. However it may be the Non-Co-operation movement has left in its wake certain activities which collectively may be designated as the Sabarmati movement or school of thought. We prefer to characterise it by the name of the locality where its head-quarters are, than by that of Mahatma Gandhi to whom, of course, it owes its origin and inspiration because the name of Mahatmaji evokes, and will continue to evoke, enthusiasm or prejudice, which must colour in one way or the other the individual's judgment of it. The site-designation, on the other hand, leaves the judgment free to work upon the merits of the several items which comprise the movement. It is worth noting here that Mahatma Gandhi, intensely and deliberately Indian as he seeks to be, is wholly European in the mode of his mentality. The Indian mind as a rule likes to travel from the general or even universal to the particular. It loves to base itself on broad metaphysical principles which cover not only human relations but embrace also cosmic relations. Caste, marriage, religion, are all ultimately rooted in some metaphysical belief with which the reformer has to deal before he can produce any effect on current custom and institutions. Mahatmaji's mind, on the other hand, moves from particular to particular. He has a more vivid appreciation of facts than of the why or how of them. The primrose by the river's brim is an yellow primrose to him—that and nothing more. His is not the thought that if he knew all about the flower in the crannied wall, he would know what man is. It is more than probable that this is not the natural tendency of Mahatmaji but an acquired one, acquired as the result of much meditation and hard training. In other words, Mahatmaji is or has decided that he should be a man of action, and consequently it is often left to others to construct a theory from the several activities if they wish to grasp the idea underlying all of them.

The Sabarmati activities or institutions are, broadly speaking, four in number and at the first observation they seem to have grown up independently of one another and to exist in isolation from one another except for the connective link of Mahatmaji's personality. They are first, the newspapers Young India (English) and the Navjivan (Gujerati and Hindi) with their printing press which is accommodated in Ahmedabad city; secondly, the cotton department; thirdly, the cattle farm; and lastly, the Vidyapith. There may be others but these are the ones which came to one's notice during a casual and flying visit last week. The newspapers are Mahatma Gandhi's personal organs as much as his hands or eyes. They reflect his moods. In them he thinks loudly of things, great and small, ephemeral and eternal, They may, therefore, be left out of consideration on this occasion. The cotton department is a highly organised department—the most highly organised one of the Sabarmati school. In official classification, agriculture and industry are two separate and distinct departments, so much so that the Governor of Bombay in a recent speech spoke of the antagonism between their interests. The Sabarmati, and the more logical and scientific, school treats the growing, spinning, and weaving of cotton, with all their technical details, as one organic subject to be treated as a whole and between whose several stages there can be no antagonism. Several acres of land are under cotton cultivation, different varieties, but all Indian and indigenous, being grown with a view to selection for the uses most appropriate in each case. The cotton is gathered, cleaned and passed through all the processes preparatory to spinning, and is spun and woven into various fabrics. In all these, advantage is taken of modern tests, and every effort is made to meet them. This is the right method of agricultural as well as industrial development: to start with the indigenous and familiar and to improve upon it in the light of modern knowledge and requirements. The cotton plants, as remarked above, are all indigenous. The persons who are employed in the several operations are all Indian men and women so that the lessons of their mistakes as well as successes are not lost to the country. The Government expert when he wants to improve cultivation first thinks of introducing exotics, plants and men, and it is only after many failures that he learns to work upon and with native materials and men. The Sabarmati method is the right one for the object of developing India, though the foreign importation method may yield quicker results in the exploitation of the country. The same principle, it was understood, is followed in the cattle farm. More can be done in this direction by proper feeding and caring for indigenous cattle than by cross-breeding from imported bulls under the supervision of imported experts—a method favoured by the official department. While the method pursued so far as it goes in these two activities is sound, and the only right one, it seems, especially as regards the cotton side of Sabarmati activities, that the limit placed upon its development is more artificial than natural. An automatic charkha has been invented which spins and reels in one process. It is only one step more to have it or an adaptation of it worked by a small electrical plant rather than by the human hand. Time-saving is as worthy an object of endeavour as the recognition of the dignity of labour. We cannot by any human means extend the hours of the day. We must, therefore, make the most of it. Mahatmaji does not seem to have paid special attention to the revolution that electricity is working in industry. It is eliminating all the evils which we deplore in the steam-factory system while securing all its advantages. Mankind will never acquiesce in drudgery as a permanent scheme of life. Head, heart and hand must work together to produce the happiness which is also the dignity of labour. We should like Mahatmaji to give some part of his time to the study of the industrial revolution consequent on the large-scale production and application of electricity to uses in fields, factories and homes. We must reserve the Vidyapith and some other aspects of the Sabarmati movement for another article.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n885/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

OPIUM CONSUMPTION IN INDIA.

While the Government of India has been rightly congratulated on its proposal to reduce gradually the export of opium to foreign countries so as finally to extinguish it in the course of a few years, the statement which it has recently issued on its policy towards the internal consumption of opium has given much dissatisfaction to the Indian public. Government, after an exhaustive review of the situation, declared that the policy of aiming at the total prohibition of opium for purposes other than medical or scientific would be clearly impracticable even if it were desirable. Government added that there is no evidence that there is any serious and wide-spread abuse of opium and that it would regard as entirely unjustifiable any departure from its present policy of non-interference with a moderate use. True, the abuse of opium is rare in a large part of India and opium addiction as such does not exist in many sections of the community. But there are certain black spots in the country which call for drastic action. The pamphlet on The Opium Situation In India which the Opium Research Committee of the Foreign Policy Association, New York, has recently published, gives telling figures in this connection.

The index figure, generally accepted as a standard, is 12 lbs. per 10,000 of the population per annum, laid down by the League of Nations Opium Committee. But the average for the whole of India is 24 lbs., exactly double the League of Nations figure. This average, however, does not reveal the situation as it actually exists, because large sections of the country fall far below the League figure and the greatest difference is shown in the figures of the various provinces and even of the individual districts of each province. The highest consumption is in Assam where the average for the entire province is 104 lbs. per 10,000 of the population. The figures for the various districts range from less than 2 lbs., in Sylhet to 474 lbs. in the Sadiya Frontier Tract. In Bengal, adjacent to Assam, the average is 16 lbs., but the figures for practically all of the districts, with the exception of Calcutta and its environs, fall far below the 12 lbs. set by the League. It should be noted in this connection that the districts showing the lowest per capita consumption are rural areas. On the other hand, the figure for Calcutta with its more than one million industrial inhabitants rises to 287 lbs. Coming down to the south, the highest consumption is reached in Balasore, Puri and Cuttack, Ganjam, Godaveri, Madras and the industrial centres throughout Bombay. The figure for Balasore is 110 lbs. while the average for the province of Behar and Orissa is only 16 lbs. The figure for Ganjam is 45 lbs., Godaveri 134 lbs., Madras 52 lbs., and Bombay 86 lbs. Throughout the greater part of the province of Madras, the figures are far below 12 lbs. and opium eating as an evil can scarcely be said to exist at all. In the province of Bombay, the average figure is 44 lbs. with Panch-Mahals, 125 lbs. as the highest. The points of highest consumption are the cities of Bombay, 86 lbs., Broach 102 lbs., Hyderabad, 104 lbs., Karachi 93 lbs., and Ahmedabad 89 lbs. The Punjab, N. W. Frontier Province and the United Provinces show a fairly high average. The figure for the Punjab is 24 lbs. with 120 lbs. as the highest point, that of the United Provinces, just over 12 lbs. with 64 lbs. as the highest, and that of the N. W. F. Province 20 lbs. with 40 lbs., as the highest point in consumption. The low average of the United Provinces is worthy of note in view of the fact that practically all of the opium in British India is grown there. Baluchistan has an average of 12 lbs, and Ajmere-Marwara 105 lbs. In the C. P. and Berar, the average is 32 lbs. with 70 lbs. as the maximum. The average for Burma is 57 lbs., while the highest consumption ranges to 294 lbs. in Mergui.

The policy of the Government of India in regard to the black spots more or less amounts to this, that things are to go on very much as before, with merely a raising of the price of opium, while not even a word is said about rationing. This, as Mr. Andrews rightly points out in a contribution to the press, will only lead to a further increase in the financial returns from opium and to little else. The report of the Assam Congress Opium Inquiry Committee is conclusive on this point. It showed that the policy of "maximum of revenue with minimum of consumption" has not been attended with good results. While the retail price of opium was increased year by year, consumption did not show any material reduction. The Committee wrote that "neither the decrease in the number of shops, nor the raising of the price of opium, nor the change in the method of licensing, had any appreciable effect on the consumption of opium in the Assam villages and among the Hill tribes." In Calcutta which is the worst black spot in all India outside Assam, we are told that registration would be impracticable and that the only remedy is to increase the price of opium. In Bombay where doping of infants with opium is notorious among the labouring classes, the Government of Bombay relies upon education as the sole remedy for the evil all the while, however, taking care to continue the nefarious trade in opium and increase its revenue from that source.

A factor in the consumption of opium in British India which cannot be lost sight of is the smuggling of opium from the Indian States. The Punjab Government, for instance, complains that it can do nothing with the excessive consumption of opium in the Central Punjab, because it comes flooding over the borders from the Simla Hill States and Rajputana. If there is any subject which calls for a uniform policy for the whole of India, it is opium, and if it has been found possible to have a uniform policy for the whole of India in certain matters without doing violence to the independence of the Indian States, we cannot see how it will be impossible in the case of a subject which is as vital to the welfare of the subjects of Indian States as to those of British India.

The Government of India's stand by the obsolete report of the Royal Commission of 1893 is deplorable. During the thirty and odd years which have followed, Government has so to speak made it the cornerstone of its opium policy. The Government

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n886/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

of India has all along endorsed the opinion of the Commission "that the opium habit as a vice scarcely exists in India," and "that opium is extensively used for non-medical and semi-medical purposes in some cases with benefit and for the most part without injurious consequences." This was in effect the position taken by the Government of India's representatives at the Hague Conference of 1912 and the International Opium Conferences held at Geneva in 1924-25. Recent scientific researches have, however, exploded the medicinal qualities of opium. The Assam Congress Opium Committee, for instance, held that opium is useless in cases of dysentery, malaria and kala-azar, a view that has been confirmed by eminent medical authorities. No evidence has also been forthcoming in support of the curative and prophylactic qualities attributed to opium in cases of malaria. The traditional defence made by the Government of India in favour of the existing policy, namely, that opium is necessary as a household remedy in view of the scarcity of medical assistance in the rural districts, is also untenable, for it is precisely in the urban districts and in the large industrial centres (except Assam) where medical assistance can be had that opium consumption is highest. In view of these recent developments, a fresh inquiry into the cause and effects of opium consumption in India is urgently called for, but the Government of India and the Provincial Governments fight shy of such an inquiry, and it is to be hoped that the Conference of Excise Ministers of the various Provinces which is to meet shortly in Simla will result in something substantial towards the elimination of the evil.

NEW YORK CITY.

An Interpretation.

(By a New Yorker.)

A New Yorker (not the writer) once died and went to the other world. A denizen of that country began to show him the sights.

"Here," he cried with a flourish, "is an office building that surely dwarfs your Woolworth Tower—it is exactly five times as high!"

The New Yorker raised his brows, but appeared bored. Then a mighty roar whizzed past overhead.

"Whazzat?"

"Just one of our little elevated trains," offered the guide with a superior smile. "Makes four hundred miles an hour; structure built in tiers, you see six of them.....But you show no wonder, no enthusiasm—what's the trouble?"

"Well," hesitated the New Yorker, "it's all very wonderful, of course.....I admit it beats New York; but somehow.....somehow I sorta felt that Heaven would be different."

Bursts of laughter, loud and long. "Why, this isn't Heaven, man—this is Hell!"

Champion of western industrialism, we lead the world in business and commerce. But whither are we leading it? Surely the report of this visit to the other side can't be true! And yet.....we squirm a bit under a pestering doubt.

New York is playing a game, and industrialism has made the rules. Men actually call it a game.

"I'm in the advertizing game now—big money if you've got the right line of dope!"

"Zat so? I'm in the preaching game—learning the pulpit tricks. Great stuff!"

To a certain type of administrator, politician, policeman or school-teacher, manipulating the vast masses under him with self-conscious civic authority and gusto, handshaking, backslapping, "treating," bluffing to get some "pull" with the "man higher up" to "land a bigger job,"—life is a game.

To a business man working long and hard in the office, "pulling off" many a "clever deal," wedged in the subway crush in the swaying, deafening, stuffy train, scanning the garbled headlines, while blank to the rest of the herd, eating a delicatessen supper assembled by his wife who has been "sitting around" all day gossipping with the neighbours and "minding" the baby, hurrying off again way down town to a "good show" to take his mind off the work of the day and rest up for the fight of the morrow—life is a game.

To the ambitious youth who tolerates the East Side till he can "move" to the Bronx, who loves his parents because they are his, but looks down upon them because they are unlettered and foreign, who drills all day in the ranks of commerce or industry and runs out in the evening to a "swell" dance or a "hot" movie—life is a game.

To the boy of the lower West Side, who when freed from the iron rule of the large class with its sullen obedience and furtive smirks roves about the asphault streets in predatory gangs, avoiding motor cars by a sixth sense and plain-clothes policemen by a seventh, breaking street lights either accidentally with a baseball or maliciously with beanshooter or "rock," cooking "mickies," getting chased by the "cop," diving in and out of the flat in the firetrap tenement to get some "grub" left by the "old woman" out doing washing, dodging the blows of the "old man" returned dull and tired from the truck or factory—life is a game.

To the respectable old-stock American who rents a small house in the suburbs, "fixes" the furnace in the early morning, bolts his breakfast, rushes for the train and wakes up gradually as he begins to read the stock-market changes in a pall of cigar-smoke, who comes home to a late dinner in time to see his children put to bed, who toils in the city, sleeps in the suburb, but takes civic interest in neither—life is a game.

Of course life is a game to the professional actor, pugilist or ballplayer, to the sensation-hunting reporter, to the man about town, to the Broadway girl.

Now the game in New York is by no means poor and dull. The edges of the City are washed by the sparkling Hudson, the air is keen and clear (except when the coal-strike game fills our cellars, chimneys, linen and noses with "substitute"), the streets straight and wide, the buildings warm and high. The players play with humour, "pep" and abandon.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n887/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

But the game is often cruel and confining, and it has no aim or meaning; men are born into it and grow old in the playing—and who started it no one seems to care. The cutting rules bind the players, and the players feel the bonds, but the players have never read the rules, and know not whence they come or why they bind.

Now a game, however wide-spread and long-drawn-out, is yet a game. It is not real life in its fulness. One by one some of the players will step out of the game to get a rest and a change. They will then watch the game with amazement. They will get the rules and read them. They will discover who made them. They will ask questions and demand answers, sometimes in hot anger, sometimes with the patience that comes from vision. They will realize they have been the slaves and sport of industrialism. In their new-found conscious power they will collect the other players, summon industrialism before them, and make him revise the rules to suit their vital needs, their craving for freedom and variety. Man will become the master, industrialism the servant.

Will other cities follow New York all the way into the game and out again before they learn how to revise the rules or will they seize the opportunity to learn by watching ?

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS AMONG NAYARS OF MALABAR.—I.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In last week's Reformer, there appeared a letter from Mr. N. N. Menon headed "Marriage Customs among Nayars of Malabar." As it is likely to mislead such of your readers as have no first-hand knowledge of Malabar, I would like to place the following facts before them.

Mr. Menon speaks of the Brahmins as a class of intruders who have ruined the beautiful and fertile land of Kerala. This is nothing short of twisting the facts. We have authentic proof that the Nambudiri Brahmins have been inhabiting Kerala ever since the land was raised from the sea by Parasurama, a Brahmin. To speak of the Nairs alone as the children of the soil is therefore contrary to fact and truth.

It is least convincing to be told that the laws of marriage followed by Nairs have been twisted and moulded by Nambudiris to suit their own ends. The arguments brought forward by Mr. Menon in support thereof, though plausible, are not sound.

The Marumakkathayam Law favoured the independence of ladies of a Nair family, and it is no wonder therefore that the womenfolk retained the freedom of marrying anyone at their sweet will and pleasure. It would thus be plain that the Nambudiris have not been responsible for the 'moral degradation' of the Nair community.

I do not intend to accentuate the differences between Brahmins and Nairs by developing this any further. After all, it must be admitted that the inter-marriage between the two communities has been productive of more good than harm. It has gone a great way in levelling the distinctions between them. Respectable Nair gentlemen are not ashamed to own their Brahmin parentage and have been moving in the social world on a plane with orthodox Brahmins.

Matunga, Bombay, Yours etc.,
17th August 1926. K. R. VARADARAJAN.

II

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

SIR,

I should be obliged if your readers will enlighten me on the following points :—

(1) Is it true, the Nairs had no marriage ceremony worth its name until Sir Sankaran Nair introduced it ?

(2) Someone wrote the other day, a Nair girl is sacramentally married to one man and really married to another. How can a sacrament be called a false ceremony ? May I know its details and description please ? Is there any book about the Nair customs and their origin?

(3) What is the meaning of "Kala Vichar" ? Kala means death or deadly in Sanskrit. How far can one trace back the custom ?

Mayavaram, Yours etc.,
8th August 1926. AN INQUIRER.

WANTED A BRAHMIN SABHA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The brow-beatings and assaults of especially Brahmin Congressmen in the recent Madras Corporation election meetings and the little protection they received from the Government show mainly, if not solely, the deep distrust of the Government towards the Brahmin community here and their natural weakness to defend themselves under such distressing conditions. In order to remedy the situation, it would be much better if Brahmins in Southern India direct their attention to the following :

1. To place on record the loyalty of the Brahmins to the British Crown in order to clarify the atmosphere in the first instance.
2. To look after the interests of the Brahmin community—social, political and economic—and weld it into an efficient unit.
3. To find out new avenues of life for the unemployed and the rest.
4. To popularise widow-remarriage in the community.
5. To put an end to child marriage by legislation so that the community may not degenerate morally, physically and mentally.

To carry out the above aims and objects a Brahmin Sabha is needed in the first place. It can be established in Madras as its head-quarters with branches in different centres throughout the Presidency. Every Brahmin above 25 years of age can be admitted as a member on receipt of a yearly subscription of Re. 1. Life-members can be enrolled on receipt of Rs. 100/- or so. Those who do not belong to the community but who are in sympathy with the above aims and objects can also be admitted.

The Sabha need not be anti-national and may even work in furtherance of nationalism without jeopardising its position.

These suggestions are tentative in nature and I place them in all humility before men of light and leading in the community for their consideration and adoption.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n888/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

In the light of recent occurrences in Madras, Brahmins should but organise by adjusting themselves to local conditions. They cannot be any longer philosophising while liberty of speech and action is threatened in broad day-light. The problem is, therefore, urgent and calls for immediate solution.

Natteray, P. O., Aug. 13th, 1926. Yours etc., E. GOVINDAN.

MORAL EDUCATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The need of a system of moral education has been well-emphasized. Moral education is conceded to be the necessary off-set to juvenile crime and the guide that will help our young people to discriminate between right and wrong.

Of all the benign influences that can be brought to bear on the formation of character, moral education, I believe, is the most potent, the most elegant, the most far-reaching. It has become now a matter of statistics that moral education lowers the criminal record.

Why, then, is the solution of the problem so prolonged? Probably because our educational system, science and business are largely based on the law of cold intellect. Nevertheless, just as intellect is on the point of assuming undisputed sway, its structure is seen to be crumbling as heart-education was not made the corner-stone.

We believe that the spring of action and the forces that determine conduct come to us out of that "fountain of life" that humanity has ever spoken of as "the heart." Again and again do we reiterate the sacred instructions that "The pure in heart shall see God", and that "Out of the heart are the issues of life." Yet what are our schools and colleges doing to reach this "fountain of life" whence spring affection, desire, and impulse?

We do not believe in teaching religion in our public schools, that is, our religion or our neighbour's religion; but we do believe that the great principles of justice, good-will and kindness—principles which underlie all religions, to which men of all religions can subscribe—are infinitely more necessary in the curricula of our schools, and infinitely more vital to the poeples' future than a host of things that our school teachers have to teach.

The quickest and most hopeful way of reaching the masses is through immediate and wide-spread moral education in our schools. There seems to be no authority for holding, as many may do, that a moral attitude is developed naturally and need not be taught. Morals can be taught to young minds just as easily and effectively as English or Algebra. All that is necessary is to begin early enough.

The heart tells us that imagination is the mirror in which truth is reflected for the mind to see, and that on the perfection of the "reflecting surface" depends the success and power of the mental processes. When the heart is in control, aspiration takes charge of all the moral functions, and then there is reflected a positive attitude antagonistic to immorality.

We believe that the time is coming near when man will grasp the great fact that the human receiving station for truth is not the mind working through the intellect, but is the heart working through the intuition. So every great discovery has developed from an idea flashed suddenly from the intuition, after which it was made practical and applied by many minds.

Now, if our patriots wish to dispel every form of prejudice or unkindness from amidst our people, let us make our children go by the path of moral education.

Perozepore Cantt., Punjab, 13th August, 1926. Yours etc., BHAGAT RAM.

THE CURRENCY COMMISSION REPORT.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

As the subject of Indian Currency is of great importance and in view of the impending legislation to fix exchange at 1s. 6d. and the dire consequences likely to result therefrom, may I suggest, through the columns of your paper, that public bodies, especially the political and Commercial Associations, deem it very necessary to undertake and publish, without much delay, in simple language and readable form, a correct short resume of the currency question embodying in it reflections from the Indian point of view, on the Royal Currency Commission Report and the minute of dissent of Sir Purshottamdas?

You are probably aware that even amongst the best educated people, there are many who do not understand or follow this complex Currency question. It is, therefore, necessary to make these facts very easily available and hence any such publication meant for free and broadcast distribution or sold at a mere nominal cost would go a great way to bring this question within the reach of many a people and help to swell the existing public opinion against the ruinous and mischievous Government proposals.

Bombay, August 16th, 1926. Yours etc., DHIRAJLAL CHAGANLAL.

A MEMORIAL LANTERN AT PENUKONDA.

(From a correspondent).

On Sunday the 8th evening the towns-people of Penukonda witnessed a novel function when Mrs. Kesava Pillai, wife of Dewan Bahadur P. Kesava Pillai, President, District Board, inaugurated a memorial street lantern by lighting the lamp. The lantern was a gift from Mrs. I. J. Pitt of Cambridge, an old resident of Penukonda and other towns-people. It was in memory of a pious man in humble life of Penukonda by name Avula Munisami, a faithful attendant of the lady for over two decades. With a view to commemorate his name, the lantern was designed with a pedestal containing the inscription fixed up with a lantern of brass frame on the top of it. In response to the invitation issued by Janb Rasool Saheb, the energetic President of the Union Board, there was a large gathering in which there were the Deputy Collector, Mr. Ramanatham Pantulu, Mr. Ramnath Sujir, the District Munsiff, Mr. Ramaswami Ayya, the Tahsildar, Mr. Ramamurthi Sastry, the Stationery Sub-Magistrate, Dewan Bahadur P. Kesava Pillai and Mr. T. Sivasankaram, President, Taluk Board, Penukonda. A galaxy of ladies with Mrs. Kesava Pillai, Mrs. Sujir, Mrs. Ramanatham Pantulu among them also graced the occasion.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n889/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Mr. T. Sivasankaram gave a short account in Telugu of the origin of the memorial and requested Mrs. Kesava Pillai to light the lamp. The lady accompanied by her friends proceeded to the pedestal amidst a procession of ladies present and lit the lamp. Eatables were distributed to the children present while 'pansupari' and flowers were given to those assembled.

Mr. Rasool Saheb, the Union Board President, accepted the gift on behalf of the Board and requested Mr. T. Sivasankaram to convey its grateful thanks to Mrs. I. J. Pitt and the towns-people who contributed towards the gift.

Mr. Kesava Pillai, rising amidst cheers, thanked the Union Board President for affording him and his wife an opportunity to associate themselves with the evening's function inaugurated by his esteemed friend, Mrs. Pitt of Cambridge. He recounted how when he fell ill in London on his way to British Guiana, he sought her help and how she came from Cambridge to comfort him. He also recalled the happy recollections of his visit to Cambridge on his return journey as to what a warm welcome he had while there from both Mrs. Pitt and her good mother, Mrs. Poole. He referred to the great services the good lady was silently doing for India in various ways and to her charitable disposition in caring for the poor and the needy. He also remembered with gratitude of her solicitude for Indian students in Cambridge and concluded by saying that English people of this kind were an asset to the British Empire drawing the two races together even amidst occasional racial aberrations. He also took the opportunity to acknowledge as the President of the District Board an endowment of Rs. 300 from the same lady towards the same purpose with a view to institute a stipend for the best Audi-Andhra boy prosecuting his studies in the High school to be called "Munisami Memorial Stipend" for the Audi-Andhras. He also held up the memorial as an object-lesson to towns-people in the direction of inaugurating civic charities. The gathering terminated with an expression of thanks by Mr. T. Sivasankaram to both the ladies and the gentlemen for their presence.

INDIA'S NEED FOR SOCIAL REFORM.

A Lecture.

The Lucknow correspondent of the Leader writes:—

Under the auspices of the Servindia Study Circle, Miss Zakia Sulaiman delivered an interesting speech on the 12th instant before a house packed to its uttermost capacity on 'India's need for social reform'. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru presided, and among others there were the Hon. Raja Sir Rampal Singh, Pandit Jagat Narain, the Hon. Raja Nawabali Khan, the Hon. Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, Pandit Manoharlal Zutshi, Miss Shannon, Rai Bahadur Thakur Hanuman Singh and Pandit Krishin Prashad Kaul. Hundreds of Muslim and Hindu students of the University filled the hall. Dr. Chakravarti wrote apologising for his unavoidable absence.

Miss Sulaiman then dwelt on the importance of woman in the family unit. She strongly emphasized the need for absolutely equal rights and privileges for the weaker sex when the weaker sex bore equal responsibilities with men. Miss Sulaiman quoted from the teachings of Prophet Mahomed and showed how he always advocated full rights to women. The lecturer felt horrified at the practice of child marriage as found in India. How could men, she asked, conceive of such marriages. She drew dreadful pictures of such girls, deficient in body, mind and spirit, who were burdened with marriage responsibilities while they should be playing about and receiving instruction. Miss Sulaiman then expressed her utter surprise at the purda system as in vogue in India. She had to exercise her mind a great deal before she understood what purda meant. No such thing was to be found in Egypt. She seemed horror-struck at the practice of shutting up the fair sex behind closed doors against God's beautiful world. Would men exchange places with women and try the purda for a while?

The lecturer gave an interesting account of national life in Egypt and women's part in it. She, amidst loud applause, explained how all Egyptians were Egyptians first in Egypt and everything else afterwards. The country and its love comes first and religion, sects and castes, all should come next. She further went into the question and history of the Egyptian flag and impressed how to-day all Muslims and Christians in her country lived in amity and harmony under the Egyptian flag of the Crescent and of the Cross. She concluded her address by appealing for unity amongst the various communities in India and begged of the audience to sink all their petty differences at the altar of India and work for their country's political freedom. The priesthood did not exist in Egypt. Worship of God is a personal matter for an individual. Why, in India, the priest played such an important part in the people's life was not clear to the lecturer.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru expressed appreciation of the lecturer's views and speech.

Mr. Justice Gokaran Nath Misra formally moved a vote of thanks on behalf of the members of the Servindia Study Circle and the citizens of Lucknow and amidst thundering applause said that thousands of their sisters and daughters behind the zenana were yearning for Swaraj for their motherland and would heartily respond when the call for duty came. He expressed the hope that other nations outside India sympathised with the efforts of Indians for political freedom. He thanked Miss Zakia Sulaiman for her interesting, instructive and thought-provoking lecture.

The meeting lasted an hour and a half.

PROHIBITIONISTS IN WORLD CONFERENCE.

A correspondent writes to the Hindu, Madras:

The Eighth International Prohibition Conference of the World Prohibition Federation was held simultaneously with the gatherings of the Anti-Alcoholic Congress at Dorpat (Tartu), Estonia, on June 24th and 26th, 1926.

Mr. Guy Hayler's Presidential Address was delivered before a representative gathering in the University Buildings where the Conference was held. Mr. Hayler paid tribute to fallen comrades such as Joseph Malins (England), Patriarch Templar, and the Hon. Edvard Wavrinsky, International Chief Templar, both known through the world as Good Templar leaders and thorough-going Prohibitionists; special reference was also made of the fine service rendered to the movement by Messrs. F. W. M. Uzuret, G. C. T. (Holland), Ottila Hoffmann (Germany), Maria C. Brehm (United Sta-

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n890/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

tes); Henrik Foss, G. C. T. (Denmark), Tennys Smith and Edward Jones G. C. T. (Wales), the Rev. John Dawson (New Zealand),—men and women possessing the true pioneering spirit.

OVER A HUNDRED YEARS OF TEMPERANCE EFFORT.

In the year 1832, Mr. Joseph Liversey inaugurated the Total Abstinence Movement, which has resulted in the present world-wide scope of prohibition enterprise. What the personal pledge can do for the individual as Liversey well knew, the enactment of prohibition can do for the nation as Neal Dow foresaw—create a new way of life wherein some of the high ideals of mankind may be realised. As time goes on and the scientific facts of the dangers of alcoholism become more widely known by means of teaching in day schools, colleges, university, and through the common propaganda among people generally, abstinence is being adopted to increase efficiency, guard against sickness and more adequately meet the duties of citizenship and the requirements of everyday life.

LEGISLATION IS THE ONLY REMEDY.

But it must be legislation that gets down to the roots of the trouble. The pages of history teem with legislative failures, i. e., attempts to improve the associations of the liquor traffic without removing the liquor; a feeble tinkering at shortened hours; in other words, a cleaning of the outside of the patler. Wherever legislation of this sort has been tried it has led the liquor traffic to beat the law by some strategy of circumstance of which the promoters were either unaware or could close their eyes to. Any daily paper will show that liquordom has no respect whatever for law. The sole and simple remedy for the liquor evil is prohibition. It is the master method and the only reason why it is not more generally tried out as a social policy is because our statesmen lack courage and vision or are interested in the concern. They talk glibly about democracy but seldom seem prepared to refer questions to the people. The road to social freedom from the curse of alcoholism is by way of a free, direct vote of the people. There are simple and sound reasons why the people should be consulted. Their case is a powerful one.

Mr. Hayler concluded his address with a strong plea for the wider publicity of prohibition facts. In every country of the world almost the liquor interests are working with might and main to confute the spread of the prohibition idea. Undoubtedly the idea is growing but the channels of public utility are being poisoned by the manufactured statements sent out through the National and International Liquor Organisations. The future holds out strenuous campaigns for every worker in the field upholding the white banner of prohibition. There is need for more concentrated effort, greater liberality of time and money in the service, and a closer drawing together in all fields and in all lands throughout the world.

—:o:—

UNTOUCHABLES AND USE OF TEMPLE ROADS.

A TRAVANCORE DECISION.

The following brief extracts of the judgment delivered by Mr. K. K. Chacko, Bar-at-Law, District Judge, Parur, dismissing the petition for an injunction to restrain the "Avarna" Hindus from entering the roads adjoining the Kannankulangara temple will be read with interest.

It may be well to observe that, on principle, it appear almost impossible to hold that any community whateve the religious views or sentiments in the matter be, ha the right to prevent any other community from exerci ing their elementary rights of citizenship, viz, the righ of passing and repassing along a public path or road. I has, however, been argued for the plaintiffs that the wa in question is not a public or King's highway commo to all the King's subjects but only a common highwa or "Grama Veethy" as it is called, and that under th law that is prevalent in Travancore, the public generall have no absolute right to the use of the road. For th position that, at any rate in Travancore, there is a well-re cognised distinction between a King's highway an a common highway thoroughfare or "Grama Veethy" the plaintiffs rely on the ruling reported in I. L. R. 97 The defendants characterise this distinction as fanciful and unfounded. The disputed road, which is admittedly used by Christians, Mahomedans and Jews alike, is a public road or King's highway in the broadest sense of the term.

Taking, then, the road to be a public road or King's highway it follows as a matter of course that any one of the King's subjects may pass along it or use it for all lawful purposes. It may be observed that the question in this extreme form, viz., whether the members of any particular community have a right to prevent the members of another community from merely walking along a common highway as distinguished from their right of conducting religious or other processions was not specifically raised in any of the reported decisions in British India where apparently the distinction between King's highway and common highway or thoroughfare is not recognised in so far as it relates to the present controversy. But from the decided cases in British India relating to the question of religious processions and kindred subjects, it is clear that such a right as is now asserted by the Brahmin plaintiffs in this case would not be recognised by the British Indian Courts.

The British Indian High Courts have, in recent times, resolutely set their face against the assertions of any such right on the part of one community against another even in cases where the question involved was one merely of preventing religious processions or the carrying of idols along a public way and not the elementary right of passing and repassing.

With regard to privileges claimed on the ground of caste or creed it may be observed that they had their origin in times when a State religion influenced the public and the private law of the country and are hardly compatible with the principles which regulate the British Indian administration, the equal rights of all citizens and the complete neutrality of the State in matters of religion. The members of one caste have not been allowed to restrict the members of other castes from the free use of public thoroughfares.

The Pariah in Malabar is no longer excluded from courts of justice. These are innovations, but the superseded usages are obviously condemned by the spirit of our laws. The prejudices of particular sects ought not to influence the law. It is fairly clear that the Legislature could not have intended to lay down that all local customs, however unreasonable, should be respected and followed merely because there is associated with them

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n891/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

some tinge of caste or religion or quasi-religious sentiments.

The prejudices of particular sects ought not to be allowed to override the primary rights of the King's subjects to use for ordinary purposes what is admittedly a way or path belonging to the State, maintained at the State expense and freely used by Christians, Mahomedans and Jews alike. The mere fact that "Avarnas" like the Ezhavas were not using the road for some time, however long, cannot affect their rights unless, perhaps, it is proved that the plaintiffs have acquired a prescriptive right to exclude them. Apart from the fact that the Ezhavas were not using the way for some time past there is nothing to show that, by custom, they have been excluded from the use of the way. The plaintiffs are not entitled, on principle and on the authorities, to pray for a temporary injunction to restrain the "Avarna" Hindus from using the roads in question.—Champion, Calicut.

—:o:—

POWERS OF POLICE.

Important Calcutta Decision.

A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court, consisting of the Acting Chief Justice, Sir N. R. Chatterjee, Mr. Greaves, Mr. Rankin, Mr. Panton and Mr. Mukerjee, delivered judgment on the 11th instant in the reference in which the question of the powers of the Calcutta police to keep in custody an arrested person for an indefinite period for the purposes of investigation was raised.

The matter arose thus. During the Calcutta riots a Mahomedan was arrested by the Calcutta police. The day after the arrest an application for bail on his behalf was made before the Deputy Commissioner who refused the application and kept the arrested man in police custody without producing him before a Magistrate. Then an application, in the nature of habeas corpus, was made on his behalf in the High Court. Mr. Justice Rankin and Mr. Justice Chotzner, who heard it, held that the Calcutta police had no such power to detain without producing him before a Magistrate, but as this decision was against that of another divisional Bench of the Calcutta High Court, the matter was referred to a Full Bench.

Sir N. R. Chatterjee, Acting Chief Justice, in the course of a lengthy judgment, said that section 61, Cr. P. C., allowed twenty-four hours' time for such detention, while sections 9 and 76 of the Calcutta Police Act did not mention any time, but said that an arrested person might be detained until he could be brought before a Magistrate.

After referring to section 69 of the Metropolis Act of London and other cognate Acts relating to the right of an arrested person, His Lordship observed that the principle involved was the same in all Acts and section 61 of the Criminal Procedure Code applied to the whole of India and so the intention of the Calcutta Police Act did not mean that the detention should be for an indefinite period. It had been urged that the practice in Calcutta for about the last sixty years was that accused persons were detained for such period as might be necessary for completing police investigation. Accused persons were brought before the Deputy Commissioner of Police, who was a Justice of Peace, who either discharged them or sent them for trial or sent them back to the lock-up. It was said that the detention was under some rules framed by the Commissioner of Police under the powers conferred on him by section 9 of Act IV of 1866. It seemed these rules referred to orders and regulations for the guidance of police officers and for the internal management of the police force and the words "for rendering the force efficient in the discharge of all its duties" could not, his Lordship thought, include the power of making rules for detaining a person arrested without a warrant for a longer period than was necessary for producing him before a Magistrate If the practice in Calcutta originated from these rules it could not be said to be based upon a solid foundation. If section 76 of the Calcutta Police Act did not empower the police to detain accused persons for the purposes of investigation, the question arose whether there was any provision for remand. Section 167 of the Cr. P. Code gave power to Magistrates to remand accused persons to police custody for investigation for fifteen days. Then section 344 gave power to Magistrates to remand them before commencing trial. In these circumstances it was for the legislature to consider whether provisions should be made authorising and regulating remands to police custody. For the above reasons his Lordship answered the question in the negative, made the rule absolute and directed the release of the arrested person.

The other Judges agreed with the views expressed by the Acting Chief Justice.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Conference of Excise Ministers: It is understood that a Conference of Excise Ministers from the various provinces will commence in Simla on Sept. 21st.

A Munificent Donation: A Free Press of India message says that Rani Ananda Kumari Devi of Bhowal has made a donation of Rs. 40,000 to the East Bengal Saraswat Samaj and another donation of Rs. 10,000 to the Widows' Home, Dacca.

Encouragement to Indian Cement: We are glad to note that in accordance with the declared policy of the Bombay Corporation the Commissioner has written to the Standing Committee of the Corporation that only Indian cement should be used for structural or other work of the Municipality.

Madras Religious Endowments Bill: The Government of India have sanctioned the re-introduction of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Bill, embodying, among other things, several alterations proposed by them, in the ensuing session of the Legislative Council.

Non-Brahmin League of Youth, Madras: At a meeting of some non-Brahmin youths of Madras, held recently, a resolution was passed forming an organisation called the Non-Brahmin League of Youth to work for the promotion of their interests and obtain equal rights and privileges.

Bombay University Convocation: A Convocation for conferring degrees on the new graduates was held last Tuesday evening. Sir Brajendranath Seal, Vice-Chancellor of the Mysore University, delivered the Convocation Address which was characterised by a wealth of knowledge and learning which one could expect of him. This is the first time in the annals of the University when an eminent man from another University has been called upon to deliver the Convocation Address.

Exhibition of Indian Art: The exhibition of old Indian paintings and textiles promoted by the Society for the Encouragement of Indian Art was declared open on Wednesday evening at the Town Hall, Bombay, by Her Highness Chimnabai Gaekwar, in the presence of a very large and distinguished gathering. Sir Dinshaw M. Petit in requesting the President to perform the opening ceremony complained that India was being denuded of some of the best examples of her art and asked for legislation, prohibiting the export of old treasures. The Maharani commended the efforts of the Society and remarked that the exhibition would hold a worthy place among the various efforts made to stimulate public interest in Indian art. She praised the Bombay School of Art and hoped for the establishment of similar institutions all over the country.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n892/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

A Widow Marriage: According to the Bera correspondent of the Forward, one Bejoy Halder of Talat was married to a widow girl of his own caste. The marriage was performed according to rigid Hindu form. This is the first move in that quarter. Almost all the leading members of the fishermen community showed keen interest in the matter. Sjts. Lalit Mohan Adhicary, Secretary of the Bera Hindu Saba, Kamakhyaprasad Dhar, representative of the Pabna Hindu Relief Committee, Narendra Narayan Chakravarty, Sachindra Nath Bhoumik and others of all classes were present. A few more marriages are expected to be performed.

A Bachelors' Association: It is with great pleasure, says the Republic, Cawnpore, that we hear about the formation of an association of bachelors at Kunnamkulam in Cochin. This Bachelors' Association, we are informed, will consist of young men who are prepared to take an oath that they will remain unmarried throughout and will dedicate their lives for national and social service. We have always felt the supreme need of such associations to effect the regeneration of our downtrodden mother-land. We are always anxious to be informed about the programme and progress of such associations.

Prevention of Cow-slaughter in Mysora: Legislation to prevent slaugher of cows having been repeatedly pressed upon Government by both Houses of the Mysore Legislature, Humanitarian Leagues and Gorakshana Sabhas, the Government of His Highness the Maharaja has recently announced the appointment of a mixed committee consisting of two Mahomedans, two Christians and five Hindus with Sir Puttanna Chetty as Chairman to consider the laws in force in other parts of India in this connection, to take evidence on religious, social and economic aspects involved and otherwise of undertaking legislation or taking any other steps for preventing the slaughter of cows in Mysore.

Administrative Changes in Kolhapur: On the occasion of the 30th birthday of the Maharaja of Kolhapur which took place on August 9th, a State Gazette Extraordinary was issued announcing a great administrative change. The Dewan of the State will hereafter be the head of all the departments of the State, and will be in direct charge of the Feudatory and Political Departments, the other departments being under his supervision. There will be three other Ministers besides the Dewan enstrusted with the Financial, the Revenue, and the Judicial Departments, and they will be considered as subordinates to the Dewan. The Dewan with the three Ministers will constitute the Council of the State, which will give its opinion on all important matters, besides those connected with legislation.

Reforms for Cochin: Some members of the Legislative Council of Cochin have presented a draft of a constitution for consideration of the Dewan. According to the scheme the Maharaja will be the constitutional head of the State and there will be a State Council to advise His Highness to exercise extraordinary powers under exceptional circumstances. The Council will be composed of the Dewan, the Speaker of the Legislative House, and the head of the department within which the question for consideration arises. The Legislature will be composed of not more than 60 and not less than 50 members, all elected by the people, the franchise being extended to all taxpayers and all graduates. The term of the Legislature will be four years and the House shall have the power of the purse. The Executive which will be fully responsible to the Legislature will be composed of the Dewan and Council of four Ministers. The Judiciary will be independent of the Legislature and the Executive and will be removable only by an address to His Highness the Maharaja on a vote of the Legislative Council carried by two-third members in an extraordinary session.

Depressed Classes of Simla: The reclamation of a large number of Kohlis, which came off on June 11 last in the Arya Samaj Mandir, Simla, writes a correspondent to the Leader, Allahabad, has been serving as a great stimulus to other Kohlis to elevate their depressed condition by joining the Arya Samaj. Consequently, in compliance with the request of the Kohli inhabitants of the village, the Arya Samajists of Simla went to Satrol near Sairi to reclaim them. Satrol is situated at a distance of 14 miles from Simla. The party from Simla reached Satrol on the evening of Aug. 7 and was accommodated comfortably in the house of Lala Ishar Das. Next morning, after meal, the reclamation ceremony took place. One could observe an expression of joy on the faces of Kohli men, women and children who were anxiously waiting for the sacred hour. The usual ceremony, which was performed by Pandit Jai Deva Vedalankar, ended in bringing 80 persons into the fold of the Arya Samaj. Holy thread was also given to those who earnestly demanded it. Afterwards, speeches regarding the removal of untouchability and the amelioration of the condition of the depressed classes were dilivered by Rai Sahib Lala Ganga Ram and Pandit Charan Das.

Labour Deputation to Madras Home Member: A deputation on behalf of the provincial committee of the All-India Trade Union Congress consisting of about fifteen representatives of labour unions waited on the Home Member, Madras, who is in charge of the Labour portfolio, in the committee room of the Legislative Council on the 6th instant, the Labour Commissioner and the Secretary to Public Works and Labour Departments being also present. The deputation asked for special representation of labour in the Legislative Council and in the Assembly, an inquiry into the system of levying fines on work people obtaining in various industrial concerns in the Presidency and lastly for investigation into the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. D. Shiva Rao, the President of the Madras Labour Union, who led the deputation in his personal capacity, wished to point out to Government that there were great hardships imposed upon women workers in the Presidency because of the lack of maternity benefits. He also drew attention to the fact that there was not a single woman factory inspector although the number of women employed in industrial establishments was about 27,000. The Home Member assured the deputation that their representations would be most carefully considered by Government.

National Federation of Bengal: At the inaugural meeting of the National Federation at Calcutta on the 11th instant Mr. Bepin Chandra Pal delivered an address and said that a similar attempt was made some two years ago to establish a common platform at Bombay by Mr. Mohammad Ali, the then President of the Indian National Congress, which was attended by leaders of all parties. He emphasised that the National

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n893/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Federation, which was founded that evening, would become a common platform for men of all parties and people of all castes and creeds, and they would all work under one banner. The clarion call for unity has again been raised, and he was sure those who want Swaraj never meant that Swaraj could be attained by inaction. Swaraj, in his opinion, meant the protection of one's own country, and for that, the training of the countrymen was indispensable, but, however, he did want a model of the West to be established in the East. He did not want even a model of Japan to India. The West, he affirmed, wanted to kill the independence of other countries in order to build their own, but that was impossible in the East. He appealed to men who wanted to make their country a land of peace and unity, to join as members of the Federation. Mrs. Sarala Devi Chowdhurani, who presided, gave a detailed description of the work to be undertaken by the Federation, and said that the creed would be that he or she belived in the redemption of India by building up one single Indian Nation and helping to evolve higher types of humanity. Membership was open to all and many leading men of all parties were enrolled as members with Mrs. Sarladevi as President, Mr. J. M. Sen Gupta, and Mr. Chakravarty as Vice-Presidents and Mr. T. C. Goswami as Secretary.

ADVERTISEMENTS

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

NOW READY

SHRI BHAGAVAD-GITA

DEVANAGARI TEXT

FREE TRANSLATION INTO ENGLISH

A Word-for-word Translation

Introduction to Sanskrit Grammar

BY

Dr. Annie Besant

AND

Babu Bhagavan Das, M. A.

Revised and Enlarged

A Complete word Index added

Pages 320—Index pages 73

Cloth and Gold... ... ... Rs. 5-0

Cloth and Ink ... ... ... Rs. 4-8

Boards ... ... ... ... Rs. 3-12

Theosophical Publishing House,

Adyar — Madras — India.

To Our Subscribers.

A subscriber from America writes to us to supply them with some missing numbers in order to complete the files of their library. As some of the copies are not available at our office, we would be glad if any of our subscribers can spare the following missing numbers, which would be paid for at the rate of 8 annas per copy.

| Year. | | Issues. |
|---|---|---|
| 1912 | ... | August 18 and 25. |
| 1915 | ... | December 5. |
| 1916 | ... | January, February, March (all numbers except March 26th), April 2, 9, October 8 and 22. |
| 1917 | ... | July 1st. |

THE MANAGER,

The Indian Social Reformer Office,

NAVSARI CHAMBERS,

OUTRAM ROAD, FORT,

BOMBAY

THE INDIAN REVIEW.

JUNE NUMBER.

Reaction Against Liberalism. By Mr. J. T Gwynn, I.C.S. (Retd.)

Coalition of Parties in Legislature. By Mr. Mukandi Lal, M.L.C.

Purgatories or Reformatories. By Prof. Diwanchand Sharma, M.A.

Gokhale's Legacy. By Mr. G. A. Natesan.

Twelve Years of Rural Work. By Mr. K. T. Paul, O.B.E., B.A.

The Art of India. By Dr. James H. Cousins, D.Litt.

Maharajah Jang Bahadur. By Prof. C. S. Srinivasachari, M.A.

The New Dewan of Mysore in Islamic Lands By Mr. V. B. Metta.

The Message of Buddha. By Mr. R. R. Diwakar, M. A.

Indian Public Life. By Mr. K. R. R. Sastry, M.A.

Lone Wanderer: (A Poem) By Swami Paramananda.

My Experiments With Truth. By Mahatma Gandhi.

The Root of the Evil in South Africa. By Mr. C. F. Andrews.

A Historic Tragedy. By Dr. A. J. Saunders, M.A.

On Growing Old : (A Peom.) By John Masefield.

Single Copy Annas Eight.

Annual Subscription Rs. 5.

A few copies of back numbers of January, February, March, April and May are available. Mahatma Gandhi's autobiography which is printed regularly from the March Number is continued month after month.

G. A. NATESAN & CO.,

Publishers, Madras

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n894/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE
Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,16,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30 6-23) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon, Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—½ % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
25-2-25 Managing Director.

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.
Branches : { CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
Nira ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... (District Satara).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kalol ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 9,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,
5-1-26. Managing Director.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n895/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.
(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-25. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6/—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33/1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.
SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED | ,, ... | ... ,, 5,93,42,125 |
| PAID UP | ,, ... | ... ,, 1,18,68,425 |
| TOTAL FUNDS | ,, ... | ... ,, 1,64,01,848 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Chart schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable in London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every way and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A.:—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n896/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | 2 Inches. | ¼ Column. | ½ Column. | 1 Column. | 1 Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. | Rs. a. |
| 13 | 15 0 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 |
| 26 | 25 0 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 |
| 52 | 38 0 | 56 0 | 95 0 | 136 0 | 255 0 | 500 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n897/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

PAPER! PAPER!!

CHEAPEST HOUSE
FOR
ALL KINDS OF PAPER.

AMERICAN BOND PAPER A SPECIALITY

Ledger Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Rough Paper, Croft Paper, Brown Paper and all kinds of Paper available at a Very Modest Price. Glazed and unglazed Creamlaid, etc., etc.

ANY COLOUR READY FOR DELIVERY.
Ruby, Manila Envelopes—All Current Sizes Available
Hoogly Printing Inks—All Colours.

Superior Quality! Satisfaction Guaranteed!!

SEND TRIAL ORDER AND SATISFY YOURSELVES.

Apply for Catalogue and quotations to:

G. A. ACHARYA & Co.,
MERCHANTS & AGENTS,
IMPORT & EXPORT,
26, Parsee Bazar Street,
FORT, BOMBAY.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

The English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world. Price 15 shillings or Rs. 10. Only a few copies are available.

Apply to :—
THE MANAGER,
The "Indian Social Reformer."
Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n898/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE Price TWO ANNAS

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Office:—NAVSARI CHAMBERS, OUTRAM ROAD, FORT. Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Annual Subscription (Inland) Rs. 7-8-0 (Foreign) Rs. 10-0-0.

Vol. XXXVI. BOMBAY—SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1926 No. 52

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest——I will not equivocate——I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch——And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Culture Grades.
A Juvenile Criminal.
Blind Relief in India.
The South African Whites' Policy.
Indian Labour in Ceylon.
A Welcome Announcement.
Sound Advice to Social Workers.
The Currency Bill.
Lala Lajpat Rai.
The Sabarmati Movement—II
Education in India.
Some Primary Principles of Socialization.
Marriage Customs in the Hills
Indian Fabian Society.
The Indian Currency Bill.
An Inter-Caste Wedding.
The Andhra Responsive Co-operation Party, Rajahmundry.
Untouchability.
Importance of Public Opinion.
What Wahabism Means for Arabia.
News of the Week.

NOTES

Culture Grades : Mr. Torajiro Naito, writing in Young East, Japan, compares the cultural standard in the several countries he has visited. His general conclusion is that other things being equal the culture of a country is in inverse proportion to its economic prosperity. The United States of America, Mr. Naito considers the least cultured and next to it England. France, he regards, as being more cultured than England, Italy more than France. In fact, he holds that Italy was the original source of European culture and that the nearer a country is to Italy the deeper was the cultural influence it received from Rome. Mr. Naito is of opinion that the Catholic nations possess higher culture than Protestant nations. Speaking of his visit to Wembley Exhibition, he says that many exhibits from India and even from Burma were such as few Englishmen of the present-day could produce so far as artistic design and skill of execution were concerned. "In fact", he writes, "I was so strongly impressed with the disparity seen in the degree of culture between England and India and her other Asiatic dependencies that I began even to question the rationality of Englishmen giving rule to a country like India which possessed so highly advanced a culture." Mr. Naito holds that Chinese culture is superior to that of his own country. China and India in Asia and France and Italy in Europe, are in his opinion the countries which possess the vitality born of ancient culture. The Asiatic nations, he says, should be careful not to lose their superior culture until the European people catch up with them.

A Juvenile Criminal : A Mahomedan boy of 16 years, has been sentenced at the High Court Sessions of Calcutta to transportation for life. During the recent Hindu-Mahomedan riots in Calcutta, the boy struck a door-keeper with a knife. The man died as the result of the injury. The boy, Yusuf Beg, was charged with the offences of murder, culpable homicide and grievous hurt. The Jury acquitted him of the first two and by a majority found him guilty of the last. The Judge in passing sentence said that it was true that the boy was a tool in the hands of others, but in view of the communal tension, he had to give him the maximum punishment. We think this is not sound reasoning. The boy cannot be made responsible for the communal tension and transporting him for life would not put a stop to it. A life sentence in practice is considered to cover twenty years. The boy when he comes out of prison will be thirty-six years of age, and in the prime of life. The 20 years in jail will not make him a useful member of society. The chances are that he will emerge from prison a desperate criminal bent on wreaking revenge on society for the way in which it had used him. Apart from humane considerations, it is not to the interest of society to create criminals out of impulsive young boys by depriving them of the opportunities of earning a honest living. Government, we hope, will change the sentence to a more suitable form so that the lad may grow into a useful member of society.

Blind Relief in India : It has been found that though a large number of people suffer from eye diseases in India, the medical relief agencies were not adequate to cope with the work. Most villages had no relief organisations at all and even where there were medical relief centres, ignorance, illiteracy, superstition and poverty came in the way of sufferers availing themselves of the relief provided. The result was that thousands of people affected with diseases of the eye hoped to find release only in death, whereas attention, help and timely medical aid would have gone a long way to prevent or mitigate blindness where the disease had not become acute. During the seven years of its existence the Blind Relief Association, started through the joint efforts of the late Dr. Chhatrapati and Mr. C. G. Henderson, has done much to bring light to the blind. The Report of the Association for last year shows that the work is not confined to medical relief only and much is being done indirectly for the welfare of the blind. Two distinct systems of work are adopted by the Association for the prevention of blindness; the Group system and the Rotation system. Eight to ten villages with an average population of 8,000 are grouped together and placed in charge of a trained worker called the field-worker. He is required to visit all cases of births in the various villages of his group and to detect and check eye diseases in the juvenile population. The duty of the field-worker of the Rotation system consists in finding out operable and acute cases of blindness and treating them. Spectacles are provided free of charge to those in need of them and particular care is taken to save the eyes of those affected by small-pox at various centres with very good results. To the Association also belongs the credit of maintaining the Industrial Home for the Blind where those who have totally lost their eye-sight are given literary and industrial training to enable them to obtain employment. In view of what has been done and what there is still to do, it is incumbent on the philanthropic public of Bombay to help the Association not only to carry on but also to extend its work.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n899/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

The South African Whites' Policy: The Whites in South Africa are not deterred by the ensuing Round Table Conference from pursuing their nefarious anti-Indian policy. News comes from Durban that the Governor-General of South Africa has given his assent to the Natal Townships Ordinance, which disqualifies Indians from franchise rights in urban areas. Like the Boroughs Ordinance of 1924, it prescribes that only parliamentary voters are entitled to be enrolled in the list of voters for election of Councillors and, as Indians had been deprived of the parliamentary franchise by Act 8 of 1896, they are disqualified from exercising the franchise. Throughout Natal, in various town-ships, hundreds of Indians own landed properties to a considerable value, and the effect of the Ordinance will only be to deprive them of what little voice they now possess in the safe-guarding of their interests. The validity of the Boroughs Ordinance is being at present questioned in a test case before the Supreme Court and we hope similar will be the case with this Ordinance also. Unless the Boroughs Ordinance, Townships Ordinance and similar laws discriminating against and humiliating the Indian community are also dealt with by the ensuing Conference, no lasting settlement can be arrived at between the two countries. The Minister of Justice who has made himself notorious by his anti-Indian utterances, is never tired of avowing his squeezing-out policy. In a recent speech, he is reported to have said that if the coming Conference was not going to solve the problem, he would repatriate all those who could be induced to submit themselves to that operation and throw the rest into locations from which they would not be allowed to get out. We learn also from the Natal Advertiser that the Indian employees in the South African Railways are being ruthlessly reduced in numbers. Out of hundred who were employed in Maritzburg, only twenty-five are now retained in service, while at Ladysmith Indians with long records of service to their credit have been dismissed suddenly. It is said that the retrenchment in Indian staff is effected in order to give room to Europeans, the Asiatic employees being used for the performance of duties "which are of such a nature that they cannot be carried out by Europeans". All this is certainly not conducive to a peaceful atmosphere for the Conference.

Indian Labour in Ceylon: It is announced that the Standing Emigration Committee considered the question of the improvement of the condition of Indian labourers in Ceylon, but has not yet arrived at a decision. Apparently, the tentative proposals of the Ceylon Government for improvement of the condition of Indian labourers in regard to education, medical relief, standard wages etc., were before the Committee. The Committee will do well to carefully scrutinise the proposals and consider the problem in all its aspects before coming to a final decision. The report recently submitted by Mr. Ranganathan, the Agent of the Government of India in Ceylon, on the working of the Indian Emigration Act, for 1925, depicts the wretched condition of the Indian labourers there and should serve as an eye-opener to the Government of India. The labourers have been literally lured away by alluring prospects held out to them by professional recruiters. They leave their hearths and homes in the full belief that they would be able to better their condition by working on some estates there, only to find that the climate is not in any way favourable to their remaining in the island for long. Ill-health caused by inclement weather, meagre clothing and bad nutrition keep them, for the most part, away from the working plantations. The wages they get are far below the average living wage, and their irregular distribution over good and bad months affects them adversely in most of the months. The housing arrangements are unsatisfactory in the extreme; there are no adequate facilities for medical relief; the children of the labourers are, in many cases, left uneducated and the difficulties caused by ill-health, inefficiency and low wages compel them to incur debts to supplement their meagre monthly income. Much difficulty is also caused to them by their ignorance as to the purchasing power of the rupee in Ceylon which is less than that of the rupee in India. To improve this regrettably miserable lot of the Indian labourer, Mr. Ranganathan makes some valuable suggestions in his report. He urges upon the authorities that adequate legal provision should be made early to fix the number of persons who may occupy a room, and to prohibit the allocation of more than one family in a single room. He further suggests that free and compulsory education should be imparted to the labourers' children, as also the prohibition of children below the age of ten from being employed. On the question of a standard wage, Mr. Ranganathan gives some useful information regarding the wages in some of the estates. He is of opinion that the proposed standard rates should not only push up the prevailing rates but should also give the labourer a living wage even in bad months.

A Welcome Announcement: We are glad to see from a question put by Mr. Rangachariar in the Assembly, that the Government of India is in correspondence with the Secretary of State, in the matter of amending the law so as to enable Vakils and Pleaders to be appointed to the position of permanent Chief Justices in Indian High Courts. The disqualification attaching to this class of practitioners has been already done away with in the case of the Privy Council, and we do not see why the anomaly should persist in India. Sir Alexander Muddiman doubted whether there is any wide-spread discontent in the country on the subject. Surely, he ought to have known, as a responsible member of the Government of India, how keenly the public have felt when recently the claims of some eminent High Court Judges for the permanent posts of Chief Justice were passed over, simply because they did not happen to be Barristers.

Sound Advice to Social Workers: We have much pleasure in calling particular attention to the short article in this issue in which Dr. Clifford Manshardt enunciates some sound principles for the guidance of social workers. We heartily endorse every one of them as the result of our own experience in the field. We may add that these principles apply equally to the industrial, political and educational fields. In fact they are the fundamental principles of all ameliorative work.

The Currency Bill: We are glad that the Legislative Assembly with the consent of Government postponed the consideration of the Currency Bill which proposed to give effect to a part of the recommendations of the Royal Commission, to the next Assembly. This will enable Government to formulate their whole currency policy and the country to pronounce a considered opinion on it.

Lala Lajpat Rai: Lala Lajpat Rai, who recently returned from Geneva, has resigned from the Swaraj Party and is understood to be co-operating with Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to form a new party. Lalaji has declared that at the forthcoming elections the best men should be returned irrespective of party politics.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n900/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.
BOMBAY, AUGUST 28, 1926.

THE SABARMATI MOVEMENT—II.

The Gujrat Vidyapith is the most ambitious of the Sabarmati institutions. It was intended to be the head and centre of the system of national education which was instituted in the wake of the boycott of educational institutions recognised by the Educational Department of Government. This boycott was the most sensational of the several boycotts of the Non-Co-operation programme. It was also the first to collapse and in its collapse it involved all the other boycotts. Previous national educational institutions accepted the departmental scheme and sought to impart a national bent to it. The Vidyasagar, Ripon and City Colleges in Calcutta, and the Fergusson College in Poona are the oldest attempts in this direction. Then came the national or rather denominational institutions such as the Arya Samaj schools and colleges, and the Hindu and Moslem Universities at Benares and Aligarh, and the institutions of the Theosophical Society. The "national education" of the Non-Co-operation movement, on the other hand, wholly and totally and contemptuously rejected the departmental system as the breeding ground of subservientality, and aimed at setting up a new system opposed at all points to it. In the height of Non-Co-operation, considerable number of national schools sprang up in different parts of the country, but they have mostly either disappeared or sought entrance into the official system. The Gujrath Vidyapith itself has been steadily declining in numbers and a committee has recently reported on its future. As it is at present, it reminds one of a building so much as the stump of an electric standard in the middle of a plot of land from the rest of which it has been removed for filling up lowly places elsewhere. A large unfinished white building, in the form of a hollow square, about two furlongs from Sabarmati Ashram, houses the Vidyapith. There is accommodation for perhaps two hundred students, but there are only sixty now, and the empty rooms give the institution a deserted appearance. A corner of the building is devoted to research work among ancient manuscripts. Some valuable publications have been issued from this department of the Vidyapith. One felt that this was the work most congenial to the atmosphere of the institution and that it would, indeed, be most fitting as its central purpose. As a research institute, the Vidyapith would be a valuable addition to the all-too few post-graduate institutions we have in the province and the country. Research in agriculture and cotton-spinning and weaving, for which there are ample facilities, may be allotted to the institution, as well as research in ancient manuscripts. Advanced students from the official Universities will be attracted to the Vidyapith to carry on post-graduate work, and their presence will supply what is now a distinct want in the atmosphere of the place. The air of isolation breeds an air of antagonism which is as unnecessary as it is out of place. A small number of students is a distinct advantage in a post-graduate institution, where guidance is more essential than lectures. The Vidyapith still retains a trace of the spirit of elation in which it was born and which, in the completely altered state of things, seems somewhat forced and artificial. It has a great future as an institution for advanced studies, but not as the Non-Co-operation counterpart of the ordinary Arts College affiliated to the Bombay University. A youth who has passed through a recognised University with credit will derive great benefit by a course at the Vidyapith. His education qualifies him to understand and appreciate the purpose of the Vidyapith. We would advise University students, especially those who take up sociology, to spend some part of their vacation at the Vidyapith where, we were given to understand, they would be welcome.

A brief notice of the Satyagrahashram which is the power-house for the institutions described above and in last week's article, may close these sketchy observations. The soul of the Ashram is, of course, Mahatmaji. From his hermitage at the centre of it he watches over and inspires every detail of its operations. There are about 250 persons in residence and to them all he is friend, philosopher and guide. He also acts as their medical adviser, though we fancy they are not obliged to follow his prescriptions. Fasting occupies the first place in Mahatmaji's therapeutics. It does not necessarily mean that starvation in all cases; it may be semi-starvation or two-quarter starvation according to the requirements of each particular case. Next to fasting, spinning is considered as an all-round antidote to spiritual as well as physical ailments. Spinning as an empty ritual we have seen also, tends to result in superstitions. Among the residents of the Ashram are a Chinese scholar, an Englishman and a German. The majority are Hindus but there are also a few Mahomedans. The Ashram recognises no distinctions of race or creed, and is equally open to women as to men. Only all are expected, speaking under correction, to eschew fish food, to do some amount of manual work, and to make themselves serviceable in a general way besides attending to their own special department of work or study. Khaddar is of course the rule. It is not perhaps obligatory but every person of sensibility feels that it would not harmonise with the surroundings to wear anything else. Plain living and manual labour are the visible features of life in the Ashram. Much of the thinking is now done by Mahatmaji and it is, we need hardly say, of a very high quality. But it may be hoped that the other residents also are cultivating the habit and not allowing their minds to rust amidst the routine of daily living. A few hours at the Ashram had an astonishingly refreshing effect upon one visitor. But it is impossible to imagine the whole of India forming one big Satyagrahashram after the model of Sabarmati. Such settlements are needed to work out ideas and ideals which should inspire the life of the outlying and to train men and women who will go forth as missionaries of plain living and social serviceableness. They are also valuable as centres of energy at which the workers on the plains may from time to time gather strength and courage. But their efficacy depends on one condition. It is that they should find a Mahatma Gandhi.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n901/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

EDUCATION IN INDIA.

The annual review of the progress of education in India for 1924-25 just issued by Mr. Richey, Educational Commissioner with the Government of India, describes the year as one "of steady but uneventful progress." A study of facts and figures, however, discloses that this is not really the case. In 1921, 5·1 per cent of the male population of British India and 1·1 per cent of the female population were attending recognised schools. The corresponding figures in 1925 are 6·05 and 1·24 respectively. These figures, however, do not take into account the increase in the population of British India since the last census was made. The progress, therefore, is practically nil except for a very small increase in percentage. The review itself admits that at the present rate of progress it will take at least forty years more to collect into school all boys of school-going age, who form about 15 per cent of the population. Again, there are still thousands of villages unprovided with schools and there are millions of parents who do not send their children to the schools provided at their very doors, while compulsory education has as yet made little headway. It is stated that progress during the last four years has been delayed by the "need for economy and political events." By political events is probably meant the opening of national schools in several parts of the country as a result of the Non-Co-operation movement and the throwing out of grants for nation-building departments owing to the obstructive tactics of the Swarajists as in the C. P. and Bengal. This, of course, is to some extent true. But the plea of economy is a favourite argument with Governments. Government could find enough money to pamper the Services, but not enough to provide for education. Government will take shelter under the fact that education is now a transferred subject under the control of Indian Ministers, but what can Ministers do when their departments are being starved?

The total expenditure by Government on education in India represents only four annas per head of the population, a thing that will never happen in any country that has a deciding voice in its administration. The percentage of total expenditure on education borne by Government has declined from 48·9 to 47·9 while contributions from fees have risen from 21·8 to 22·4. The number of recognised institutions for girls and the number of pupils, show some increase, but the increase in the attendance at schools of boys is just ten times the increase in the case of girls. The number of high schools increased during the year under review from 2,421 to 2,530, a large increase occurring in the Punjab where, it is stated, the Government, in accordance with its policy for equalisation of educational facilities, is opening high schools in backward areas where no private agencies are available to found or manage schools. The increase of nearly one thousand Mahomedan boys in the number of students reading in arts colleges is a matter for satisfaction, but the community has still much leeway to make up. In Bengal where more than half the population is Mahomedan this community supplies 50·5 per cent. of the attendance at primary schools, but only 12·9 per cent. of the attendance at arts and professional colleges. In the Punjab the position is somewhat better. Mahomedans here form more than half the population. They supply over 50 per cent. of the attendance in the primary schools, and about 33 per cent. of the students at colleges. Most provinces report a satisfactory increase in the number of scholars belonging to the depressed classes. For example, Bihar and Orissa show an increase of 51 schools for untouchables and of no less than 50 per cent. in attendance at such schools. Even more satisfactory is the fact that many of these children are now admitted into ordinary schools in Madras. The number of Adi-Dravida and Adi-Andhra children reading in ordinary schools increased by 50 per cent. to about 13,000. This clearly shows that the prejudice of caste-Hindus against the untouchables is gradually dying down. An increase in the number of scholars resident in hostels and boarding houses is also recorded. But the review dwells upon a disquieting phenomenon, namely, the educational waste which occurs in the country. It is observed that while the figure for enrolment in recognized schools increased by 513,778 during the year, nevertheless, an increase of 360,000 boys in the first primary class was accompanied by an actual decrease in the numbers attending the fourth primary class. Only one girl out of every five admitted into school reaches this stage of education, which may be held to connote literacy, i. e., the ability to read and write which will rapidly disappear if not exercised. This means that many relapse into illiteracy. Such waste is indeed deplorable and only a thorough system of compulsory education can bring about a satisfactory state of affairs.

SOME PRIMARY PRINCIPLES OF SOCIALIZATION.

( By Dr. Clifford Manshardt, Ph. D. )

The goal of social effort is to bring about such changes in the attitudes and structure of society that conflict, competition, and the external things that appear to keep men apart will disappear or will be diminished to such an extent that all men may dwell together in unity and solidarity. The family ideal thus comes to underlie the sociological conception of society.

If the social structure is to have for its corner-stone the fundamental truths of brotherhood and good-will, it is highly essential that social workers themselves carry on in accordance with these truths.

Accordingly, I am setting forth ten primary principles of the utmost simplicity for the guidance of the social worker in his everyday activity. They are principles arising out of experience, principles that have been found to reduce conflict and to bring about a wider measure of co-operation.

1. Completely worked.out programmes to be applied in any situation have little chance of success. People differ in temperament. Their needs and desires differ.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n902/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

They live in varying environments and make varying responses to their environments. A programme to be effective must grow out of community need.

2. The first step in meeting a new situation is to investigate, to become acquainted with the facts. Use your eyes, ask questions, obtain all the information that is possible, and then set to work upon the basis of this information.

3. Be content to move slowly. It is better to take the necessary next step and to do that well, than to try to make sweeping changes all at once.

4. Have faith in the educational method. Propaganda gets things done, but the most lasting results are achieved through the sure, steady working of the educational method.

5. Do not place too much faith in external equipment. Showy buildings are no guarantee of social progress. The fact that people are being socialized is of more importance than any external equipment.

6. People are always suspicious of an outsider. You must win your way by the strength of your own character and by the vitality of your ideas.

7. True socialization is inclusive. A place is found for everybody. It is only thus that the individual learns to think in terms of the group.

8. Be slow to antagonize. It is better to attempt to win the co-operation of minorities than to override them. Some point of contact will surely be found. Direct attacks upon cherished ideas only serve to build up defense reactions and to still further postpone the process of socialization.

9. Think in terms bigger than yourself. Remember that the welfare of the group is of more importance than the success of your particular pet plan.

10. Do not be afraid to let others get credit for the things you suggest. The important point is that these things are being done.

—:o:—

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS IN THE HILLS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

There are some marriage systems prevalent in some of our hill tribes. Our religious and political leaders, undoubtedly, do a lot to wipe out these blots from amongst us, but as a prophet is little valued in his own country, there is no or very little change in the system.

In spite of the renowned sanctity of these Uttara Khanda, where our great Rishis and Munis spent days and nights under sheltering trees near sacred rivers and in the unseen caves of the Kailas mountains meditating upon the deep religious problems, we find that there are now existing such things as would pain the heart of a true lover of country. These beautiful and sacred mountains, which surround and safeguard the sanctity of Badrinatha, Kedarnath, Gauri Kund and the like Maths and temples, have salient messages for pilgrims coming from far ends of the country, but we who live among them and die in them pay no attention to their holy messages which they give us for the great Rishis of old.

Not very long ago I happened to stay in a village where a matrimonial ceremony was being solemnised. By chance I happened to see the bridegroom on whose face I was able to detect some signs of disagreement. I emboldened myself to inquire of him the reason of all that at such a happy occasion and he very frankly told me that the bride's father demanded one thousand rupees cash as the cost of his daughter. I was greatly astounded at this. Next day I found that the bridegroom's father had to pay the sum demanded. There was another wedding taking place in an adjoining village and on inquiry I found that a contract for Rs. 500 was made between the parties.

I was not very sorry for demanding a certain amount of money in the transaction, but I was sorry for the attitude of the father for his daughter and also for the unfortunate future that loomed over the girls that were sold like cows and goats.

The story of such girls is not finished here. The cost of a girl varies with her age. The older the girl the higher the price rises. But those girls who are married at quite an early age under such give-and-take business have the worst future. That after they are grown-up, in ninety-nine out of hundred cases, there arises a disagreement between the husband and the wife, is a thing that requires no comment. The husband buys another wife by borrowing money or by selling his property and thus leaves nothing for his posterity and poverty is the outcome. The neglected wife runs away from his house. She cannot go to her father, for he has no money now to pay back to her husband, and the husband has bought her, so he will try to keep her as a servant. But she would naturally abhor the very idea of this degradation and so she runs away from the house, either to commit suicide or to become a prostitute. The outcome here is demoralization—loss of soul.

These and many other customs are not uncommon in the lower classes of people. The birth of a girl in certain families is a glory, for she is sure to bring money to her parents; while the son sometimes becomes a regular burden to poor people, for they cannot buy a wife for him.

There are many other things that we do not wish to hear of, but they cannot be avoided unless we are willing to wipe them out from our midst. I wish something could be done for the eradication of such evils and thus these holy hills may attain their past glory and may restore their exalted holiness which was implanted here by our great leaders in the golden years of the past.

I hope our leaders will give their kind attention to the selling business of girls and will before long bring such steps as will establish real happy homes.

Dwarahat, Yours etc.,
Aug. 20th, 1926. MANGAL SINGH.

INDIAN FABIAN SOCIETY.

ITS FUNCTION AND CREED.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

For sometime past the conviction has been growing in the minds of many Indians that the time has come when this country should fall into line with the progressive nations of the world in their onward march towards Social Democracy and International Solidarity. There is some divergence of opinion as to the methods by which

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n903/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

this supreme ideal is to be attained but it is coming to be realised by a growing number of people more and more clearly year after year that an enduring edifice of national and international reconstruction can be erected only on the basis of mutual love and general consent. To unite people in all parts of India who hold this view into a compact body, furnishing them with a common platform and serving as a point of focus to their public activities, is the function of the Indian Fabian Society.

The Society has adopted the following creed at its meeting on 25th July 1926 :—

(1) The Indian Fabian Society consists of socialists.

(2) It aims at reorganising Society in all departments of life on a democratic basis.

(3) It will work for equitable distribution of wealth which will secure to all persons, irrespective of their race, caste, creed or sex, equal rights of citizenship and equal opportunities for development.

(4) It stands for public ownership and control of land with equitable consideration of established expectations and due provision as to the tenure of the home and the homestead; for the transfer to the community by constitutional means of all such industries as can be conducted socially; and for the establishment as the governing consideration in the regulation of production, distribution and service, of the common good instead of private profit.

(5) It advocates the settlement of all international disputes by arbitration.

(6) The Society will work for the attainment of its objects by educating the public on social, economic and civic questions and by purely constitutional methods.

It may be added that No. (4) has been taken from the basis of the British Fabian Society.

Those who agree with our objects and policy and wish to join our Society are requested to write to the undersigned (Honorary Secretary, Indian Fabian Society, Royapettah, Madras).

Madras, Yours etc.,
August 1926. S. M. MICHAEL.

THE INDIAN CURRENCY BILL.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

There is one point connected with the controversy now in progress all over the country over the Indian Currency Bill which requires to be elucidated and emphasised. There are some persons—notably a section of the Bombay merchants—who advocate a reversion to the sixteen pence rate. It is well-known that the rate has steadily stood very near eighteen pence during the past two years, and the Budget of the Government of India has been framed on the understanding that the eighteen pence rate would be maintained. It is also well-known that the annual outlay incurred by the Government of India on account of remittances to Great Britain and other foreign countries in the shape of pensions, salaries and the cost of machinery, stores etc., imported into India runs into several crores of rupees. If the exchange rate be fixed at sixteen pence there would be such a very serious dislocation of the finances of Central Government as to compel it to have resort to additional taxation to meet its liabilities. It is clear that without raising money to the extent of a couple of crores of rupees by additional taxation it would not be possible to maintain financial equilibrium in the country. Now no one in India favours additional taxation of any sort at the present moment. On the contrary every body is anxious to see the existing taxation reduced as much as possible. I am neither an economics scholar nor a financial expert. But as a citizen I ask those who endorse the suggestion for a sixteen pence rupee to explain how they would maintain the existing equilibrium in the Budget without having resort to additional taxation.

August 1926. Yours etc., CITIZEN.

—:o:—

AN INTER-CASTE WEDDING.

A correspondent writes :—An interesting wedding took place at Madras on Sunday evening between Sreemathi Saguna Santosh, student, B. A., Senior, Queen Mary's College, Madras, and Sri Tarakam, B. A., of the L. T. Class, Rajahmundry. The bridegroom belongs to a respectable Brahmin family of Pithapuram and is the nephew of the late Dewan to the Maharajah of Pithapuram (Mr. Mokkapati Subbarayadu, B. A) The bride is a convert to Christianity and is the foster-daughter of Sir R. Venkataratnam. The wedding was solemnised at the Persian Restaurant, Royapuram. There was a choice gathering of friends and sympathisers, prominent amongst whom were, Mrs. Venkata Row of Adyar, Mrs. Somananda Row, Miss Vasundhara Devi, B. A., Mr. Shankar Singh, M A., of the Presidency College, Mr. R. Surya Row Garu, B.A., B L., of the Religious Endowment Fund, Mr. Muddukrishna, B.A., of Rajahmundry, Mr. T. Rajagopala Row Garu, B. A., Editor, South Indian Research, Mr. Subba Row Garu, Sub-Editor, Swarajya, Mr. M. V. N. Subba Row Garu, Principal, Hindu College, Tinnevelly, etc., etc. Several students of the Queen Mary's College, Presidency College and Medical College were also present. Messages of congratulations and blessings were sent by Messrs. P. Ramaswami, M. A., of Cocanada, Mr. G. S. Prakasa Row, M. A., of Hyderabad, Mr. M.V. Krishna Row, B.A., of Vizagapatam and Mr. G. Venkata Cholam B.A., of Anantapur. Those assembled were impressed with the unique nature of the wedding. To start with invitations were sent over the names of the bride and bridegroom. The ritual was the simplest and the most rational and unconventional ever gone through. A few sympathisers who were present were requested to officiate, but as no one was forthcoming the following programme was announced and gone through, 1. Hymns 2. Mutual declarations of bride and bridegroom, 3. Exchange of rings and garlands, 4. Hymns and prayers by bride and bridegroom, 5. Hymns. At the close of the function the bridegroom announced it to the public that the marriage will be registered under the Civil Marriage Act and that intimation was accordingly given that very morning to the Registrar of Marriages at Cocanada. Mr. Tekumalla Rajagopala Row Garu, B. A., made a short speech in the course of which he mentioned that it is essential for every love marriage to be characterised by individual choice and freedom and that this particular marriage emphatically symbolised both. He hailed it as the type of marriage that progressive humanity should adopt in future, and congratulated the bride and bridegroom on their courage and sacrifice. Tea and refreshments were served to the guests and

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n904/mode/1up

1926 -Indian Social Reformer Vol 36 (882)

realpatidar.com

the night there was also a dinner at which Mr. Shankar Singh offered Grace.

After dinner the bride gave a musical entertainment to the party.

It is noteworthy that many extolled this wedding between two educated adults of different communities as an example of great social reform deserving the praise and sympathy of all progressive India.

THE ANDHRA RESPONSIVE CO-OPERATION PARTY, RAJAHMUNDRY.

A correspondent writes:—

A meeting of the sympathisers and supporters of the Andhra Responsive Co-operation Party was held recently in the Hindu Samaj Hall at Rajahmundry. Mr. Bheemasankaram, in opening the proceedings, traced the growth of the National movement and the causes which gave rise to the Responsive Co-operation Party led by Lokamanya Tilak's disciples and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. Then the convener, Mr. Yoganandarao, read letters received in reply to the invitations sent from prominent people. Among them were letters from N. Subba Rao Pantulu from Bangalore, Dewan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao Pantulu of Ellore, B. Shivarao of Adyar, Editor, Paschimandhra, and others.

Then the following resolutions were passed:

That a Party styled as "Andhra Responsive Co-operation Party" be formed with Rajahmundry as its head-quarters comprising all the Andhra Districts (including the Ceded Districts) and that the said Party do carry on its work as a Party within the Indian National Congress and working in collaboration with the All-India Responsive Co-operation Party.

That the membership of the Party shall be open to every person who is otherwise eligible and signifies in writing his or her acceptance of the manifesto setting out the principles and the policy of the Party. That the Provisional Committee be authorised to enlist members and do the needful. Mr. N. V. Yoganandarao, B.A., B. L., and Mr. Gadepally Krishnamurty, B.A., B.L., were elected as Secretaries. The meeting was closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the President and the members present.

UNTOUCHABILITY.

Mahatma Gandhi writes in a recent issue of Young India:—

A friend has sent me a gist of what appears in the Southern vernacular press from the pen of a learned Pandit. He summarises the Pandit's plea for untouchability in this fashion.

(1) "The fact that once Adi-Shankara asked a Chandala to be aloof from him, and the fact that Trishanku when he was condemned to be a Chandala was shunned by all people, prove that untouchability is not of recent growth.

(2) "The Chandalas are the outcastes of the Aryan society.

(3) "The untouchables themselves are not free from the sin of untouchability.

(4) "The untouchables are so because they kill animals and because they have constantly to do with flesh, blood, bones and night-soil.

(5) "The untouchables must be isolated even as slaughter-houses, toddy-shops and houses of ill-fame are or should be.

(6) "It should be enough that untouchables are not denied the privileges of the other world.

(7) "A Gandhi may touch these people but so can he fast. We may neither fast nor touch the untouchables.

(8) "Untouchability is a necessity for man's growth.

(9) "Man has magnetic powers about him. This sakti is like milk. It will be damaged by improper contracts. If one can keep musk and onion together one may mix Brahmans and untouchables."

These are the chief points summarised by the correspondent. Untouchability is a hydra-headed monster. It is therefore necessary, each time the monster lifts its head, to deal with it. The stories told in the Puranas are some of them most dangerous, if we do not know their bearing on the present conditions. The Shastras would be death-traps if we were to regulate our conduct according to every detail given in them or according to that of the characters therein described. They help us only to define and argue out fundamental principles. If some well-known character in religious books sinned against God or man is that a warrant for our repeating the sin? It is enough for us to be told, once for all, Truth is the only thing that matters in the world, that Truth is God. It is irrelevant to be told that even Yudhishtira was betrayed into an untruth. It is more relevant for us to know that when he spoke an untruth, he had to suffer for it that very moment and that his great name in no way protected him from punishment. Similarly, it is irrelevant for us to be told that Adi-Shankara avoided a Chandala. It is enough for us to know that a religion that teaches us to treat all that lives as we treat ourselves cannot possibly countenance the inhuman treatment of a single creature, let alone a whole class of perfectly innocent human beings. Moreover we have not even all the facts before us to judge what Adi-Shankara did or did not do. Still less, do we know the meaning of the word 'Chandala' where it occurs. It has admittedly many meanings, one of which is a sinner. But if all sinners are to be regarded as untouchables, it is very much to be feared that we should all not excluding the Pandit himself be under the ban of untouchability. That untouchability is an old institution nobody has ever denied. But if it is an evil, it cannot be defended on the ground of its antiquity.

If the untouchables are the outcastes of the Aryan society, so much the worse for that society. And, if the Aryans at some stage in their progress regarded a certain class of people as outcastes by way of punishment, there is no reason why that punishment should descend upon their progeny irrespective of the causes for which their ancestors were punished.

That there is untouchability even amongst untouchables merely demonstrates that evil cannot be confined and that its deadening effect is all-pervading. The existence of untouchability amongst untouchables is an additional reason for cultured Hindu society to rid itself of the curse with the quickest despatch.

If the untouchables are so because they kill animals and because they have to do with flesh, blood, bones and night-soil, every nurse and every doctor should become an untouchable and so should Christians, Mussalmans and all so-called high class Hindus who kill animals for food or sacrifice,

realpatidar.com

Link: http://www.realpatidar.com/library
email: mail@realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n905/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

The argument that because slaughter-houses, toddy-shops, and houses of ill-fame should be isolated, untouchables should likewise be isolated betrays gross prejudice. Slaughter-houses and toddy-shops are and should be isolated. But neither butchers nor publicans are isolated. Prostitutes should be isolated because their occupation is revolting and detrimental to the well-being of society. Whereas the occupation of "untouchables" is not only desirable but a necessity for the well-being of the society.

To say that 'untouchables' are not denied privileges of the other world is the acme of insolence. If it was possible to deny them the privileges of the other world, it is highly likely that the defenders of the monster would isolate them even in the other world.

It is throwing dust in the eyes of the people to say that "a Gandhi may touch the untouchables, not so other people," as if the touching and service of 'untouchables' was so injurious as to require for it men specially proof against untouchable germs. Heaven only knows what punishment is in store for Mussalmans, Christians and others who do not believe in untouchability!

The plea of animal magnetism is altogether overdone. The high class men are not all sweet-smelling like musk nor are untouchables foul-smelling like onion. There are thousands of untouchables who are in any way infinitely superior to the so-called high class people.

It is painful to discover that even after five years of continuous propaganda against untouchability, there are learned people enough found to support such an immoral and evil custom. That belief in untouchability can co-exist with learning in the same person adds no status to untouchability but makes one despair of mere learning being any aid to character or sanity.

IMPORTANCE OF PUBLIC OPINION.

Legislation in behalf of social or moral reform, if unsupported by public opinion, or supported only half-heartedly, may prove a deterrent to the progress of the reform, for the promotion of which it is enacted. The fact that this consideration is often urged by those who are hostile to reform and who contend under all circumstances that the support of public opinion is insufficient in quantity or in stability to justify legislation, should not restrain the friends of reform from recognizing the truth and force of the statement.

Lazy and the foolish reformers ask the Government for legislation and think they have discharged their obligation; but reformers who are energetic and wise set themselves to the task of educating and arousing public opinion to regard the reform as important and to demand its adoption.

We are thinking especially of the reforms that are needed in regard to the drug and drink evils. There is at present in India a most dangerous neglect by friends of the anti-drink and anti-narcotic drug-movements of the elemental need for systematic public instruction on these matters. Temperance sentiment is wide-spread but is not stable. It rests upon a narrow foundation and one that may give way completely unless it is broadened. And what temperance sentiment there is, applies much less to drugs than to drink.

We believe that charas, ganja and bhang, hemp drugs and opium, morphine and cocaine are most deleterious in their effects than alcoholic drink, yet in a public meeting a demand for the suppression of the liquor trade will be applauded by men who listen in stony silence and indifference when the same speaker denounces drugs, and asks for a more severe regulation of their sales. It makes little difference that the political leaders are supporting reform, unless the mass of the people in the town and out in the villages support it; not in effervescent emotion but in stable conviction. The people are the final source of authority in social matters; and unless they uphold it no important social or moral reform can be securely established.

We know how determined and sustained has been the war upon the Prohibition laws in America and how public opinion has withstood attacks that would have been sufficient to win almost any struggle. They have been defeated only bacause public opinion in America was educated on this subject by more than a generation of constant circulation of literature, instruction in the schools and the holding of innumerable public meetings. Here in India we must pursue the same tactics if we are to establish victory over the vicious drink and drug alliance.

As we see it the opportunity to save India from these cruel and vicious enemies is being lost because of inertia produced by over-confidence. The support of the people is assumed instead of being assured by instruction and organization. The liquor interests are wiser than their foes, the patriots. They are assuming nothing and are working day and night to win public opinion to their side. By unceasing repetition of falsehoods and half-truths about American Prohibition, by vast expenditure on liquor advertising, the chief purpose of which seems to be to hold the support of the newspapers, and by numerous other equally questionable practices they are undoubtedly influencing in their favour a considerable body of public opinion. In Lucknow a liquor dealer was elected to the Municipal Board last winter having run against two Hindu gentlemen of good standing. The Temperance forces did not actively intervene in the campaign because they were assured by residents of the ward, supposed to be interested, that there was not a chance in the world of the liquor-dealer winning. In another city of Northern India a British Missionary of considerable personal popularity was defeated as a candidate to represent his ward on the Municipal Board by a country-liquor-seller.—The Indian Witness, Lucknow.

WHAT WAHABISM MEANS FOR ARABIA.

The following statement made by the Wahabi King to a delegate of the Mecca Conference in reply to his outspoken questions on the recent revolution in Arabia appeared in the Hindustan Times:—

The King's Statement.

When I had finished, he said, slowly and quietly, without any hesitation, that in Islam the Wahabis could perhaps be called the Puritans of the religion. They would stand any test and emerge vindicated of any action they might have committed. "I welcome, therefore," he continued, "these remarks which you have made and if you can make known to those who have not had the good fortune to visit this country the real truth, I shall consider that a great service to Islam has been done." He went on:—

You are doubtless aware of what King Husein has done and what he had failed to do. From beginning to

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n906/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

end he was a slave to foreign influences—influences not of Islamic tendencies, but of anti-Islamic tendencies. It is not necessary for me to tell you how he ruled in this city and curtailed the liberties of this nation.

When King Husein decided to fly the country he took over a million pounds sterling worth of gold away with him packed in kerosene cans loaded on 51 camels, leaving to his son Ali a wretched and ruined kingdom. For the last seven years we Wahabis were not allowed to come to Mecca to perform our most sacred religious duties. Our kith and kin from Nejd were beaten publicly in the streets of this sacred city and were spat upon and cursed like dogs in the bazaars. We were not permitted to enter the sacred Haram. We bore all these insults with patience, only praying to God that the strength might be granted to us to win our religious liberty, the birthright of every Mussalman, and I thank God for His merciful consideration that He did at last place the custody of His Holy City in our hands.

When we came here we found grave-worship being carried on all over Arabia. People went to the graves seeking cure for ailments, issueless women wanting children, and others desirous that the thing they were about to put in hand should be successful. The custodians in charge of the graves promised to give the desired health, offspring, and success to all worshippers provided they paid the fee demanded, which, in the case of the well-to-do, was often exorbitant. I ask you, as a Moslem, whether that was according to the Holy Book.

Then there was an abundant proof that wine-drinking, the curse of humanity, was rampant and rife both publicly and privately in this sacred city of Mecca. People had been seen reeling in the streets drunk and insensible. They had been picked up intoxicated within sight of the holy Black Stone. Immorality was rife and slavery existed. Men, respectable men, gave their daughters in marriage for a consideration of money and not for blood or ancestry. When our troops first entered Mecca and also Taif, they could not believe that they were in the fair land of Islam because of the country's moral degeneracy. The men slaughtered were not Moslems. A Moslem is a Moslem if he acts according to the Book, and not because he possesses a Moslem name or because he is of Moslem parentage.

Wahabi Reforms.

I know what has been done by means of propaganda concerning the alleged atrocities which I, or my troops, are supposed to have committed upon so-called helpless people at Taif. But here I may explain that a large number of people in Mecca are motawifs, or religious guides. These men earn their living by conducting pilgrims over the sacred shrines and by helping them to obtain food and necessary comforts during their stay in the Holy City. Unfortunately they are not all of the highest education or morals. They fleeced the poor, ignorant pilgrims from far-off countries, extorted exorbitant sums for the stores which they provided and the little assistance which they gave. They were the chief offenders in respect of shrines where grave-worship was carried on. When I put a stop to all these offences these were the very men who were mostly affected and it is they who are mainly responsible for the anti-Wahabi propaganda. They have told the simple-minded pilgrims wild tales of the destruction of tombs of real sanctity, of theft and roberry, and of the flogging and murder of innocent people. I have not attempted to answer their unfounded and untruthful assertions, preferring to leave it, knowing that those who come here year by year to perform the great and holy pilgrimage will discover for themselves that there is no truth whaever in these wild statements. I am sure that you have seen no such things since you came here.

One of the first things we undertook was the suppression of brigandage. It was a common thing for poor and helpless men and women making the Haj to be pounced upon on their way to or from Mecca, stripped of their clothes and money, and, if they protested, shamefully beaten or killed. The first duty of any ruler of Arabia is to assure to every pilgrim a safe journey to and from the holy shrines, but this was impossible until the wild tribes of the desert had been subjugated. To-day you can journey to and from the Holy City without the least fear of molestation. You can load your camel with gold and go alone anywhere throughout the length and breadth of my dominions without let or hindrance. Perfect safety in travelling is the watchword of my Government.

You have come to attend the great Congress, the first All-World Moslem Congress, and as you deliberate and and discuss the various problems and questions that will arise, I am sure you will come to recognize that it is dominated by the spirit of friendship, of fraternity, kindliness, and brotherly love among all sections of Islam all the world over. It is my desire to show to the whole universe that Mussalmans, be they Negroes or Englishmen, stand on the same footing, can eat together, can live in the same house, can hold the same appointment, can have the same freedom, affection and thought; but I must insist that they conform to the true dictates of Islam if they are to have all these privileges. For the rest there can be no mercy. They only abuse Islam and add no weight to its religion. I have no use for such men, and the sooner they cease to be followers of the Prophet the better.

Suddenly the King stopped short because the clock was striking 12. This is prayer time.

"Will you join us?" asked the King, "and I hope we shall meet again."

I joined in the prayer, and on my way back to our apartments I went to the Haram to the small Black Stone and kissed it thrice.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Lord Sinha's New Appointment: A recent Reuter's message states that the King has approved of the appointment of Lord Sinha and Sir John Power-wallis to be members of the Judicial Commitee of the Privy Council.

Late Mr. R. D. Tata: Death is announced of Mr. R. D. Tata, a partner in the firm of Messrs. Tata & Sons, Ltd., of heart failure in France to which place he went recently for a change

Late Mr. A. V. V. Ayyar: It is with deep regret that we record the death of Mr. A. V. V. Ayyar, C.I.E., Deputy Controller of Currency, Bombay, at a comparatively young age. Mr. Ayyar is well-known in financial circles. He was one of the Secretaries of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance that has recently submitted its report, but he could not proceed to England owing to illness to which he has finally succumbed.

Unemployment in Travancore: A Trivandram message says that as a direct result of continuous agitation on the question of unemployment the Dewan announced at the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 12th instant that a committee would be formed with a non-official majority to look into the question.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n907/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

Indentured Labour From Trinidad: According to an Associated Press of India message about 1000 Indians who went to Trinidad as indentured labourers were brought to Calcutta recently by S. S. Noogli. They are being repatriated at the expense of the Government of India. The first batch of 125 who disembarked recently proceeded by train from Howrah to their native homes.

Grants to Educational Institutions: The United Provinces Liberal Association has contributed (1) Rs. 180 to the Gauri Pathashala, Allahabad, for the grant to five girl-pupils for one year of stipends of the monthly value of Rs. 3 each; (2) Rs. 180 to the Asaharia English School, Allahabad District, and (3) Rs. 180 to a Liberal depressed classes school in Benares maintained by the Arya Vidya Sabha, Benares.

Free and Compulsory Education in Bengal: The Bengal Council has set a commendable example by passing a resolution for the inauguration of a system of free and compulsory education and by making provision for meeting the expenditure in connection with the same by agreeing to the levy of an education cess. A scheme will soon be published by the Government for public discussion.

Madras University Convocation: Owing to a large flux of candidates, about 1,450 in number taking degrees in person this year, the Syndicate of the Madras University held two Convocations on Thursday the 19th, the first at 2 p. m. presided over by the Vice-Chancellor and the second at 4-30 p. m. the same day at which the Chancellor presided. Sir A P. Patro, Minister of Education, delivered the Convocation address.

Increase of Disease and Mortality in Madras: Owing to the increase of mortality in the city of Madras, Government has constituted a Committee known as the City Mortality Investigation Committee with the Director of Public Health as Chairman. The Committee is to study the various causes said to be responsible for rise in mortality in the city and suggest means for bringing about improvement. The Committee has already begun work and is at present engaged in carrying out inspection of various congested localities in the city.

Memorials to Leaders: The Bombay Corporation has granted, free of all charges and taxes, a strip of road in the Hornby Road for the erection of a bronze statue of Dadabhi Naoroji. The Government of Bombay have accorded their sanction to the erection of the statue of Mr. B. G. Tilak on the site of the cremation of his remains on the Chaupati sands, subject among others, to the condition that the terms of any inscription that may be placed on the memorial are first submitted to the Government for approval.

"Kranti:" We are asked to announce that an illustrated Hindi monthly magazine of Non-Brahman Hindu Society of India, intended to create an upheaval and a new epoch in the Hindu religion and Hindu Society, will be published from Lucknow from the coming Dashahra (October 16). There will be 96 pages of the crown octavo size in each number. The annual subscription will be Rs. 3/-only, at reduced price Rs. 2/- only to those who subscribe for it before the Bijya Dashmi. The journal will have absolutely no concern with the Indian political movement.

Western Converts To Hindu Faith: Two Western converts to the Hindu faith, namely, Sister Bhavani and Mr. Kalidas le Page, have recently arrived in Calcutta from America to study Indian philosophy under the guidance of Swami Abhedananda, President of the Ramkrishna Vedanta Society, Sister Bhavani, whose original name was Miss Elizabeth Mayson, is an English lady, while Mr. Kalidas le Page is an American youth of only 16 years. His parents, Mr. Thomas le Page and Mrs. Mary le Page, of California, have adopted the Hindu faith and were the disciples of Swami Abhedananda in America.

South African Indian Deputation:—Mr. Gandhi has received a cablegram from the Indians of Durban asking his advice as to the desirability of sending Indian representatives to India along with the South African Government deputation, and he is now in correspondence with Mrs. Sarojini Naidu and Mr. C. F. Andrews on the matter. The Government of India have been informed that Mr. O. S. Vermooten, M. L. A., will take the place of Mr. M. L. Malan, M. L. A., on the deputation from South Africa which will visit India in September next.

The New Elections: The Bombay Legislative Council will be dissolved on August 31 and elections will have to be completed by December 6. The last day for the nomination of candidates is September 18 and the scrutiny of nominations for the constituencies other than the Presidency European Constituency will take place on September 20, while for the Presidency European constituency the scrutiny will take place on September 24. Sex disqualification for election has now been removed by a necessary regulation made by the Government on the recent decision in the Council, and women are now eligible for election.

Bombay Department of Industries: In view of the re-organisation of the Department of Industries, the Government of Bombay (Transferred Department) have appointed a Committee to consider the future development of the Department. Mr. C. G. Freke, I. C. S, is the Chairman and Lalji Naranji is one of the members. The Committee are asked to report as to what activities the Department should undertake in future, whether in view of the present financial situation of the Government of Bombay any extension of its activities in the immediate future is possible and whether state aid to industries is desirable, and if so to what class of industries it should be extended. The Committee will meet in Bombay. The date and place of the meeting will be fixed by the Chairman.

The Buddha Society, Bombay: With a view to create interest in Buddhism among College Students the above Society will hold an examination about the 3rd week in November 1926. Certificates will be awarded to successful candidates and a prize in books will be given to the first two candidates in order of merit. "The Gospel of Buddha" (by Paul Carus) price Re. 1-4 is prescribed. Books can be had from the Buddha Society. Intending candidates are requested to enlist their names with the Secretary, Buddha Society, Bombay, before the end of September. Commencing from the 29th instant Prof. N. K. Bhagwat, M. A., will read the Dhammapada every alternate Sunday at 8-30 a. m. (S. T) in the Buddha Socety's Room at Nair Cloth Tower Building, Sandhurst Road, Bombay. Those who are interested in joining the reading circle are requested to write to the Joint Secretary of the Buddha Society or to attend on the 29th.

Temperance in Amritsar:—A public meeting was held on the 9th instant at Amritsar in the local Temperance Hall under the auspices of the Amritsar Temperance Society, with Mr. Balmokand Bhatia, Vakil and Municipal Commissioner, in the chair. After some speeches the following resolutions were passed:—1. That public meeting of Amritsar citizens expresses its sincere gratitude to Mr. Waugh, Deputy Commissioner, Amritsar

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n908/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

sar, for rejecting an application for a liquor license to the Spencer's Hotel on Court Road in response to the wishes of the citizens conveyed to him in the form of a resolution of the local Municipality, and congratulates him on having taken this step for the welfare of the Amritsar public. 2. This meeting is also grateful to the Amritsar Municipality for doing its duty by the people, and for its timely recommendation to the Deputy Commissioner to reject the application for license.

Japanese Brotherhood Scholarship :—It is interesting to know that a very unusual scholarship has been awarded this year for the first time, the Japanese Brotherhood Scholarship, which has been given to E. Raymond Wilson, a graduate of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and a graduate student at Columbia University. The scholarship, which carries with it a year's study in Japan, was originated by Japanese students at International House, New York City. The money was raised by Japanese students with the assistance of Japanese residents in that country. Much of the money was raised by the presentation of Japanese dramas in English. The Japanese students felt that the recipient of the scholarship would develop a deeper appreciation of Japanese life and culture and a better understanding of the Japanese point of view. The committee of award included Americans particularly interested in Japan and prominent Japanese residents of the United States.

Skeen Sub-Committee's Return : Sir Pheroze Sethna, member of the Skeen Committee who returned on the 13th instant, interviewed by a press representative stated that it was a wise decision to send the sub-committee consisting of himself, Mr. M. A. Jinnah and Major Zorawar Singh to Europe and America as they have been able to get first-hand information on all the points they were required to look into. He felt confident the materials collected by them would prove very useful. Both Sir Pheroze Sethna and Mr. M. A. Jinnah spoke on the good work done by the Skeen Committee. Mr. Jinnah stated that there was complete unanimity between the three members of the sub-committee who had submitted their report to the main committee. Whatever system India might adopt ultimately its success would greatly depend on enlisting the co-operation of the educational authorities in India. The committee will resume its deliberations at Simla on Aug. 23.

The Punjab Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha : The Hony. Secretary writes : Reports of 345 widow marriages have been received from the different branches and co-workers of the Vidhva Vivah Sahaik Sabha, Lahore, (Punjab) throughout India in the month of July 1926. The total number of marriages held in the current year i. e., from 1st January 1926 to the end of July 1926 has reached 1709 as detailed below :— (1) According to caste : Brahmin 324, Khatri 226, Arora 246, Aggarwal 254, Kaisth 49, Rajput 156, Sikh 181, Misc. 273. Total 1709. (2) According to provinces ; Punjab & N.W.F. P. 1164, Sind 40, Delhi 51, U.P.350, Bengal 64, Madras 6, Bombay 5, C.I. 8, Assam 5, Behar and Orissa 16, Total 1709. (3) Voluntary donation received during the month is Rs. 116 and the total amount received during the year is Rs . 703.

Revolution Against Colour Prejudice : Addressing a meeting in Quinton Hall, Shillong, on August 12th Mr. Jineraja Dasa pointed to the general unrest in the world and said that there was revolution against colour prejudice and the rising tide of colour was fast making its appearance in such western countries as had dark people under their control. The white nation could no longer entertain the right of dominating the whole world and had to change their policy and attitude towards the dark people. The British Government had recognised that India must shortly be allowed to come to the position of a self-governing dominion. The speaker referred to the spread of the Labour movement which was dictating conditions under which labourers of the whole world should work. Besides they had 60 millions of caste people in India who were demanding their rights to be treated as equals. There were three agencies which were working for peace and brotherhood. One was the Theosophical movement, the field of work of which was through religion. The second was international commerce, and the third was political organization in the shape of the League of Nations which was evolving a world method already. The League had done several important works. It had restored the financial condition of Austria and saved Poland and China from serious epidemic.

A Novel Case of Satyagraha : Mr. Manchersha Avari, of Nagpur Flag Satyagraha fame, served in a local firm some seven years ago. He gave up the service due to ill-health. It is alleged the said company owed him Rs. 150, his pay and deposit. Mr. Avari after having served for some months in the Empress Mills gave himself up heart and soul to Congress work. He, however, kept on asking for the sum, now and then, but was told that the money was confiscated according to the agreement. After prolonged correspondence with the company Mr. Avari sent a notice to the company on August 5 that if the money was not paid to him in a week's time with 6 per cent. interest he would resort to civil resistance by sitting at their door without food and water till the sum was paid. The company having failed to comply with Mr. Avari's demand he began satyagraha at 8 a. m., August 12. Some persons tried to persuade him, but he remained firm and continued to sit in rain and wind for the whole day. In the evening at 6 p. m., the Manager of the firm put him in a motor car and brought him to Seth Punamchand's shop. As soon as he was dropped before Seth Punamchand's shop he again went away to the company's gate to resume satyagraha and he continued sitting for the whole night without food and water. Hindustan Times Delhi.

ADVERTISEMENTS

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n909/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

NOW READY

SHRI BHAGAVAD-GITA

DEVANAGARI TEXT

FREE TRANSLATION INTO ENGLISH

A Word-for-word Translation

Introduction to Sanskrit Grammar

BY

Dr. Annie Besant

AND

Babu Bhagavan Das, M. A.

Revised and Enlarged

A Complete word Index added

Pages 320—Index pages 73

Cloth and Gold,... ... ... Rs. 5-0
Cloth and Ink ... ... ... Rs. 4-8
Boards ... ... ... ... Rs. 3-12

Theosophical Publishing House,
Adyar — Madras — India.

SOCIAL REFORMERS

The lives in this series of Natesan's well-known Biographies of Eminent Indians are so written as to give prominence to their social work. The personalities described have taken a leading part in the various public movements of their time but an account of their efforts to reform the Social abuses of their community must prove of especial interest. The following sketches contain copious extracts from their writings and speeches together with their portraits.

1. Mahadev Govind Ranade
2. Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar
3. Professor Karve
4. Behramjee M. Malabari
5. Sir Narayan Chandavarkar
6. Dewan Raghoonath Rao
7. Sasipada Banerjea

Priced at four annas each

All the same in a lot Re. 1-4 only

(Postage Extra)

G. A. NATESAN & CO.,
Publishers,
George Town, Madras.

Remain Up-to-date on Indian and World Affairs by reading

THE PEOPLE

A high class English Weekly Review

OF

Politics, Sociology, Science, Art and Letters edited by

LALA LAJPAT RAI.

Subscription Rates.

| | Inland. | Foreign. |
|---|---|---|
| Annual | Rs. 6-8 | Rs. 10. |
| Half Yearly | ,, 3-8 | ,, 6. |
| Quarterly | ,, 2-0 | |

Mr. C. F. Andrews recently wrote:—

"I am so delighted to see how well The People keep up its high standard and how deeply interesting it has alway been to read while I was away. It is certainly now one o the very best weekly papers in the country. I have got m news from it, while I have been in South Africa, in concentrated form."

For FREE Specimen copies apply to :—

The Manager, THE "PEOPLE,"
Post Box 116, LAHORE.

BELL & CO. LTD.

Tel. Add. "PFAFF." } SOLE AGENTS FOR { Estd. 1921.

STRONG: DURABLE: LIGHT:

Class 11 Family Hand Machine Rs. 90.
Class 31 Tailor Treadle Machine Rs. 140.

BRANCHES ALL OVER INDIA.

Same Price Everywhere.

V. V. THAKUR,
Managing Director,
CARNAC ROAD, DHOBI TALAO,
BOMBAY 2.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n910/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE

Central Bank of India Ld.

(Established 21st December 1911.)

Capital Subscribed... ... ... Rs. 3,76,00,000
Capital Paid Up (30-6-23) ... ... ,, 1,68,00,000
Reserve Fund ... ... ... ,, 1,00,00,000

Head Office :—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.

Local Branches :—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar, (4) Abdul Rehman Street.

Mofussil Branches :—Calcutta, Karachi, Madras, Rangoon Jharia, Amritsar, Lahore, Cawnpore, Delhi, Lucknow, Kasur, Hydrabad (Deccan), Asansol, Chandausi, Hapur Ahmedabad and Secunderabad.

London Agents :—The Lloyds Bank, Ld.

New York Agents :—The Guarantee Trust Co., New York.

Berlin Agents :—The Deutsche Bank, Berlin.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June. 2 % from July to December.

Fixed Deposits of Rs. 5,000 and above for 12 months received at 5 % per annum. For Shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking and Exchange Business transacted at favourable rates.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.
Managing Director.

25-2-25

ALL NERVE

COMPLAINTS

are curable. No need to go to the doctor, he is often expensive, and can only tell you to take

PROF. JAMES'

ELECTRO-TONIC PEARLS

The remedy that gets right down to the bottom of all Nerve complaints. Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Debility, Jaded Nerves, Mental Fatigue, Impotence, Hysteria, all can be cured by Prof. James' Electro-Tonic Pearls. To give a good understanding of how they cure, a FREE SAMPLE will be given to all readers of this paper. Cut out this advertisement and send with 2 Annas Stamps for postage.

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co, Dept. C. J. 13. P. O. 2082, BOMBAY.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

(Established 7th September 1906.)
Incorporated under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.
HEAD OFFICE :
ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.
Branches : CALCUTTA. AHMEDABAD.

Capital Subscribed ..... Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ..... ,, 1,00,00,000
Reserve Fund ..... ,, 78,00,000

London Agents :—The Westminster Bank Ltd.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum from January to June and at 2 per cent. per annum from July to December.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short period @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application." The Bank undertakes Executor and Trustee business. Rules may be obtained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

A. G. GRAY.
Manager.

THE BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, Fort, Bombay.

BRANCHES :—Baramati ... (District Poona).
Nira ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Islampur ... (District Satara).
Karad ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Kopergaon ... (District Ahmednagar).
Belapur... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Dhulia ... ... (District West Khandesh).
Dhondaicha ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Shirpur... ... ( ,, ,, ,, ).
Malegaon ... (District Nasik).
Dohad ... ... (District Panch Mahals).
Kaloi ... ... ( ,, ,, ).
Parola ... ... (District East Khandesh).

AGENCY :—Kolhapur.

SHARE CAPITAL :—
Issued ... Rs. 10,00,000
Subscribed ... Rs. 10,00,000
Paid up ... Rs. 9,99,730

1. The Bank finances institutions registered under the Co-operative Societies Act in the Bombay Presidency, on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

2. Accounts are audited by a special Government Auditor and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the Bombay Government Gazette.

3. FIXED DEPOSITS are received for long and short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

4. SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNTS are opened and Interest allowed at 4%. Rules can be had on application.

5. CURRENT ACCOUNTS are opened at 2½% interest on daily balances not exceeding Rs. 25,000.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA,
Managing Director.

5-1-26.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n911/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

THE BANK OF BARODA LTD.

Under the patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja of Gaekwar.
(Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897).

Head Office:—BARODA.

Branches:—Bombay, Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, Dabhoi, Surat, Petlad, Patan, Amreli, Bhavnagar, Sidhpur, Karjan, Kalol and Kadi.

| | Rs. |
|---|---|
| CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED ... ... ... | 60,00,000 |
| CAPITAL PAID-UP ... ... ... ... | 30,00,000 |
| RESERVE FUND ... ... ... ... | 22,00,000 |

DIRECTORS:

Sir Lalubhai Samaldas, Kt., C.I.E. (Chairman).
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti, (Nagar Sheth, Baroda.)
Sheth Durgaprasad Shambhuprasad Laskari (Mill Agent, Ahmedabad.)
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., M.A., LL.B.
Maganlal H. Kantavala, Esq., M.A. (Agent, The Maharaja Mills Co. Ltd., Baroda.)
Anant Narayan Datar, Esq., B.A., LL.B., A.M. (Columb.) (Sar Suba, Baroda State.)
Dewan Bahadur Harilal Desaibhai Desai (High Court Pleader, Ahmedabad.)
Mr. G. K. Ambegaokar, B.A., (Chief Accountant and Auditor, Khasgi Department, Baroda State.)
Mr. Nawroji B. Saklatwala, C.I.E. (Tata Sons Ltd., Bombay).

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest on sums which do not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application.

8-3-26. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE GUARDIAN

A CHRISTIAN WEEKLY

DEALING WITH SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Published Weekly. Price 2 Annas.

Annual Subscription: Inland, Rs. 6/—
Foreign, 10s. Post free.

Subscriptions and all other communications should be addressed to—

THE MANAGER,
The Guardian,
33/1, Amherst Street,
CALCUTTA.

THE TAMIL NESAN.

The only independent weekly Tamil Newspaper of Malaya which has a very wide circulation all over the British Malaya and the neighbouring countries of Sumatra, Java, Borneo, French-Cochin-China, Burma, Ceylon, Natal and India. Published every Wednesday from Kuala Lumpur, F. M. S.

The cheapest and the best medium of advertisement. Apply for advertisement space to:—

THE MANAGER,
"THE "TAMIL NESAN"
No. 212, Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur,
Federated Malaya State.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS, Ld.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.,
"Bombay House," 24, Bruce Road,
Fort, BOMBAY.

10-3-25 Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

The New India Assurance Company, Ltd.

Head Office:—Esplanade Road, Fort, Bombay.
SIR D. J. TATA, Kt., Chairman.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AUTHORISED CAPITAL ... | ... | Rs. 10,00,00,000 |
| SUBSCRIBED " ... | ... | " 5,93,42,121 |
| PAID UP " ... | ... | " 1,18,68,424 |
| TOTAL FUNDS " ... | ... | " 1,64,01,840 |

FIRE INSURANCE.—At Tariff Rates for all Classes. Cha... schedules prepared. Advice given. Facilities for dealing with total insurance of clients.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS, i. e., Loss of Profits etc., as a result of fire.

MARINE INSURANCE.—The aim is to provide insurance for Merchants on conditions similar to those obtainable at London, the world's largest Marine Insurance Market.

MOTOR CAR ASSURANCE.—Complete cover in every wa... and prompt settlements of Claims.

BAGGAGE INSURANCE at reasonable rates whilst travelling by land or sea

ALL RISKS INSURANCE covering Jewellery and other valuables in any situation.

OTHER CLASSES OF INSURANCE also transacted.

Apply to THE GENERAL MANAGER

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Ltd.
Manager for U. S. A.:—Summer Ballard.
Agencies also at Poona, Calcutta, Madras, Karachi, Ahmedabad, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Colombo, East Africa, etc. etc.

R. J. DUFF, General Manager.

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n912/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

GOLD FOR SILVER

No LOTTERY HUMBUG. No GAME OF CHANCE BLANK RETURN.

As True as Daylight

Spend Re. 1/- and Receive 32

ATANK NIGRAH PILLS

They are in the Words of Users

"Worth the Weight of Gold."

For Nervousness, Indigestion, and for all Mental and physical irregularities.

For a complete catalogue, write to:—

ATANK NIGRAH PHARMACY,

Jamnagar (Kathiawar).

Bombay Office:

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY LIMITED.

卐

Fortnightly sailings between Bombay Karachi and Calcutta, Burma calling at Galle Tuticorin, Colombo and other coast ports according to demand.

For Freight and other particulars apply to

NAROTTAM MORARJEE & Co.,

Agents.

Sudama House, 31, Sprott Road, Ballard Estate,

10-11-26 Bombay.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

[BEGUN IN 1890.]

A NON-PARTY NON-SECTARIAN ENGLISH WEEKLY.

Published every Saturday.

THIRTYSIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

STANDS FOR ALL-ROUND PROGRESS.

OVERSEAS SUPPLEMENT.

With the 3rd issue of every month an Overseas Supplement dealing with the condition of Indians Overseas is issued.

The Supplement is sent FREE to subscribers while others can subscribe for the Supplement alone by paying Re. 1 per annum.

Subscription Rates.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage per annum Rs. 7-8-0 in advance. Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, Rs. 10 per annum. Single copies of the current year, if available, can be had at 2 annas each, exclusive of postage.

Contract Rates for Advertisements.

| Number of Insertions. | 1 Inch. | | 2 Inches. | | ¼ Column. | | ½ Column. | | 1 Column. | | 1 Page. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. | Rs. | a. |
| 13 | 15 | 0 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 |
| 26 | 25 | 0 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 |
| 52 | 38 | 0 | 56 | 0 | 95 | 0 | 136 | 0 | 255 | 0 | 500 | 0 |

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the first insertion and As. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Mr. W. M. Hume in the course of a letter writes: "I find your paper the best one in India to give a summary and interpretation of the events that really matter,—as they appear to a liberal and progressive Indian. I am glad we have a paper like yours in India."

Please Address:—The Manager, The Indian Social Reformer Ltd., Navsari Chambers, Outram Road, Fort, Bombay.

AMRUTANJAN

CURES ALL ACHES & PAINS.

Price 10 Annas a Pot.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMRUTANJAN DEPOT

MADRAS & BOMBAY

realpatidar.com

https://archive.org/details/bk882/page/n913/mode/1up

realpatidar.com

RELIEF

FOR THE

SUFFERING HUMANITY?

We manufacture Artificial Limbs, Trusses, Belts, and apparatus for each and every kind of Deformity.

Expert specialists are always in attendance and patients are examined free of charge.

We also manufacture special chairs for Invalids to move about.

N. POWELL & Co.,

Lamington Road,

BOMBAY No. 4.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

THREE READINGS OF A PALM.

An original Indian Story written by Mr. Oscar S. Surjia Pande. Price Rs. 2-0-0 Postage extra.

REPORT OF THE BOMBAY REPRESENTATIVE CONFERENCE.

Complete proceedings of the Representative Conference held in Bombay in January 1922 with appendices containing Congress Working Committee's resolutions at Bardoli and Bombay, Mahatma Gandhi's ultimatum to His Excellency the Viceroy, Correspondence between the Secretaries of the Representative Conference and the Government, etc., etc. Price Re. 1 (postage extra).

MAHATMA GANDHI.

A brief sketch of his life and public activities with special reference to Non-Co-operation by Mr. K. Natarajan (reprint of articles that appeared in the Reformer). Price annas 8.

A HUMAN DOCUMENT.

By Mr. V. S. Sohoni. The life of a Dhed in Bombay. Reprinted from the Reformer. Price annas 4.

UNIFICATION OR FEDERATION?

A paper read by Mr. K. Natarajan in Poona. (Reprinted from the Reformer.) Price annas 4.

The Doctrine of the Buddha, The Religion of Reason.

BY DR. GEORGE GRIMM.

The English Translation of the German Original which created quite a sensation in the German world. Price 15 shillings or Rs. 10. Only a few copies are available.

Apply to :—

THE MANAGER

The "Indian Social Reformer."

Navsari Chambers, Fort, BOMBAY.

BOMBAY—Printed by Yeshwant Kashinath Padwal at the TATVA-VIVECHAKA PRESS, Parel Road, Byculla, and published by Kamakshi Natarajan for the Proprietors of THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER, LIMITED.

realpatidar.com